THE CITY.

The internal revenue collections yes terday amounted to $9,623.01. The regular monthly meeting of the Omaha Wheel club will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the club quarters at 1313 Dodge street. Yesterday Mrs. Henrietta secured a building permit to erect a brick block of flats on the southwest corner of Twenty-sixth and Capitol avenue. The building is to consist of three stories and a is to have a fine ornamental finish and will cost $26,000. A select social entertainment was held at the residence, 1609 Dorcas street, of Mr. Andrew Carlson, a leading union tailor of this city Sunday evening. A large number of neighbors and friends were present and enjoyed an elegant feast at the hands of Mrs.

A meeting of the German Ladies' School society was held Sunday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Louis Heimrod, and preparations were made for a grand calico party, to be held in Germania hall on the first of hext month. A committee to attend to the matter, consisting of Mrs. Heimrod, Misses matter, consisting of Mrs. Heimrod, Misses Augusta Pomy, Nettie Richards and Emma Andres, was appointed. The ladies have also in contemplation a magnificent leap year party, which will be given before long. The proceeds of both balls will be used for the part of her husband, and there is every indi-cation that the trial of the cause will make

Accommodating Brewers. All but eight of the saloonkeepers in the city have complied with the $1000 liquor license law, thus giving this city about 241 saloons. This number will be a surprise to those who thought the high license would drive a number of liquor dealers out of the business. The fact is, but seven have thus far closed up. Many of those who have paid, however, have been helped by the brewers. It is estimated that Metz brothers have advanced to saloenkeepers, for the purpose, about $7,000, Krug $15,000, and Storz &

Double Wedding.

The spacious residence of B. H. Post, the well-known dairyman on Military avenue, was the scene of a most pleasant gathering on Saturday evening. The occasion was a double wedding, the happy parties being Hermann Sochl and Carolina Spannagal, and Charles Woolanger and Mary Wolf. The coremonies were performed by C. J. Ryan justice of the peace of the Ninth ward. There were forty couples present, many prominent German families of the city and county being represented. A sumptuous repast was furnished by Mr. Post, and the merriment was continued until a late hour. The groomsmen are 'old and faithful employes of the generous host of the evening, and he did everything in his power on this occasion to make the wedding event a joyous one. make the wedding event a joyous one.

For Conspiring Against the "Q."

Information was filed with United States Commissioner Dundy by Assistant United States Attorney Patrick against T. M. Egan, R. Larson, F. A. Squires, R. K. Paxton and Fred Bucter, charging them with conspiring to destroy Chicago, Burlington & Quincy property and assaulting and injuring D. L. Allen, an employe of the same railroad com-pany. Duncy did not care to have anything to do with the case and the writ was issued by United States Commissioner Anderson. Fgan and Larson were arrested and put under bends to appear before the United States court. Both securing bondsmen, they were released.

freshment booths and grassy turf, every thing so remindful of past pleasures by both old and young, are rapidly disappearing. It is doubtful if any more gardens will be established in the vicinity, the scarcity of groves, as well as the $1,000 license making it More Trouble For Lon George

Mrs. Lon George, who lives at No. 613 North Fourteenth street, claims to be the legally wedded wife of Lon George, the man who assaulted County Attorney Simeral in the district court some weeks ago, for which he was sent to jail for sixty days and fined $250, but was still later released by Judge Groff on the representation that George was suffering from a bowel complaint and that it would be dangerous to keep him in jail. These representations were based on an affidavit made by County Physician Keogh, and the judge entered leorge on parole with the understanding that he was to be removed to St. Joseph's hospital for treatment and that if a cure was accomplished he was to be returned to the iail to serve out his sentence.

Last night a carriage drove up in front of the Bes office, and the driver dismounted to allow a well formed woman of attractive appearance, clad in an arry gown of green plush with hat to match, to reach the pave She carried in her hand several parcels, and her eyes were reddened from weeping, and tears coursed down her cheeks. Among the articles in her hand was an evening news-paper, which announced that Lon George was at the home of his wife and mother, at No. 606 North Fifteenth street, where he was being treated for his sickness. The caller in-troduced herself as the wife of the paroled prisoner, and she told the following story, presenting as proofs of her statements, doc-uments which it will be hard for George to explain away if the woman wishes to force her claims, which she expressed herself as being loath to do. After reading the item in the paper, and recovering her composure, the

"My maiden name was Sadie A. Young, and at one time I was a performer on the variety stage. When I was a young girl, and playing in Omaha, I met this man George. He was then a hack driver, and he forced his attentions upon me. I disliked him very much, in fact I spurned him, and even refused to speak to him. Nevertheless, he was persistent in his attentions, and dogged me in my dressing room, importuned me in the theater and followed me on the streets. After I left here he followed me to Denver, and one night while playing in that city I was induced to drink liquor, and I became intoxi-cated. However, I succeeded in reaching my room in the hotel, and went to bed.

SURPRISED AND RUINED.

Upon awakening in the morning I was assumed to find George lying by my side. He had battered down the door to my room and joined my bed. I remonstrated with him, a tussle ensued, and of the rest I do not wish to speak. Appreciating my rum, a compact was entered into whereby we were to return to Omahn, the house in which I now live, No. 613 North Fifteenth street, was to be rented, he was to room there and assist his wife, whose maiden name was Jessie Taylor, in securing a divorce from him, she having previously made an application to the district court, alleging that he had deserted her, was cruel, and refused to provide for her the necessarie of life. George put in a counter charge to the effect that his wife had been guilty of adultery, and all this was true, for at the time she was an inmate of a house of ill-fame in Cheyenne. In the interim George and I made two visits to his mother and sister livin Kewance, Ill., and he to them expressed his intention of marrying me as soon as the divorce proceedings from his wife were granted by the court."

THE DIVORCE GRANTED.

Drawing from the roll of documents she carried in her hand, Mrs. George presented a copy of the decision of Judge Groff in the divorce proceedings. It is dated July 10, 1887, and sets forth "that the charges of desertion, etc., made by Mrs. Jessie George are not sustained, but that the counter allegations of adultery made by George are true and that a divorce is granted him." Upon receipt of this information George resumed his ceipt of this information George resumed his promise to marry Sadie, and on the 16th of fulv last they were married at the home of the mother of George in Kewanee. As proofs of their marriage Mrs. George presents a marriage certificate, duly attested by Rev. S. dist Episcopal church, with the mother and sister of George as witnesses

AN ASTOUNDING REVELATION Gathering her parcels together, Mrs. George, breaking out in sobs, remarked: "I cold him I would make him a good and true wife, and all of these promises I have kept. We lived, apparently, happily together until about three weeks before George got into his nbout three weeks before George got into his present trouble. About that time he came home drunk one night, and said that his divorced wife had come on from Cheyenne, had got him drunk and decoyed him to Council Bluffs, where they were again remarried. I was shocked over the revelations, and he left me. He went to live with the worner, and while I stood and pendered, uncertain as to what to do, he got into that trouble which put him in juil. If I feit so inclined I could send him to the penitentiary, but I hate to. What I want the public to know 's that I am his lawfully wedded wife, and please so announce it in the Bire, as my and please so announce it in the BEE, as my neighbors have been twitting me all day that I was not married to him."

LON GEORGE'S DEFENSE.

A BEE reporter, after the reception of the above developments, was dispatched to the house, No. 600 North Fifteenth street, to learn George's side of the story. The indicated point is a one-story cottage, and a rap at the door brought to the front Lon George, whose attire indicated that of a man sumwhose attire indicated that of a man sum-moned hurriedly from his bed. He was asked if Mr. Lon George lived there, and to this he responded "Yes." Next he confessed that he was Lon himself, and upon being in-formed of the mission of the reporter said: "It is true that I was divorced from the woman I am boarding with at present, and it is also true that I married Sadie Young, from whom I have parted and propose to apply for whom I have parted and propose to apply for a divorce. She is a hard drinker, and has made life unpleasant for me by frequenting wine rooms and getting drunk."

"She says you married your divorced wife in Council Bluffs, what is there in that charge?"

"That's all wrong. We are not married and I am only boarding here until I get well," as the reply.

When Lon became fully cognizant of the importance of the newspaper man's visit he blurted out that he intended sending agents to Mrs. George with a view of silencing her, and begged that nothing of the escapade be said in the newspapers as it might hurt him in his present trouble with Judge Groff.

RETURNED HOME.

Mrs. Pearson's Trip to Chicago and Return with Edlia Erisson. Mrs. Pearson, agent of the board of charities of this city, returned yesterday from Chicago, bringing with her Edllia Erisson, the companion of the Lynch girl who ran away from home a couple of weeks ago. Mrs. Pearson loft here on Saturday last, conveying a legal instrument showing that the mother had given her authority to take temporary control of the child. She was also porary control of the child. She was also furnished with a note to the associate charities, to the chief of police, and to Matt Pinkerton, the detective, whose men found and since the finding have watched the cring girls. One of the detectives accompanied Mrs. Pearson to the home of a Mrs. Cary, a respectable but poer lady and aunt of the Lynch girl where Edilia was informed that she was to come back to Omaha. The girl was opposed to returning to her mother, and said if she were compelled to do so would run away again. When she was told that she was to be cared for by Rev. E. A. Fegelstrom, she made no objection to returning. Mrs. Pearson thought that as the father of the Lynch girl here did not care to have his daughter return and as the latter was living were released.

MASONS AND MASTERS. Men Who Want to Work and Yards

Opening for Labor. It was announced at the contractors headquarters yesterday that seven bricklayers from abroad arrived and applied to Mr. Coots for employment. He had all the men he wanted and sent the strangers to the headquarters, from which place they were apportioned among the contractors throughout the city who were in need of men.

Said a bricklayer yesterday: "I guess there are about fifty of our men employed to-day in the various parts of the city. I don't know that any bricklayers from the outside arrived to-day. I don't think they did. If they did they'll go home again when they find out home yesters and III don't take find out how matters stand. It don't take much money to buy off a man, because if he wants to work he can set at it just as soon as he can get it. We don't interfere with him."

Mr. Baily, the brickmaker, said yesterday that he had commenced to mould in his yard, though it was yet a little early in the season. If a frost should come now it would destroy every brick he might have in his pile. Formerly it was not considered safe to com-mence moulding until about the 1st of May. He had started earlier this year be-cause several of his men were anxious to get back to labor. All of these were members of the Brickmoulders union who told him that they had had enough of unionism and that even with the raise of a dollar last season they had still lost more than they could make in months. One of these men, Mr. Bailey said, had worked for him for eighteen summers. Mr. Collins, of the Nebraska Tile and Pottery company, said that he had four moulders at work at the old rates, which are $2.75 for moulding 6,000 and $3.00 for setting and platting 18,000 brick.

It was also stated that Fred Smith had menced work vesterday in his yard on

term of opprobrium among the 49 min-ors of California.— Gold was sometimes found, after a hard rain on the surface, or just below it. The man who was seen, therefore, with his washing - pan only trudging about in search of such finds was generally considered too lazy to use a rocker or delve down to bottom rock to find the true deposit. Hence, the indolent man, the superficial, the artificial man, was spoken of as a "surface-washer." Such

He simply washes the surface, and if a miracle is not performed by curing him at once, he believes there is no virtue in he preparation. If he only knew that chronic and crippled cases have been cured permanently after forty, thirty, twenty years of suffering, he would, per-haps, as these patients have done, give it an intelligent and patient trial. he is a surface washer," and what he ays about it is superficial nonsense. Not so with the carnest man, who earnestly seeks a prompt relief and a certain cure; he acts according to the directions. For instance: Two years ago Mr. John Ott, Sr. of St. Boniface, Cambria county, Pa., was afflicted with nflammatory rheumatism, in acute form, and was permanently cured, as he testifies in the following: "St. Boniface, February 11, 1887 .- I herewith express my kindest regards to your remedy for its great healing qualities. Two years ago I was taken to bed with inflammatory rheumatisn, and got so bad that one of my legs was paralyzed and swelled up as thick as a bag, burning and painng fearfully. I could not get out of bed nor could I move my leg or let any one touch it for all the pleasures of the world. My son advised me to apply your St. Jacobs Oil, and after two appli-cations I was able to walk. I used half bottle, and have not felt rheumatism In my estimation gold will not compare with it. I am ready to testify (take oath) to the above at any time if Mr. Ott was certainly no superficial manipulator with so valued a remedy.
