The strength in Pullman was due to the granting of an injunction by Judge Gresham in the case of Pullman vs. Wagner regarding the vestibuled train. Stock was bought freely by insiders here and at New York who predict higher prices.

OMAHA LIVE STOCK.

Cattle.

Wednesday, May 2, 1888.

The receipts of cattle to-day fell short of yesterday's receipts by about 700 head. The majority of the buyers made heavy purchases yesterday and they did not require as many cattle to-day. For this reason the market was hardly as brisk as yesterday but about all the cattle offered on sale were taken. The market was a little easier than yesterday and salesmen found it difficult to obtain yesterday's prices unless it might be on something very desirable. The general quality of the cattle was not very extra and salesmen complained of the scarcity of neat, tidy cattle.

Hogs.

There was a slight increase in the receipts of hogs over yesterday but some of the trains came in rather late and five loads arrived after the market had closed. The market was active and about steady at the opening but as the later trains arrived it eased off and closed a shade to 5c lower. The market was weaker on light hogs while the better grades of heavy hogs held up more nearly steady.

Sheep.

There were two loads of corn fed westerns here and sold.
