Having the best commercial rating of any in our line we have access to all the eastern houses' best goods. Never having done business only in this city and with the best of success, we have the effects of no old failures to contend with.

We are favorably known all over the east and west, in fact our out of town trade is immense, and as in the past our straight forward American plan of doing usiness has been most satisfactory to our patrons, so it shall continue to be. We are here to stay, our home is with you, it is a credit to us and to you, our interest is all in Omaha and her people. Thanking you all most vehemently for your past patronage we promise if you will examine our stock and prices you will never purchase elsewhere, a word to the wise is sufficient. A Good Rep rt.

The statement of the auditor of . state of Nebraska for the year ending De-81, 1887, reports the National Life Insurance company, of Vermont, as having written $307,500 new business, dis-continued none. This showing is most creditable for the National, taking into consideration that this amount was written within the last three months of the year, its western office not being opened for business until September, 1887. The western department is under the management of M. L. Roeder.

Brought Back to His Wife.

Mrs. John Lankbine, who lives on Thirtyfourth and Cuming, came to the police headquarters day before yesterday complaining of the strange action of her husband, whom she said had left the house without taking any breakfast, and although she had followed him several blocks, she could not get him to say a word. The last she saw of him he was mearing the river, and she was afraid he con-templated suicide. The police took the mat-ter in hand and found the mysterions acting husband in Council Hluffs and brought him back to his distracted wife. His condition is thought to be due to an overdose of boose.

After that date it will carry only passengers holding first class tickets, to points where the train makes regular stops, between Council Bluffs and Ogden. Such passengers must purchase tickets for seats or berths in Pullman sleepers, before entering the cars.

THE HEADLIGHT.

A Moonlight Night is Hardest on the Nerves of Engineers.

Talk with an engineer in the Mem-phis Appeal: "A headlight ain't of so much use as people think it is. Why, on a moonlight night I would just as soon not have one at all." "Why?"

"Well, it's a curious thing, and I don't know the philosophy of it, but the moonlight being the greater light destroys the effect of the headlight almost entirely, and if it wasn't for its being reflected from some station platform or car on a side track you wouldn't know it was lighted at all. Why, many a time I have gone out on the running board there on the side of the engine around to the front to see if my headlight was still burning," "I suppose then that running on a moonlight night is easier on you than dark nights, because you have a better light and can see further?" said the reporter innocently, "Well, it might be if I was running on a prairie, but in this part of the country we are all the time running through woods or strips of woods where the shadows of trees are thrown across the track, and those shadows are so strong and black that they can't be dissipated by the brightest kind of headlight. You can't tell the difference between a shadow and an object to save your life hardly; you have either struck it or passed it before you could tell which it was."

"Well, that's a new one on me," said the reporter. "I always felt much safer when I was traveling on a moonlight night." "Any engineer will tell you that that is true," was the reply. "What's that?" asked another en-gineer, who had just brought in a heavy freight train and was on his way

I would rather run on any other kind of a night. A man can be deceived so easily.
