Games Scheduled For To-day.

Omaha vs Kansas City at Omaha. Chicago vs Minneapolis at Chicago.

Omaha 8, Kansas City 4.

"Kansas City, Kansas City, beware of the day when Omaha meets thee in battle array."

So sang the prophet of the village at the mouth of the Kaw while the Western association ball team was boarding the train, and the old gem was right. In other words his head was level.

It did not look that way in the first inning, however, as in a time it appeared as though the crimson crannied bird of victory intended to roost with both feet upon the banner of the husters from Kansas City.

But she didn't. Omaha blanked in her half of the first. This is how the runs were made: Cartwright, of Kansas City, promanaged gaily up to the plate and whiped the pig-skin fairly in the face for what appeared to be a home run.

Then, oh, horror! the only Lovett gave a base on balls and the six Kansas Cityers struck so enough. Then Manning made a hit and ran down to second and scored on a very loud error by Shannon, who let Johnson's hit go right between his little toes without stopping it, and Ardner and Manning scored. Then Bradley went out and the score stood 3 to 0.

And then those six little men from Kansas City did get their work in, and the way they shouted gave Lieutenant Wright, of the U. S. A., who sat on the mourners' bench, the shivers.

Not a yell escaped the lips of the audience as the second inning, as both sides were shut out in each half.

But in the third! Lovett led off with a hit and ran down to second on a base on balls, and he was followed by Doran. Conroy flapped his little wings and flew out to Hassamer. Annis hit to Manning, who threw wild to Cartwright, and as soon as the game was in the air, then O'Connell pointed out a triple and Doran scored. Burns went out from Manning to Cartwright and Miller made a single. Shannon picked out the game with a double, and Jones to Columbus, the local mascot, and just naturally hammered out a home run, which brought in Miller a few feet ahead of him.

Then the Omaha end of the crowd shouted and shot, and the six real estate men started to put on their overcoats, remarking as they did so, "It is very cold here."

Both sides failed to score in the fourth, but in the fifth Annis got first on an error of Cartwright and Annis scored. Then O'Connell's out at second, which allowed Burns, who was batting, to get to first. Then he stole second and waited. Miller got a base on balls and Shannon made another hit. Annis and Burns scored. Wilson flew out.

In the sixth Manning made a hit and scored on a triple by Johnson. That ended the run getting, and as soon as the game was finished the Kansas City visiting delegation called a cab and drove straight to the depot.

This is the score:

George Rounds Goes There to Wed the Choice of His Heart. A young lady from the vicinity of St. Mary's avenue and Twenty-fifth street, her solicitous brother and a sympathetic male companion haunted the Union Pacific depot and inquired with some show of eagerness as to the exact time of the arrival and departure of the dummy trains last night.

When the dummy train for the Bluffs came along the party boarded it, and returned later in the evening with the information that the bands had been solemnized, and that their honey moon would be passed there. Then the bride and groom were seen to enter the depot, and the contracting parties are. They are George Rounds, son of the deceased publisher and proprietor of the Republican, and the young lady, Miss Mary's daughter, a pretty and accomplished young lady.

There were five fair beauties and each had an aim. Flora and Edna were the most popular. Flora's suitor was a fashionable dandy; Cornelia's suitor was a bookish man; Anna, ambitious, aspired after wealth; Edna, a practical girl, sought for good health.

So she took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and grew healthy and blooming. Cora's beauty quickly faded; Susan's eyesight failed from over-study; Flora became nervous and febrile in striving after fashion, and a sickly family kept Anna's family poor. But sensible Sarah grew daily more healthy, charming and intelligent, and she married rich.
