gan. A stovepipe passing through the roof was the cause of the fire.

The other alarm was sounded at about 7:50 and called the department to Twenty-seventh and Chicago streets, where a barn owned by C. F. Courtney was in flames.

The alarm was given too late to do any good and the structure was burned to the ground. About $200 worth of hay and grain was also consumed. The total damage is estimated at $500 and the insurance is but $300. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Perhaps on Sunday Next.

The management of the cable Tramway company are bending every effort to get the Twentieth street line in readiness for next Sunday. They have some doubt of being successful, however. The patronage on the "stake" now in operation is quite large, especially in the evenings and on Sundays when people want a cool ride. It is claimed the receipts are largely in excess of what the managers hoped for.

About 7 o'clock in the morning, according to the testimony of a gentleman named Smith, who is a guest at the St. James hotel, a young man was standing on the walk across the tracks apparently thinking of something. The Pinkerton men, two abreast, were marching from their boarding house and when they arrived at the point where the young man was standing it is said that Sergeant Shelly, the commander of the squad, deliberately threatened to annihilate him. The young man still protested and was backed up against a flag shanty and struck with a club. By this time a crowd in the Union Pacific building, and citizens flocked to the scene and armed themselves with coupling pins and announced their intention of wiping out the Pinkertons, who then drew their revolvers. At the outcome might have been no one knows, but at this juncture Officer Robbins appeared, and drawing his revolver ordered the Pinkerton men away. They then sneaked.

The above is the story told by the outside parties, and much of it is corroborated by the police. Now comes the story of the Pinkertons and states that his men under command of Sergeant Shelly were coming down Tenth street, and when at the point indicated they were encountered by some of the Union Pacific employes, who began hurling all manner of vile epithets at them. To the police, the sergeant protested in a wild manner and received in reply another large hunk of abuse. By this time a crowd had collected and Billy East, an employe of the Union Pacific, said to have drawn a revolver at the sight of which the Pinkertons formed themselves into a hollow square, drew their clubs and guns and prepared for a siege when Officer Robbins, of the police force, and Captain O'Connors came up. The latter ordered his men to work and the former dispersed the crowd.

One of the Pinkertons claims to have been hit with a piece of iron and of the others asserts that he was hit with a club.

The above comprises the statements of both sides. Who is to blame cannot be decided but from all reports it would appear that the Pinkerton men acted rather hastily to say the least. The young man mentioned is not a railroad, in fact he is a plasterer from Council Bluffs. He had as much right in the walk as any living man, and no one, not even a police officer, should molest him.

The police say that the Pinkertons were to blame. Citizens, not having any connection with the affair, corroborate this statement. The Pinkertons say they were not. One thing is certain. The men are somewhat excited, and there is trouble brewing. The very presence of the Pinkertons incite those who would otherwise be peaceful to deeds which would not otherwise be committed. Personally the officers and men of the Pinkertons are pleasant, sociable and very agreeable fellows. No one who knows them would believe that they would sanction any unwarranted proceedings on the part of his men.

All agree that the Pinkertons are not needed. No trouble arises except when they are present.
