George Rudio Appeals From a Decision In His Own Favor-The Coming Races-Almost a Fire-Ratification.

Hard to Satisfy.

During the first opening of the real estate oom a dealer in Omaha named Peterson gave George Rudio, of the Manhattan, a safe as commission for selling a piece of property. Afterwards Peterson denied that he ever rove the safe to Hudio, and a suit followed. The legal battle was a hot one, and the case was taken under advisement. It was decided esterday by Judge Deemer. The decision vas in favor of Rudio. Jerry Shea, the dep ity clerk, telephoned Rudio to come down to he court house. When Rudio put in an ap pearance he was informed that the case had one against him. A longer face was never worn by mortal man. His closely clipped hair bristled up with indignation.

The perspiration stood forth en his manly brow and he was as ready to swear as any christian could be. He fropped into a chair and thought. As soon is he could rally from his despair he swore a olg swear that he never heard of so unfair bus swear that he never heard of so untair a decision, and he would spend a thousand doi lars to carry up the case, and win it. He told the clerk that he wanted to appeal it, for he wouldn't stand it. The clerk told him that it would be necessary to file a bond of solving the wanted to appeal it. File it? Of course he would. He had the bend made out, and signed it, and just then his attorney came in. The bend was hunded him to look over, and a smile came over the barrister's face, as he asked George what in the world be was doing appealing a case which had been decided in his favor. The truth was out, and George turned himself around and invited everybody to kick him George rushed to the telephone office and sought to square it all by telling his partner, Sears, to send down to the court house right away a box of the best cigars in the place. After a little waiting, during which time the crowd, as well as the plot, thickened, a box of cigars was brought into the office. There were no takers when the box was opened, for revenue stamps were never wasted on more horrible smellers. George was mad He couldn't see why his partner should send lown any such things as those. He went to the telephone and expressed his mind pretty freely, and insisted on having some cigars sent down which gentlemen could smoke. Soon after a box of fragrant ones arrived. It then leaked out that the offensive box was one of the election supply which was brought up from down stairs and was not sent down from the Manhattan. It was an afternoon of perplexity and trial for poor George. He has made his record as being the only man in the city who takes an appeal from a decision which is just as he wants it.

Bluffs Music Co., 224 Broadway. An Accident, Not Suicide.

The death of Mrs. George Marshall has brought out, as is always the case, the latest vords and acts of the victim of this tragedy. Her life for more than thirty years is before the community, and in it all does not appear a reason sufficient to lead her to an act of self-destruction. The more the matter is canvassed by the friends of the deceased, the more apparent is the absence of any possible motive. This fact, with others that appear, impel a strong belief that the death was not only entirely unpremeditated but purely accidental-this, notwithstanding the fact that the coroner's jury returned a different verdict. These facts appear: Her home and other relations were congenial. She was preparing for a prolonged visit to her daughter, and anticipated this event with much pleasure. There exists nowhere any evidence of insanity, except in the supposition that this last act was a willful one. She was performing her household duties in the ordinary way. The dust cloth was found near the body, showing that she was doing this part of the west when the acceptance in the work when the accident happened. In dusting this room her habit was to cleanse he bureau and the articles upon it, including the revolver which caused the death. It is believed that while she was doing this the wespon in some manner was accidentally discharged. This conviction is very strong in the minds of those who have sought for a probable explanation of this tragic termina-tion of a noble life.

Securing the Hotel.

The hotel committee of the board of trade neld a meeting yesterday afternoon to discuss the situation. On looking over the subscriptions, it was found that several of them were to be doubled in case the Pacific house site was selected. Several parties have promised to give, but their names are not yet on the paper. Two or three wealthy and public-spirited citizens have been out of the city and have not yet been seen. After canvassing the matter thoroughly, it was de-cided that the remaining sum could be raised by this evening, or Monday evening at the least, so that the Chicago syndicate can be notified during the early part of next week. The solicitors will start out this morning with renewed vigor, and it is hoped that the matter will be shortly settled.

The New Directory. It is a very neat little volume published by D. C. Dunbar & Co., of Omaha, and a cursory examination indicates that, while not free from errors, it is above the average by quite a percentage. The general directory shows 463 names listed, an increase of nearly two thousand names over the last directory, in-dicating that at least Council Bluffs has thirty thousand population. There are so many changes being made as to make a yearly directory a necessity, and this comes when the necessity is greatest. It is revised up to the 1st of May.

A CROOK IN THE TOILS. The Leader of a Gang Arrested Last Night. What is regarded by the police as a most important capture was made last night between 11 and 12 o'clock. It has been known for some time that a gang of cracksmen were operating in the city, and notwithstanding the police have been on the constant lookout for them they have succeeded in getting in their work in several places and getting away without detection. For several days past a number of suspicious characters have been shadowed with the hope of nailing the whole party. The fellow now in the toils is about forty years of age, short in stature, of dark complexion, with a full beard. He is agreeable in conversation and apparently well educated. Chief Lucas, who made the arrest, is satisfied that these nocturnal depredations have been committed by an organization of thieves, and that he now has the leader of the gang.

The fellow was found in the neighborhood of Deere, Wells & Co.'s warehouse, and when arrested offered little resistance. He claimed to be a highly respectable gentleman and was greatly insulted at the indignity thus put upon him. He was taken to the station, where he was thoroughly searched. He gave his name as John Pepper, residence Chicago. Upon his person were found a variety of books, papers, etc., such as usually constitute an all around crooks outfit. Among the more suspicious was a sketch book, filled with hasty and partially finished drawings of several buildings in this city. Some of these were so well executed that they were readily recognized by the officers present. These are herewith given that our readers may see what kind of a man the law has in its grasp. The first is crude, and gives no definite idea The first is crude, and gives no definite idea except when taken in connection with the
