Fred Nelson's Attempt to Suicide.

Frederick Nelson, a traveling salesman for Chency Broa., wholesale siik dealers at 180 Franklin street, Chicago, did his utmost to end his life last Tuesday. The Chicago Horald gave the following account of the sad affair: Mr. Saylor, western manager for Chency Bros., sat. chatting with a customer at that hour, and both were startled by two revolver shots in the water cleast, off the rear of the store. Both made a rush for the closet, and, finding the door beited, burst it open just in time to find Nelson swinging himself off on a rape, one end of which was looped about his neek and the other fastened to a heavy hook in the wall. Bleed was streaming from revolver shot wounds in the center of his forehead and right temple. while a smoking E2-callbre revolver was clinched in his right hand. The rope was cut and the weapon wrested from him. He cut and the weapon verseted from him. He handed some letters to Mr. Saylor and then fell back insensible. The patroi was called and he was removed to the Presbyterian hospital. The wound in the forchead had falled to penetrate the brain, but the other is believed to be fattle.

lieved to be fatal.
"He was one of the best known salesmen traveling out of Chicago," said Mr. Saylor. "He had a wife and four-year-old daughter at ms home in Moline, 11. He was formerly a member of the firm of Williamson & Nel-son, dry goods dealers, at Galesburg and Moline. Selling out his interest there he came to Chicago, seven years ago, and traveled for four years for J. V. Farwell, selling silks. Since then he has been with Chency Brothers. He was about forty-two years of age, happily married, had been en-loying a good trade and had been given hand-some raises of salary by the firms he worked for at the end of each year without his asking for them. He was not a drinking man, nor did he gamble. He was, however, of a yery nervous temperament. He returned but a week ago from his vacation at Moline. When in the city Neison boarded at 207 Oak street, but, in his wife's absence, he has been stopping at the Grace hotel. For the last four days he has been rather morese and despondent. I said to him yester lay: 'Cheer up, Fred, and let's go to the ball game.' He declined. I can't imagine what would cause him to kill himself."

A score of traveling salesmen from the neighboring bouses of Marshall Field, Car-son, Piric, Scott & Co. and J. V. Farwell & Co., came rushing in easerly inquiring as to the truth of the rumor. All spoke in the highest techns of the infortunite man and regretted his rashness. "No traveling salesman was better known through the northwest than Fred. He was not what we term 'one of the boys.' He neither drank, gambled, nor was he given to any kind of sporting. He was an even-going salesman, who reflected credit on the craft,' so spoke one of Marshall Field's traveling men.
"Let's examine these letters," said Mr.

Baylor. The first one opened was a telegram addressed to Nelson from his wife, reading: "You sent me $15. What for! No writing The second was a letter on the firm's letter head, reading:

DEAR WIGE:—I sent you $5. You may need it. If I want some later I can get it This was dated July 12 and signed "Yours, Fred." Another letter inclosed in the same envelope with the above, on a firm letter head, was dated July 13 and written in an irregular, almost undecipherable manner in his handwriting as follows: To My Beloved Wife and Bany:—My head aches terribly. I am afraid I cannot live through such another dreadful night. You never would have thought I'd ever come to this. Kiss little Hazel for me. Good by. Your unworthy husband. Figo.

I am unable to without taking medicine. My head has been troubling me. I appeal to you as a friend to see that my wife and babe do not come to want. I am well-known to traveling men throughout the northwest and in New York. They would aid my wife and child rather than see them suffer. I regret to leave my wife and little Hazel destitute. Please see Mr. Cheney and have him pay the balance of my salary to my wife, for she's a noble wo-man. Yours, Free Nelson. J. W. Hall, of the department of silks at J. V. Farwell's, said: "Nelson was a capital salesman; one of the best in the west. He was a temperate man of exemplary habits.

Why, only two days ago he was showing me some plush he was solling and seemed all right then. I can't imagine why such a man should take his own life. He was happily married, thought the world of his wife, was pleasantly employed, held the confidence of his employer and customers alike, and was floubtless the best known silk salesman in Chicago. He got a raise last fall without asking it of $500."

A dispatch was sent Mr. Williamson, Nelson's former partner at Moline, asking him to break the news to Mrs. Nelson. It was stated at the hospital that the unfortunate man could not live until daylight.

Rich for One Day.

"Some years ago, when I was giddy and young," said a prominent traveling salesma .. for a Detroit shoe house to a reporter for the Michigan Tradesman, "I invested a whole, big, elegant dollar in the Crazyana lottery, I never had any luck, but the thought came to buy, and buy I did. If there were but a hundred chances and I had ninety-nine of them the other fellow would win. That's the kind of lottery luck I have! Well, the day after the drawing, on picking up a Chicago Laily, I saw the list of numbers, and number 4162 had drawn the big prize and I held onetenth of that number and was $15,000 better off than I was the day before! Happy! Why, the word doesn't express it—crazy is nearer right! I sent in my grips by express, opened up a basket of champagne for the boys in the hotel, built grand plans of what I would do great trip to the Yosemite valley, then to Europe, would live like a prince! Ah, that was a happy day for me, I assure you! I left for Chicago that same night and headed straight for the place where I had bought the ticket, in order to have them send and cash it for me. Then came the most terrible moment of my like! The intelligent compotor of that Chicago daily had made a blunder—used one letter for the other. The right ticket was 4762, and I was as poor as before. I got to the express company before they had delivered my graps to the him and took the first train back to my work,"

"The Plug Hat Hero."

When the Southern hotel burned in St. Louis recently, A. L. Brockway, a representative of Sargent & Co., hardware dealers of New York, distinguished hinself for his presence of mind and during work in the rescuing of twenty women from the burning building, and as a reward for his bravery the local papers the next morning called him "The Plug Hat Hero."

Mr. Hrockway appeared at a third story window shortly after the alarm of fire was His wardrobe consisted of long white garment usually carried in a traveling man's small grip, one boot and his

Speaking of the fire to a friend he said: "I sleeping in a fourth story room I was awakened by some unwhen I was awakened by some unusual acise. I supposed perhaps it was a street fight below my window. Suddenly the word fire' rang out, and you can believe that I jumped from my bed. I tried to light the gas but could not. In the dark I searched for my clothing, but all I was able to find was my stove-pine and and one boot. I coold hear people running along the halls and heard the shouts of men, and knew I had no thing for dress. When I reached the hall the entire space was filled with smoke. In company with others I reached the third In company with others I reached the third

"For the information of those who are ignorant of the objects of this union, let me say, it was not organized in the interest of any combination or jobber, but earnestly for the protection of our salesmen, and in favor of honest expense accounts, and for selling goods in an upright, manly and legitimate way. Heretofore prices have been made and relates given, and underhanded, unscrupulors, methods resorted to, that no honest job-ber or salesman could contend with. He hopes to everyone this by this union, the members of which piedge themselves not to cut prices on goods, with penalties attached, and to use every effort to have the same en-

This we have entered into most earnestly, and, as our membership is rapidly increasing, feel assured of success. We have a regularly organized executive board, whose duty is to attend to those detected in cutting prices, and in localities we have already succeeded in establishing a healthier trade.

Only a few of the retailers object to the stand taken, and many of them think it will result in fairer dealings among themselves. The chairman of the executive committee is E. B. Keares, of Burlington, Ia., who may be addressed on all matters concerning cuts, reporting, etc. The "new lows law" on combinutions, corporations, trusts, etc., does not affect us whatever. We hope those dilatory ones who have been hanging back for some one else first will promptly put their own shoulder to the wheel."

Traveling Men's Trials.

A traveling man for a New York house called last week at Brenk Bros.' just after dinner, says the Yenowine News, to sell some goods. Joe was busy draughting a garment that was promised for Saturday at 6 o'clock sharp, and Bob left his cutting table to look at the samples. The goods were just unpacked when a gentleman came in to have his coat tried on. The agent waited. A business man then consumed just twenty minutes in selecting the goods and leaving his measure for a blue serge coat and vest, and cool, striped trousers. The agent waited. A doctor followed, and selected a wide wale diagonal for cutaway coat and vest, and light trousers. His measure was taken and thirty minutes more was consumed. The agent got in five minutes work when a young man came in for a flannel suit, but decided on a light weight sacque, pique vest and pinchbeck trousers. The agent grow restless and looked at his watch. A gentleman then came in, absorbing nearly half an hour more and took some samples for his wife to decide on. The agent said he would call again when they were not so busy. but when informed that he could not find a more favorable time, he waited and succeeded in getting in a thirty minutes' interview during the afternoon, from 1:30 to 6:00 p. m. He says it is the liveliest establishment he has struck in the city.

Rates Remain High. There are a disappointed lot of commercial drummers in this city at present, says the San Francisco Chronicle. They all hail from the east, and they came out here on the strength of the reports that the inter-state commerce commissioners were about to lay an iron hand upon the railroad companies, which action would, it was believed, result in a great advance of rates before August 1. The drummers had only got fairly down to work here in making their arguments with Another letter read thus:

MR. SAYLOU:—For nine months I have not sit right. I am unable to get much sleen low figures, when the Chronicle published a the Transcontinental association, stating that no change would be made in rates until August 1, and that even then the outlook was favorable for a continuance of the old ariff. This intelligence has sent a chill lown the back of each of the drummers, who now fear that their mission to this coast was in vain. Meantime the merchants are congratulating themselves on the outlook for the maintenance of the present tariff. Represented the Big House. A Philadelphia drummer saw a man in a railroad car, whom he thought he knew, says the Denver Road, and slapping him on the back, asked him how he was. The man ooked up, and the drummer saw that he was a stranger. He apologized, saying that he thought that he was a friend of his. What followed is best told by a Jersey newspaper: "I hope I am a friend of yours," the man said, and they got to talking, and the commercial man, seeing the gentleman's grip sack, thought he must be a commercial man also, and asked him what house he represented. "I represent," said the gentleman, "the largest house in the world." "Well," said the traveling man, "if you represent the largest house in the world you certainly have a snap What house is it?" "The Lord's house, 'said the gentleman,' my name is John Scarborough, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church."

Books Instead of Drummers.

A number of New York jobbers are now figuring on a plan for selling goods to their customers by means of jobbers' price lists instead of having representatives on the road to look after their customers. The plan, according to interviews with whelesalers on the above plan as published in the Mail and Express, is to have large circular or pamphlet price lists printed each month to mail to one's customers and allow them to make the orders from the prices quoted in the lists. The plan would save the merchants thousands of dollars expended in salaries and bills, but whether it would hold their business or not is a question that will be set tied after they have tried the experiment.

A Summer Excursion.

The latest plan talked of for the benefit and entertainment of the traveling men of Omaha is a moonlight excursion some night luring this week or the first of next to Lake Manawa. The proprietors at the lake have made the arrangements for an excursion and will await the pleasure of the traveling men, for whom it has been arranged, to name the evening for their visit to Manawa. The evening will be given up entirely to the party and a pleasant time will no doubt be enjoyed by those who may see fit to join in the expedition.

It is a fact, that since that night I have never worn a plug hat."

The Protective Union.

The Traveling Men's Protective union is an organization that has been in existence a little over four years. Shortly after the fourth annual meeting, which was held at Davenport, Ia. had adjourned, the secretary addressed an open letter to the Des Moines State Register on the benefits of the association to the traveling men. The letter was briefly as follows:

Winning Men. In the course of his morning sermon at the Congregational church vesterday Rev. G. W. Crofts remarked that it was to be regretted that so many ministers felt it necessary to preach so much against such evils as dancing, card playing, theater-going, Sunday base ball, etc. He believed that if Christ was so preached as to reach the hearts of men hese matters would quickly regulate themselves. The province of the church was not merely to fight sin, but to present truth so forcibly and attractively that men would be drawn toward it. Men generally needed only to be thoroughly convinced what was best for them, and they would strive to secure that. The church should be made more attractive than the ball game or the card rooms. Then there would be little necessity of spending time in denun ciations. Mr. Moody had clearly taken his position, and follow the policy. He illustrated it by the incident of a mother whose child got hold of a pair of scissors. The alarmed mother tried to get the child to give them up, finding the little one so obstinate that force would need be used, offered the little one an orange. The seissors dropped from the dimpled but clinched fist, and the orange taken. It was necessary sometimes to wrest the harmful scissors, but the wise way was to offer one something better to take the place of the evil.

Last evening at the residence of Mr. Drolich, 538 Broadway, occurred the marriage of Mr. Emil Drolich and Miss Mollie Abrahamowitz. At 6:30 the happy couple stood up before Justice Schurz and took upon themselves the obligations of the civil contract. A little later the party passed up stairs to the synagogue where the Jewish ceremony was performed by Rabbi Benson, of Omaha. Then foilowed congratulations from the assembled relatives and friends. A wedding feast, prepared in conformity to the practice of that church, was spread. The festivities incident to the occasion continued for hours, and to all who participated in them they will remain a deasant memory. THE BEE, with all other friends, extends congratulations.

I have for many years made a specialty of diseases of the urinary and sexual organs, have become a recognized authority upon the subject, consequently I receive an immense number of letters from physicians and afflicted persons, asking my opinion and advice upon individual cases. For the benefit of such persons, I have written a book, giving a general description of the most common diseases and conditions, my treatment, success, advice, etc. After reading it, persons will have a clearer idea of their condition and can write me more intelligently and to the point. It will therefore he seen that our object in writing these pages is not to turnish reading matter to a class or persons who read out of mere idle curiosity, but for the hencit of the many who are suffering to a greater or less degree from diseases, or the effects of diseases, or the sexual or urinary organs. Not a day passes but we receive many calls or letters from persons suffering from this class of diseases, or their sequel. Many of them are ignorant of the cause of the difficulty that has wrecked their constitutions, thrown a cloud over their bright prospects and is shortening their days.
