FOUND A FORTUNE. How an Illinois Coal Miner Discovered a Chest Full of Gold.

Galena, Ill., correspondence Globe Stop at the Pacific House. The most centrally located hotel in the city. Democrat .- A story, equal in point of interest to that of the treasure cave in Dumas' famous romance of the "Count Monte Cristo" or of the valley of Money loaned at L. B. Crafts & Co.'s place, which is accessible all the way

Without lengthy forethought I de-cided to transfer the treasure to my boat, and, as soon as that was accomplished, to set out for New Orleans, where I could advantageously dispose of it. I began, accordingly, with great ex-peditiousness lest I should be disturbed by inquisitive new-comore, to carry the plan into execution, and succeeded that night in conveying the gold to my skiff, where I deposited it safely in two strong lockers which formed the seats in the forward and stern ends of the boat. On the following morning, after effectually banking up the mouth of the arift, I set out upon my lengthy royage, which I accomplished in exactly three weeks, with but few unpleasant adventures during the trip, and without exciting the least suspicion of any one on the way, as to the valuable nature of my cargo.

'At New Orleans I sold my doubloons to Laspier & Du Bois, bankers and brokers of that city, receiving in exchange an equivalent in American gold, amounting in the aggregate to 8399,000. Purchasing English, French and German exchanges with my money, Ltook passage for Liverpool on the first European-bound vessel, and after so-journing nubile in my native town of Truro, 1 determined upon spending the balance of my days in wandering about the world, thus gratify-ing an ambition which had been my fondest dream from my early boyhood. Having journeyed, many times over, through every continent on the hemisphere, covering more consecutive miles in that manner than any other traveler in existence. I have temporarily given up my wandering, and with which I am becoming somewhat surfeited, and propose to seek rest among the seenes of my early manhood, which are still familiar to me although thirty-one years have passed since I turned my back upon them, my heart deeply elated over this golden fortune which had so suddenly and wonderfully come into my hands."

The drift in which Stanhope found the Spanish treasure was not discovered until 1876, when two Irish prospectorsme of them Tom Shannon, well known in this region as the "Hero of Chicka-manga"—broke into the cave after several years of fruitless search for an "opening," and took out of it a large fortune in mineral. The chest which contained the doubloons secured by Stanhope was found ay Shannon, and ecasioned unbounded surprise and no little speculation as to how it got there. The mystery has, of course, never been solved; but it is believed by Stanhope that the chest of treasure was stolen by some of De Soto's soldiers at the time he discovered and explored the Mississippi, and was secreted in the eave, the entrance to which had been blocked up by the alluvial deposits and changes of upward of 300 years.

George Washington Hatchet, of the Virginia City (Nev.) Enterprise, writes in that esteemed though distant contemporary as follows:

Mono lake constitutes one of the greatest natural deposits of hair dye in the known world. A white-haired old Bodie man who went down to the lake this summer was so pleased with the bathing to be had there that he went in for a swim regularly every evening after finishing his day's work, He was down at the lake two weeks, and ben he got back to Bodie his

How the Utes Play Poker.

Denver Republican: Most of the Utes are gamblers and know all the arts that make up the great popular civilized game known as draw poker. Pairs, threes, dushes, straights and full hands they have learned better than their a b c's and agriculture. They play with either American or Mexican cards. A good poker player down east will find a fee worth his hand in the stolcal face of the southern Ute. You can't tell from his face whether the Indian holds a bolitail flush, a pair of duces or a full hand. They are passionately fond of poker, and in playing this game are adepts in all the arts and ways of the more highly civilized paleface. They are also fond of the horse race, and a contest between two Indian ponies is always a great event. The Indians are out in great numbers and put up their money on their favorites. Many an Indian's annuity is lost at poker or horse race.

Where the Paving Is Done.

A great many of the citizens seem to imagine that the greater part of this year's paving is being done on Lower Broadway. This impression is erroneous, as the season's paving will measure a little over six miles, only two and a half miles of which is on Broadway. In the fourth ward all of the streets and avenues between Pearl and Main streets on the east, Eighth street on the west. Broadway on the north and Eighth avenue on the south are to be paved with either hard brick or cypress blocks. In the eastern part of the city, Graham avenue, Madison street, Harrison street, Pierce street from Stutsman to Willow avenue, and High School avenue from Park avenue to Willow are to be paved. In the northern part, Scott, Sixth, Sevonth and Eighth streets are to be paved between Mynster street and Washington avenue, to make ready for next year's paying on the last named street. This will give several continuous paved drives about the city, in addition to those that already exist. At the close of the present season there will be fif-teen miles of the finest paving in the country, through the business and residence portions of the city. At the rate at which this work is going on it will be but a very few years until every street in the city will be paved and supplied with sewers, water mains and gas pipes.

On Saturday next Mr. L. Kinnehan will open his store, No. 326 Broadway. The stock will consist of boots, shoes and the goods usually found in this connection. All will be new, and a more complete stock cannot be found in the city. Mr. Kinnehan is well known to readers of THE BEE, and it is sure that be will merit and receive a liberal patronage. Remember the opening.

The case of M. E. Doran was called yesterday afternoon in Squire Barnett's court, where it was taken on a change of venue from Squire Schurz. The dendant is charged with beating his board bill at the Bechtele. Emmet Finley appeared for the state, and Am-brose Burke for the defendant. It was impossible to secure the defendant's appearance in court, as he was confined in the county full and Shariff O'Nail in the county jail, and Sheriff O'Neil had gone to Minden on business, taking the keys with him. The case was con-tinued until 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Swan Down.

Financial crashes of any magnitude are wonderfully rare in Council Bluffs. Of all recorded during the past three or four years there has not been one which was possessed of any monetary backing. Once in a great while a business having no representative capital, through injudicious management, goes to the wall. The last of this kind is J. C. Swan, who three months ago started a bakery at No. 213 South Main street. Since his opening he has seemed to be doing a thriving business, and it was a surprise to everyone when the announcement was made yesterday that he had been closed up. Inquiry revealed the following facts Yesterday morning Swan began selling off his stock and cooking utensils. A wagon was standing in the alley loaded with goods, which, when Swan's land-lord, A. Ritter heard, he went to Jus-tice Biggs' office and had a writ of attuchment issued. This was served and all movements were stopped. During the day several other attachments followed. The claims already filed amount to about $200. It is stated the outstanding claims against the stock amount to between $600 and $700, while the value of stock, fixtures, etc., amounts to not more than half that amount. What arrangement will be made, if any, to satisfy the creditors is not known diamonds discovered by Sinbad the Sailor, as given in the "Arabian Nights" tale, is related by a man named Alexander Stanhope, who arrived in this country two weeks ago, after an absence of thirty-one years, devoted entirely to travel, which has taken him to every part of the habitable globe. He has crossed the Atlantic forty-three times, made thirteen trips up the Mediterancan, a dozen or more voyages across the Pacific from China to San Francisco, and visited every portion of South America as many times over as he has fingers and thumbs on both hands. The past five years Stanhope has de-voted to travel in the United States, particularly that portion between the Pacific coast and the Mississippi and Missouri rivers. He is fifty-nine years of age, bronzed and athletic in appearance, his six feet and two inches of stature, marked muscular development and erect carriage, combined with a genial, handsome countenance, lit up by a pair of keen eyes and surmounted by a head of silken brown hair, making him a distinguished figure among his fellowmen. Of course, it has taken a large amount of money to indulge Stanhope's propensity for sight-seeing and adventure, and as he was known to be a poor young man during his residence n the Galena lead mines in early times. the story as to how he obtained the means to defray his expenses forms a chapter of seeming romance which the incredulous will be slow in believing, but which is nevertheless true in all its details, judging from the apparent per-fect candor of the hero himself, whose interesting narrative, as related for the first time to a Globe-Democrat reporter, is as follows: "I came to Galena in 1847, having emigrated to this country in that year from Truro, England, after the death of both of my parents and all my near rel-tives. Like many other foreigners who settled here, I embarked in the business of mining, and alone, with nothing but pick and gad, began the exploration of a natural drift at the foot of the precipitous bluff now known as New became wider and wider. I suddenly broke into a large cave, the vaulted roof of which was decorated with stalactite and spar, the latter glistening in the light of my solitary miner's lamp like a million diamonds. Struck with awe at the sight before me, I could but peer with wondering and strained eyes into and about the cavern, the full di-mensions of which I was unable to esticitement of a crowd in front of it, and mate on account of the imperfect light on going to ascertain the cause he shed by my lamp. While standing spell bound at the mouth of the cave, I nosurprised to see the monkey seated in the middle of the cage with one of the ticed, a short distance to the right. opossums lying quietly on her back on his lap and her head under his arm. The monkey had just discovered nside the cavern, a shelving of rock, jutting out probably three feet from the wall and about breast high from the the marsupial pouch of the opossum and floor, upon the top of which rested what was diligently investigating it. Had proved to be, on examination, a large iron-bound chest of oak, the lid of he not been a close observer it cer-tainly would have remained unseen, of which was secured by a curtously shaped padlock of brass. With the aid of my pick and gad I broke open the for it was so tightly closed as to be per-fectly invisible in its normal condition. The monkey carefully lifted the outer wall of the pouch and peered into the cavity. Then he reached in with his chest, and to my utter amazement I found it to be filled to the top with Spanish doubloous, bearing the date of 1526. Overjoyed, naturally, at the dis-covery I fell to speculating upon how to remove the gold, and gave but little thought as to the phenomenal circumhand, felt about for a moment, and to the astonishment of everybody took out a tiny young opossum about two inches long, hairless, blind and very helpless, but alive and kicking. "Jock" held it up to the light where he could get a good view of it, scrutinized it with the stance of its being there. On leaving Galena for New California I had purair of a savant, and presently returned it to the pouch very carefully. After replacing it he looked into the pouch hardly knew him. He left Bodie a white-haired old man, and came back a golden blonde and apparently a man of only middle age.
