The Colorado house has been closed by the sheriff on a writ of attachment sued out by Jacob Howarth against his brother Joseph. The furniture is held to satisfy an alleged debt.

A tin key has been manufactured for the city editor of the Nonpareil, who is greatly troubled in spirit, least the county jail should take fire during the absence of the sheriff, and all the prisoners be cremated.

The members of the Congregational Sunday school in the number of about 100, were held in a picnic in Fairmount park yesterday. The weather was all that could be desired, and a very enjoyable time is reported.

The Bluff City team is matched to play the "Hughes nine" at the driving park on Sunday afternoon. The gate receipts. The Bluff City team is doing some fine playing lately and should tackle the City League team.

Captain Nick O'Brien, of the merchant's police, has been appointed deputy United States marshal for the southern district of Iowa, and proposes to make it warm for the liquor dealers who fall to display a government license in their places of business.

Wade Carey shipped several of his trotters to Ottumwa last evening to take part in the races there. Among the number were the trotters King Humbert and George Simmons, and the pacers Lorene and Gray Jim. Lorene has a record of 2:15 and is showing up very fast this season.

The Council Bluffs Medical society has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Dr. F. S. Thomas; vice president, Dr. H. B. Jennings; treasurer, Dr. J. H. Cleaver; secretary, Dr. J. E. White; clerk, Drs. C. H. Pinney, C. Deakin and F. W. Houghton.

The contract for the erection of the power house of the electric motor company has been let to Wickham Bros. and J. A. Murphy. The new building will be located near the waterworks pumping station, and work will be commenced in time to receive the necessary machinery before the bridge is ready to open to travel.

The case of William Reese was called before Judge Aylesworth yesterday morning, but was continued until next Monday on account of the absence of the prosecuting witness, Jack Whitaker, who received the worthless check passed by the defendant. It consists of a bar bearing his name, and in relief on the pendant attached is the figure of a man sitting in a tub and hearing the words "Spirit Lake." THE NEWS ABOUT THE BLUFFS.

Another Mixed Ordinance for the City Weighmaster.

SOME POLICE COURT POINTS.

The School Grounds on the Hill to be Terraced—Gamblers Give Up Some of Their Gains—The Republicans Lost Night.

Weighted and Foully Wanted. The office of city weighmaster has not been a very pleasant or profitable one. The so-called city ordinances have been so badly mixed that the city weighmaster has been unable to protect either himself or the public. For a long time there has been an increasing demand for such a revision of the ordinances as would make the office what it should be and protect property the public.

At last a new ordinance has been passed. It introduces itself in a very comical sort of a way, its first utterance being: "An ordinance to provide for the enforcement of ordinances now in force."

The natural query arises as to the necessity of an ordinance to provide for the enforcement of other ordinances, and much less if such ordinances are already in force.

"An ordinance to provide for the enforcement of ordinances now in force," is what the city coal dealers will be obliged to have their coal weighed on city scales. The new ordinance is said to answer this query, but what the answer is to one's knowledge.

Section 1. Be it ordained by the city council of the City of Council Bluffs, that if any person shall sell, or attempt to sell, within the limits of the city of Council Bluffs any food, hay, corn, coal or grain or any other product, the contents of which are ascertained by weight or measure, such shall do and receive said services as is now provided by ordinances of said city.

For bargains in real estate see E. H. Sheafe & Co., Broadway and Main street, upstairs.

Patrons of the Pacific House have none but words of praise for the attention given them.

A New Deal in the Saloon Fight. Yesterday afternoon an information was filed before Justice Briggs charging Henry DeLong and W. J. Utterback with larceny. A warrant was placed in the hands of Constable Wesley, who arrested them and took them to court, where their bond was fixed at $1,000 each for appearance for trial. DeLong became security for Utterback, J. R. Bell was DeLong's surety, and the men were released. The two defendants are the constables who served the search warrants against the "barbiste works" on Upper Broadway and confiscated considerable liquor found there and on adjoining property. They are not charged with stealing the liquor, but the jugs, kegs and bottles in which it was contained. It is the general impression that the case is made simply to worry the Law and Order party, and without the slightest chance of making the charge hold. The temperance people profess to have no doubts as to the outcome of the matter, and the justice who issued the search warrants says that the papers authorized the search of adjoining premises.

E. H. Sheafe loans money on chattel security of every description. Private confidential. Office 300 Broadway, corner Main street, upstairs.

New Fall Hats at Mrs. Stewart's. A Man Goes Down the Sewer. Tuesday afternoon a man by the name of Smith is reported to have had a most thrilling experience, and one from which few men have ever come alive.

He was at work at the mouth of the sewer in the Brown building when the descending elevator forced him into the pipe. From here he was shot through the eighteen inch pipe into the Main street sewer. This is a large main and connects with Indian creek at Willow avenue. Smith was turned over and over, but strange to relate he did not lose consciousness. There was water enough in the sewer to float him, and in due time he was tumbled into the creek. He was badly dazed, but managed to crawl out to the bank. His clothing had been laid aside before beginning his work, and he was obliged to remain in hiding until night, lest her return should discover his whereabouts. He returned to the Brown building for his clothes and went home. Yesterday he was but little the worse for his ride of half a mile in the sewer.

S. B. Wadsworth & Co. loan money. On Saturday next Mr. L. Kinnehan will open his store, No. 326 Broadway, and the goods usually found in this connection. All will be new, and a more complete stock cannot be found in the city. Mr. Kinnehan is well known to the readers of THE BEE, and it is sure that he will merit and receive a liberal patronage. Remember the opening.

Ground Floor Generosity. A prominent sporting man of this city has just had occasion to make good an agreement entered into some time ago. In frequent games with a fellow citizen, covering a period of several years, he has invariably been the loser. He promised his friend that whenever his luck turned and he succeeded in defeating him, he would devote the money to some benevolent enterprise. Wednesday the turn came, and he dived his friendly opponent of years. He kept his word, and the money was equally divided between St. Bernard's and the W. C. A. hospital.

Money loaned at L. B. Crafts & Co.'s loan office, on furniture, pianos, horses, wagons, personal property of all kinds, and all other articles of value without removal. All business strictly confidential.

A Too High School. The school board will hold a special meeting next Monday noon for the purpose of opening the bids for the grading and terracing of the Hill school grounds. The work is rendered necessary by the lowering of Fifth avenue to grade. The grounds will have to be terraced to keep the bluff from caving away around the building. The entrance to the grounds will probably come in from the east, as the continual climbing of stairs on the terraces would soon wear out the strongest constitution.

Attention. Veteran Tippecanoe club will meet this evening at republican headquarters at 8 o'clock sharp. Everybody invited. D. H. CLARK, Secretary.

The Strange Fate of the Ship Snow. New York Correspondence Globe-Democrat: About a year ago one of the finest clipper ships that ever sailed out of New York harbor went ashore near Cork, on the Irish coast. She was the Alford, a snow and belonged to the well known firm of Snow & Burgess, of South street, in this city. Her master was Captain Willey, a Maine man, and one of the most careful seamen. He had followed the sea, man and boy, for half a century. The Snow had on her board, besides the captain and officers, a crew of twenty-six men—thirty-two men all told. Every one perished.

It is supposed that Captain Willey was sailing by dead reckoning and had thus gone to the bottom. The weather was heavy and the fog such that to see a cable's length ahead was impossible. However, all were lost, and just in sight of safety, and none returned to tell the tale. There is a strange story connected with the Snow, which was told to a Globe-Democrat correspondent by Mrs. Sofia Clough, an intimate friend of the widow of Captain Willey, and which has been partly verified by a statement published at the time of the accident in the New York Herald.

When the Snow left New York on her last trip, which was around the Horn to San Francisco, thence with grain to Liverpool, a strange fatality occurred on board. She was lost down by the afternoon to her anchorage at Sandy Hook, inside the Horse Shoe, where, like all sailing ships leaving this port, she was compelled to anchor over night. Captain Willey was aboard, but he need not have been on the next morning. That night at about 10 o'clock the sailor came to his cabin and insisted on seeing him. After partying awhile the man was admitted to the cabin.

"Captain Willey," he said, "I have had a dream. I saw the Snow lying at the bottom of the Channel, and all of us—yourselves—scattered around her, stark and stiff." "Nonsense, you are drunk," said Willey. "Go back to your bunk and sleep it off, and you'll be all right to-morrow."

"Captain," said the fellow, "I've sailed with you many's the time afore now, and you know I'm not the salt to be sneered at by you. I can't go with you this time; good night." With that the fellow started for the fore-cabin. The lighted lantern he had with him before either reached there, but was heard within. Thinking the sailors were having a drunken carouse, which had been strictly prohibited, the mate forgot about the superstitions and went to investigate. He had the intention of disciplining the crew. But a strange and horrible sight met his eyes. In one of the bunks about which gathered the horror-stricken crew was the very man whom he had just seen start for the fore-cabin. He had cut his throat from ear to ear, and then, as though to make death doubly sure, had plunged the knife into his heart. He was dead.

On investigating it was found that he had not left his bunk that night. Was it a ghost that came to him, or what? He had killed himself a few minutes before the mate entered. It is said, no one being awake at the time but one sailor, who awoke the rest to see his desperate act. However, he was dead now, and the mate and the mate had to be signalled. The crew took charge of the ship next morning and held an inquest, the verdict being suicide.

It is in San Francisco, before the Alfred D. Snow started on her voyage to Liverpool, which she was destined never to reach, one of the officers wrote to Mrs. Clough that the ghost or spirit, if such it were, of the suicide, had several times been seen during the voyage and that the mate had been told that the ship was soon to be wrecked at San Francisco. At one time, on a dim moonlight night, when she was almost becalmed right under the equator, a ghastly form came from the fore-cabin and went to the mate's cabin, and up which he slowly climbed, singing a weird sea song, until at last he disappeared above the masthead. In about an hour one of the most severe white squalls came up that they had ever seen, and in which all the crew were nearly able to keep the ship together.

The strange truth of the man's prediction, which was so terribly fulfilled on the Irish coast, and the ghostliness of it all, make it evident that there is a strange, spiritual materialization, which hung to the vessel from the time of the suicide's death until she went to pieces on the rocks.

The Apple Woman's Arithmetic. Boston Transcript: There is an apple woman on Tremont street who has each day a consignment of sixty apples to sell, and makes a point of getting rid of them if possible every day. She does not like to have stock on her hands, and regarding "clearing out sales" as demoralizing to trade. The other morning her boy Mickey and his chum Patsy were hanging around her stand, and bothered her so much that she resolved to put them to some use. She called out each of them with a basket, and to her smart boy Mickey she gave thirty of the sixty apples, and said: "Sell them for me, every wan o' them, and sell 'em two for a cent."

Mickey started with his thirty apples. Then she called Patsy, his chum, in whose honesty she had more confidence than she had in his business abilities, and gave him the other thirty apples.

"Sell 'em for me," she said to Patsy, "and sell 'em three for a cent." Patsy sallied forth with the apples and a smile. "Two for a cent, an' three for a cent," said the old woman to herself, after the boys were gone, "that's just two cents for five."

The boys got in toward the middle of the afternoon with their baskets empty. It was just as the apple woman had anticipated. The lower price of Patsy's apples just about balanced Mickey's superior commercial qualifications, and the boys came in within ten minutes of each other. Mickey had the 15 cents which his thirty apples had brought at two for a cent, and Patsy had the 10 cents which his thirty apples had brought at three for a cent.

That made 25 cents for the old lady, and as she put the money in her pocket she remarked to the boys that she would see them later.

Next day the boys came around bright and early and noted that the consignment of sixty apples had arrived, but the apple woman had changed her plans. She had made up her mind that she might as well sell the apples from the stand and not be under the necessity of seeing the boys later. So she sent the boys off empty-handed.

"An' now," said she, "I will sell the apples the same as yesterday—five for two cents." So she put up on the pile of sixty apples a neatly executed placard which read "5 for 2."

"She sold all the apples at that rate, but when sold at night, she discovered that she had realized but 24 cents for the sixty apples, whereas the preceding day she had got 25 cents for them, with five going for 2 cents just the same, she was struck with amazement and perplexity. "In the name of the power that played before Moses," exclaimed the old lady, "what is gone with the other cint?" She has not solved the problem to her satisfaction yet, and her friends are congratulating her, saying that she will drive her crazy quill."

THE WHITEHEAD TORPEDO. Interesting Facts Regarding This Implement of Naval War are.

Chicago News: During the last two years marked activity has characterized the construction of the Whitehead torpedo navy. Over $30,000,000 have been appropriated. Designs of battle ships, cruisers, torpedo-boats, and heavy ordnance, have been obtained from every corner throughout the world, and but little more is to be seen of our new fleets compatible in every respect with modern requirements.

The launch of the steel cruisers, Chicago, Boston and Atlanta, marked the first addition to the new navy. On the 24th of April last the steel gunboat, Yucktown, and dynamite cruiser Vesuvius were slipped from the ways by the Cramps at Chester; and on the 10th inst. the powerful armed cruiser Charlestown was launched by the Union Iron works at San Francisco.

The fact that over fifteen powerful warships will be added to the American navy within the next eighteen months has given an impetus to interests in this country.

Each cruiser turned out will be furnished, in addition to her battery of guns, with a full complement of "Whitehead" torpedoes.

These torpedoes are of two sizes, the largest being fourteen feet long and sixteen inches in diameter, and intended for six-seven pounds of gun-cotton, and the smaller one is nearly the same in length, but two inches smaller in diameter, to contain eighteen pounds of dynamite.

The speed of the torpedo through the water diminishes as the pressure of the air in the reservoir diminishes by the work of the propeller. The latter will travel more rapidly for a short distance than for a long one. For the first 220 yards the rate of speed for the larger one is twenty-four knots an hour, and 1,000 yards can be accomplished at the rate of sixteen knots an hour. The latter speed would occupy about two minutes, or, more exactly speaking, one minute and fifty-two seconds.

But notwithstanding these features of the Whitehead torpedo it is yet not wholly under command, though naval officers are becoming constantly more able to govern its erratic movements.

During the Chilean trouble the British war ship Shark discharged a Whitehead torpedo at the Chilean steamer, which was passing broadside on her, but failed to hit her. This is the only instance of their use with hostile intent, and the next war must prove the progress of this new ultra of modern warfare.

The use of gun-cotton in torpedoes has become so extensive that the government found it necessary several years ago to establish a gun-cotton factory. The location of the works is now at Casper's Island, near Newport, Rhode Island, and the plant is used to our war vessels in a wet condition, and in this state large quantities can be carried in the torpedo magazine with perfect safety.

A small, very small, quantity of dry gun-cotton is also carried, in a tin of which is exploded by the percussion cap, the shock of the latter then exploding the wet gun-cotton. The latter loses some of its power by being wet, but requires a greater concussion to cause its explosion.

GOULD & LYNETT, Lieutenant.

The Origin of "Boodle." It is probably derived from the old English word boole, a bunch or a small, odd lot of straw. The whole kit and boddle of them is a New England expression in common use, and the word in this sense means the whole lot. Latterly "boodle" has come to be somewhat synonymous with the word pile, a term in use at the gaming table, and signifying a quantity of money. In the gaming sense when a man has "lost his boodle" he has lost his pile or whole lot of money, whatever amount he happened to have with him. The word may be an anglicized form of the German word boutel, a purse, and in a figurative sense, money.
