The Bluff City and Council Bluffs former club by a score of 9 to 5.

This is the last week of the Avon institute, and Superintendent McNaughton will then be at liberty to enjoy his vacation for a couple of weeks. His new names were enrolled last week.

The case of John Powelski will be called in Squire Schurz's court at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. He is charged with feloniously appropriating to his own use a wagon belonging to R.
V. Phillips.

Bad Mavores was run in Saturday night for getting full and resisting an officer. A Jenkins was also "pinched" for disturbing the peace. A full corps of plain drunks was secured, but the haul of vags was rather light.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Williams are rejoicing over the arrival of a son at their home, on Benton street. The young man will not vote this fall, but is nevertheless quite decided in his political views. He demands protection.

Complaint is again being made that the ordinance requiring parties about to marry to secure a permit is being disregarded. All those who violate this ordinance are liable to a fine, and interested parties will do well to bear this in mind.

Alderman Lucy is having plans prepared for the erection of a series of Bates on Third avenue, between Tenth and Eleventh streets. They will be fitted up in first class shape with all modern conveniences, and will rent for about $25 per month.

The case of William Hainer, for larceny, will be called this morning. The small case of Walter and Maher is also booked for this morning's session.
The prosecuting witness, Williams, has been placed under bonds to appear, and says he will surely be on hand.

A few crossed wires on the police alarm circuit created a little inconvenience and delay Saturday night. The cause of the trouble was looked up by Electrician Bradley yesterday, and found to be on Fifteenth street. Boxes 41 and 52, at the transfer and at the corner of Broadway and Eighth street, were the only ones cut out, and they are now working all right.

The news of the Shenandoah tragedy caused considerable excitement in the city yesterday, and there was a general rush for THE BEE, that being the only paper that contained any account of it.
Several of the editors left for Shenandoah on the afternoon train. The members of the Dodge Light Guards were particularly interested, as they were personally acquainted with the members of the company, which belongs to the same regiment, and are preparing to go into camp together at Vicksburg next Sunday at the state encampment.

The report of the deputy state oil inspector for July shows that 31,000 gallons of gasoline and 311 barrels of kerosene oil were consumed in this city during that month. These figures show how generally gasoline is used here for fuel during the summer. The report shows that an average of nearly a gallon to every man, woman and child was consumed during the month. At the regular retail price of eighteen cents a gallon, the business for that month amounted to over fifty-five hundred dollars. At this rate it is getting to be one of the important branches of business in the city.

TRIBUTE TO GEN. SHERIDAN.

A Beautiful Memorial Service By His Brother Veterans.

WHAT TROUBLES THE MOTOR?

It Isn't All Right—Serious Illness of Alderman Lucy—A Boy Spurns a Good Home—Little Happenings.

In Memory of Sheridan.

Last evening there was a large audience at the Presbyterian church at the services there held as a memorial to General Sheridan. The Union Veteran Legion, No. 8, attended in a body, he being a member of the Council Bluffs encampment. The music on this occasion was the same as that given on December day, and by the same double quartet. It was a beautiful tribute to the fallen chieftain, with helpful thoughts to the living. The following synopsis indicates the line of thought followed, though necessarily lacking in the elegance of diction and cloquence of delivery enjoyed by the attending listeners:

We read of Philip, of Macedonia. He was a famous conqueror in ancient Europe, founder of the Macedonian empire; father of Alexander the Great, who was against him that the "Philippics" of Demosthenes were thundered in vain.
Two thousand years have not removed the mark he made upon the history and destiny of the world.

A little more than three hundred years ago, the foremost figure in Europe was a Philip—Philip II, of Spain.
He carved his name on the records of the ages, and there it still remains.

"In our own colonial history, just a hundred years before our revolution, we had a native American Philip, of great renown. He stood for his own people, the red men of the forests, against the incoming and dreaded Pale-face, from across the sea. He was a brave and powerful warrior, from whom "King Philip's War" took its name.

"But in this more than three hundred years ago, the foremost figure in Europe was a Philip—Philip II, of Spain.

"At the close of the eighteenth and the opening of the nineteenth century the Anglo-Irish name, Sheridan, was very prominent. For thirty-two years it then most conspicuous bearer was a member of the English parliament, and his is fixed in the traditions of parliament as one of its greatest names. He was a dramatist, satirist, debater, and one of the most effective orators in that age of oratory.

"But our own Irish-American Sheridan has also left an illustrious name, not as orator, or scholar, or warrior, but as a patriot. He is embodied in our country's history, and with an affection which never attached to the name before on either side of the sea.

"This is a Sheridan memorial meeting. It is a religious service. General Sheridan is indeed the hero of the hour, yet we are not here for hero-worship. That would be offensive to God, in whose house we are, and also to us. But God raised up in our days of national peril a great leader, a great man, and through him, with others, accomplished a notable deliverance for us.
We do well to meet in God's house, as his Israel of old used to do, and recount what God has done for us and praise him for it.

"The names of warrior-heroes are embodied in honor, even in the bible. No small praise is given there to the commander, Joshua, before whom God opened the swollen Jordan, throw down the walls of Jericho, and a discomfited powerful tribes. David, too, the prophetic, palms, warrior-king is one of his honored names. So are we told of the deeds of Gideon, and of Jephthah. Even the Patriarch Abraham, at least once, buckled on the armor of the warrior, and he wore it with honor. He pursued for a hundred and fifty miles, the five confederate and powerful kings who had spoiled the cities of the plain, and had taken off his nephew, Lot, as a captive. His brilliant and successful dash on that victorious army perhaps more than equals the famous ride of Sheridan.
Cyrus, too, appears here on these pages, by name, both in his prophecies and his history. Very high honor is given him in the bible. Words are said of him then of this great leader whom God has raised up to us, seem in accordance with the spirit of the bible.

"This memorial meeting has a peculiar appropriateness in this, that General Sheridan was a member of the Council Bluffs encampment, or Encampment Eight of the Union Veteran Legion. His is the first death, too, among its members. This meeting is held at his call, and under their auspices. In the name of General Sheridan, not only as the commander-in-chief of the army of the United States, and as a popular favorite, and a conspicuous figure in our recent national history, but also and chiefly as a now deceased member of their own encampment.

"Every year, since the war, has stricken many names of officers and men from the rolls of the great patriotic army who saved our united country a quarter of a century ago, and now the cloud of General Sheridan's death has also gone. Soon, gentlemen, all of you will be numbered with the dead, but dead only in body; living on, all of you, in the memory and gratitude of the American people; living on in the results which you have achieved; living on, too, may it be true of all of you, in the higher and better life beyond.

"Now, some may be saying in their heart, he is going to preach Sheridan after his death. Would that I could. Gentlemen, I have occasion to say, plainly, what I am persuaded you also believe with me, that military honors do not win heaven for any man. There is only one way of being saved, and that Paul clearly stated, when he said, 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.' It is an easy way, and open to all. The most distinguished general and the humblest child must alike walk by that way, if they would enter heaven. Was General Sheridan saved? I cannot answer. He had faults. Perhaps one of them has shortened his life. But was he not human? Who has none? Let him, in all the land, that has no fault, cast the first stone. Faults? He had them. Let him be 'a man for a' that and that.' Faults? Let them be avoided by all who know them. He had virtues; let them be imitated and praised. He is worthy of a generous mode of praise from us. Let it be given to him. The nation owes him a debt of gratitude.
Let it be paid to him, in as just a measure as we are able. Faults? Why did Jesus die on yonder cross? To open the gate of heaven wide to sinful men.

"Of General Sheridan's private life I know but little. Of his religious life I know less. The whole trend of his early training was along the lines of Roman Catholic belief. Of that church, I suppose, he was a member. It took him some time to get used to the burial services and the sounding of his requiem masses for the repose of his soul.
Time for preparation for the great change was mercifully given him, by the Lord, in those three months which he spent facing death. Who knows what improvement he may have made of those opportunities? Who shall say what was God's answer to the earnest prayers of his wife and family and friends, for as he died they were all kneeling in prayer for him? His spirit was assured into the presence of God with invocations, hundreds of thousands of others, who loved him, have also prayed for him, and, chiefly, that he might be saved. What has been their answer?

We will wait in hope and see.
"To tell the simple story of a man's life is easy; but a truthful analysis of his character may be difficult. Character is the inner, or real, man. It is as complicated as the physical, mental, moral, spiritual and social peculiarities of a person can make it. These must be studied, must be weighed, carefully, carefully, hereditary influences, educational peculiarities and opportunities; environment, or the circumstances by which he has been surrounded all through his life; forces which have contributed to his growth and development; he has had to meet; temptations which he has tried him, and acquisitions which he has made within himself. All these, together with the results which they have wrought out, both in him and through him, must be studied, and that without prejudice. Thus we are to measure a man, rather than by taking what other people say of him, on the street, or even through the press. I am not able thus to know General Sheridan, but he will be known to me, more more, and measured thus, I believe, he will be pronounced a great man; honest, modest, generous, brave, energetic and true; a patriot, a soldier, a leader, a typical American, and raised him up for the work which he has accomplished through him. Let us give God praise for it, even here, in his own house, and on this, his holy day."

"The speaker then showed how that General Sheridan's whole life had been dedicated to the country, and how he accomplished his chief life task as a young man. He dwelt upon the significance of the wonderful tribute paid to him during his sickness, and at his death and burial. Sheridan's devotion to duty rather than to glory, was emphasized.
In this he ranked with Wellington and Washington.

One chief element of Sheridan's strength was his quickness to discover critical situations, both in times of battles and also in the general management and movements of men. The action of the great Prussian generals, of Sheridan, during the Franco-Prussian war, during part of which he was guest at their headquarters, was noticed, and the causes of it. Part of Grant's splendid tribute to Sheridan was quoted. The speaker narrated some of the famous rides in our history; as that of Paul Revere, those of General Putnam, and that of Cesar Goodyear. Sheridan's ride was placed beside these, as more thrilling, more wonderful by far, and perhaps more important. His gathering up that day, of his beaten and panic-stricken army, and hurling it again against the victorious foe, reversing the result of the previous day, and winning a victory, and thus saving the triumph, showed a wonderful power over men. If Sheridan could have had some later war, in which to develop and reveal more of his military talent, he might have become even more distinguished than he is; but he never proved himself, absolutely, the most famous warrior of human history.

The speaker also spoke in honor of the brave boys in blue, of the rank and file, who made the successes of the great leaders possible, and who, with urgency the soldiers before him to enlist under the banners of the Savior of the world; and quoted the words with which Sheridan thrilled his army in his famous ride, "Face the other way."
"Face the other way." They did it, and conquered.

tion given them.

Improve the Motor Line.

Manager Reed has improved the Manawa terminus of the motor line by building a walk from the depot (2) to the hotel, and filling in the space between the tracks with cinders. "It is never too late to mend," and he should keep on mending for some time. The track needs repairing in several places and he should bear in mind the fact that it is a great deal easier to mend that than it is to mend a rotten track, and much more satisfactory to all parties concerned. The rails are spreading in many places and a fatal accident is by no means impossible. Every precaution should be taken to prevent one, as it is a crushing blow to Manawa interests.

Alderman Lucy's Condition.

It was reported on the streets yesterday morning that Alderman Pat Lucy was seriously ill with hemorrhage of the lungs and not expected to live.
Later reports stated that the case was somewhat exaggerated, and that the president of the council was much better. A BEE representative, in company with Mayor Rohrer, called at Mr.
Lucy's residence on Park avenue in the afternoon and found that gentleman resting in a large arm chair. He said that he was feeling perfectly well, and free from any aches and pains, but stated that he started to bleed to death about three o'clock in the morning.
The flow was stopped, and he had suffered no inconvenience since, and thought he would be all right in a few days if he avoid any exertion or excitement. Several years ago Mr. Lucy was subject to attacks of this kind, and suffered the last one preceding the present illness twelve years ago this fall, when he was seized with a violent hemorrhage on the day following exposed President Hayes' election, which came near resulting fatally. Since that time he has enjoyed good health. Last Thursday evening he retired as usual, but awakened about 3 o'clock in the morning and began to bleed at the lungs.
The flow was stopped without much difficulty, but began again later, and Mr.
Lucy was summoned. He stopped the hemorrhage and told his patient to be very careful and he would soon be all right. Mr. Lucy remained at home during Friday and Saturday and did not suffer another attack until yesterday morning. His physician was called and relieved him, but shortly after his departure he was attacked by another violent hemorrhage, more severe than any of the others, and the fluid continued to well forth copiously that fears were entertained that he would bleed to death. It was finally stopped, leaving the sick man rather weak from loss of blood. Since that time he has rested easily and if he does not suffer another attack he will be able to be out in a few days.
He was intending to leave for Minneapolis this evening to attend the national convention of the Chief Engineers' association, of which he is a member, but will be unable to go. He was yesterday visited by a number of the city officials and prominent citizens, who expressed their hopes of his speedy recovery.

No Sweet Home For Him.

Mike Burns, a boat black, was the cause of a sensation at Missouri Valley Saturday. His father is a well-to-do farmer living in Brady, Iowa. The old man has endeavored to keep the boy at home, but the boy ran away every chance he could get. About two years ago the boy was placed in the home here, but last spring he escaped, and lately has been blacking boots about Missouri Valley. Saturday his father came for him and the boy ran. The chase was a wild and exciting one, but resulted in the capture of the wayward boy who was taken homeward howling and wailing.

Ranger's Obituary.
Dr. George Brown, Will Keeline and Bert Evans returned Saturday evening from a shooting trip to Clarkson, Neb.
They met with very good success, but an accident happened Saturday morning that more than counterbalanced the pleasure of the trip and resulted in the death of the well known pointer, Ranger, the finest hunting dog owned in this city, and valued at $350. The dog was tied in the wagon, when one of the party shot a live bird as they were driving along and Ranger jumped out to get it as usual, but the strap held him and threw him under the wheel, which passed over his body, inflicting injuries from which he died.

He did not appear to be seriously hurt, and hunted for a half hour afterwards, but gradually grew weaker and was unable to stand when the party reached home. He was carefully nursed until yesterday morning, when he died, and was buried in the Evans' ground at the corner of Sixth avenue and Sixth street, in the presence of the entire family and numerous friends, whose copious tears told more plainly than words of the affection felt for the deceased animal.
Ranger was a model of canine intelligence and sagacity, and his admiring friends were numbered by hundreds. In the field, in camp, and at his home in the city, he was always the same pensive, obedient and well-behaved dog, and his untimely death is deeply regretted.
The tears shed over his grave were those of genuine sorrow, and he will be long held in remembrance by those who knew him well enough to thoroughly understand his faithful disposition. He was a truer friend than is many a so-called human being, and his many good qualities may well be emulated by some of those created on a loftier plane.
