

THE DAILY BEE. COUNCIL BLUFFS.

OFFICE, NO. 12 PEARL STREET... Delivered by Carrier in Any Part of the City at Twenty Cents Per Week.

MINOR MENTION.

N. Y. Plumbing Company. Reiter, the tailor, 310 Broadway, has received a full line of fine fall goods.

The county commissioners will meet for the fall session on the first Monday in September.

Bricklaying was begun yesterday on the new power house of the electric motor on Lower Broadway.

There will be a meeting of the Council Bluffs rifle club this evening at Mayor Rohrer's office at 8 o'clock sharp.

The ladies of All Saints guild will entertain a social this evening at the residence of Mrs. Dr. Stillman, on Willow avenue.

The regular meeting of the republican club will be held at headquarters this evening at 8 o'clock. A large attendance is desired.

The ladies of the Unity guild will meet with Mrs. A. H. Harris, 14 South First street, on Saturday at 3 p. m. A full attendance is desired.

Arrangements are in progress for the Young Men's Christian Association to take charge of the union services next Sunday evening. An interesting meeting is promised.

The New York Plumbing company has just placed five handsome mantels in George Whistler's new residence on East Pierce street. They are models of beauty and cost $400.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to Newton M. Sterling, of Mahaska, and Fannie E. Kenner, of this city, and Martin E. Lyon and Kate A. Fitzpatrick, both of this county.

The Plattsburgh nine will cross back with the home team at Masawa Athletic park next Sunday. The Bluffs boys went hunting for victory on the Dennison diamond yesterday afternoon.

County Attorney Dailey and Commissioners Waite and Underwood visited Crescent yesterday to look into a bridge matter. A railroad and county bridge are located at about the same point and occasion some controversy.

The home office of the Anglo-American Mortgage & Trust company, successor to Burrell, Tuttle & Co., has been located in Omaha, but the office in this city will be continued under the management of C. K. Hesse.

The funeral of Jacob Young, who died Wednesday at his home in Oak township, will take place at 10 o'clock this morning from the frame church in the Plummer settlement. The deceased was forty-one years of age, and leaves a wife and seven children.

The money order office at the new government building will soon be ready for daily use. Its furnishings and fittings are elegant, and surpass those of any bank in the city. The room is not large, nor the desks and counters extensive, but they are as rich as could be desired.

A woman with white horse hair was placed in rather an embarrassing situation yesterday morning at the corner of Bryant street and Broadway. She desired to cross the street, but was compelled to wait for six light complexioned equines to pass. She blushed furiously as she saw the white horses and the passers-by were unable to repress their smiles.

The Baptist picnic yesterday was a grand success. There were nearly three hundred people present at the grove, one and a half miles from the city. The day was most enjoyably spent, and there was not a single feature marred by the pleasure of the occasion. The location was one of the most beautiful to be found in the vicinity. Those present have nothing but praise for the committee in charge, who worked hard to insure a highly enjoyable occasion.

Smith Saunders is arranging for the erection of three brick store buildings on his lots on Broadway between Seventh and Eighth streets. The store rooms will be seventy feet deep, and well lighted. The location is good, and the investment will prove a paying one. He proposes to erect a four story business block next spring on the corner lot, Broadway and Eighth street.

The demand for new business continues, and first class store-rooms are in great demand. The demand for residences is greatly in excess of the supply.

The "Bluff City" nine are matched to play the Union Pacific Browns next Sunday for $10 a side in the old fair grounds. The former club is playing fine ball this season and resents the article that appeared in several of the city papers to the effect that they failed to put up money for a game with the "Reds." They claim that the "Reds" were unwilling to play until they had time to import players from Omaha, and were not on hand at the designated time. The "Bluff City" are ready to play them at any time for from $25 to $50 a side.

Money loaned at L. B. Crafts & Co.'s loan office, on furniture, pianos, horses, wagons, personal property of all kinds, and all other articles of value without removal. All business strictly confidential.

The War on Liquor. A wagon with four kegs of beer and a jug of something, standing in front of Justice Schurz's office yesterday afternoon, indicated that the case which drew the crowd was of a liquor nature.

The kegs and the jug were zealously guarded by a man on the wagon seat, who had to take good naturedly the jibes and sneers of those who had no liking for the seizure prosecution. Henry DeLong was prancing up and down stairs, and lawyers and witnesses were only outnumbered by the gang of lookers-on.

The first case called was the one in which De Long is charged with larceny, in having illegally seized some kegs of beer. As objections had been raised against any justice in the city trying the case, except Justice Barnett, and as he had been subpoenaed as a witness, the question was raised as where the case could be sent, or whether it should be sent anywhere. The question was such a knotty one that Justice Schurz concluded to think over it until Monday.

The next case was that concerning a seizure of the four kegs of beer and the jug outside, waiting to be brought into court for evidence. The proceedings were for destruction of these liquors. It was claimed that they were found at No. 619 South Main street, and that they were there being kept for sale by Frank Lower, Gus Bergman "or others." The first round was fought over alleged defects in the information, notably the "or others" which was considered too indefinite to warrant the issuing of a search warrant.

A great deal of talk over law points, sharp ones, was indulged in by Attorneys Heald and Simpson. Authorities were cited on the justice's desk until he was almost hidden, but peeping over the top of them he declared that they could go home and wait until next Tuesday, when he would decide whether the information should be dismissed or not. The driver was notified, and the beer kegs in controversy rolled away from in front of the temple of justice.

Frank Kain's place on Twentieth street, near Sixth avenue, was raided Wednesday night while the prayer meetings were in progress at the churches. This was the third pull of this place, and only a keg of beer and a bottle of whiskey formed the strippings.

An overton has signed the papers for ten new liquor injunctions. The cases will come up at the next term of the district court.

Planning for Chautauqua. F. R. Hill, an engineer from Sioux City, was in the city yesterday, looking over the proposed Chautauqua grounds. He has considerable experience in landscape gardening and parking, and his opinions in this respect are looked upon as being somewhat authoritative. He expressed himself as charmed with the location, and enthusiastically declared that he knew of no more beautiful spot for such a purpose anywhere in the Missouri valley. He is very familiar with all the topography of this section of country, having personally inspected most of it, and having run railway lines in all directions through it. With the chances he has had for careful examination of this part of the west, his expression of admiration for the proposed grounds can well be relied upon as based on careful comparisons. Little such evidence is needed in this community as to the desirability of these grounds for a Chautauqua, for many here are familiar with their beauties and advantages.

Mr. Hill says it will not need as large an expenditure to improve and further beautify the grounds as most places selected for park purposes. Nature has done much, and with a few thousand dollars a year the place can be made one of rare attractiveness. He has been looking over the grounds with a view of making more definite estimates of the probable cost of drawing maps and taking surveys, preliminary to the making of desired improvements.

The Chautauqua folks feel the necessity of immediately making a start in order to hold the best assembly next season. There is much preliminary work to be done, and some of this should already be under way. Correspondence is now being carried on which will result in the presentation of some definite proposals to the next annual meeting of stockholders, to be held early next month. In the meantime the subscriptions should be increased, so that the enterprise may not be crippled by the lack of the necessary backing. It is one of the greatest of the numerous enterprises being started here, and the citizens should rally to its support with enthusiasm. It can be made to draw 100,000 people to this city and vicinity next summer if the citizens say so voting yes with their pocket-books and their time.

Recognition. The Berean Baptist church of Council Bluffs was duly recognized last Tuesday by a council which met at All Saints' Chapel, Third avenue and Eighteenth street. The recognition sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Harris, of the First Baptist church, Omaha; the charge to the church was given by A. S. Churchill, esq., Omaha; the charge to the pastor, Rev. E. N. Harris, of Dakota; address to the congregation by Rev. W. F. Gray, Woodbine, Ia. Welcome words in behalf of the churches of the city were pronounced by Rev. Stephen Phelps, D. D., of the Presbyterian church; and the prayer of recognition was offered by the chairman of the council, Rev. J. B. Murch, Missouri Valley.

The exercises were cordial and inspiring. The Berean church feels new life and ambition as the result of the action of the council. Moreover, the citizens in the vicinity of the chapel were eminently thoughtful in providing for the delegates during the day. The church invited the blessing on them all for their kindness.

The Hand of the Law. Yesterday was a heavy day in police circles, and Judge Aylesworth sat in judgment on the wrecked frames of hilarious beer guzzlers and forlorn looking vags. When the gates of the sewer were opened fourteen of the unwashed throng were gently wafted up to the bar on a malarial zephyr that presented a great contrast to the breezes of "heaven's balmiest," that are sometimes met with where police stations are unknown. The classification of the motley group was gone through with in short order, and then the regular exercises of examination day were commenced.

The boozier's class was composed of four members, with Frank Trimble at the head. Their examination was very brief, as they had all been subjected to searching examinations on previous occasions, and they were each called on for $7.00 as the balance of their tuition, when they were all granted diplomas with the degree of B. B. B. (Blotted Bachelor of Budget). They ranked as follows: Frank Trimble, Hattie Nichols, William West and O. Stenger.

The infant class was next called, and there were two pupils present. Billy Ball and William Sandy were their names, and they were proven to be proficient in the art of jumping on trains while in motion. They were released for a little more exercise on the playground.

J. W. Jones was then called up and repeated the story of his experience in examining Officer Thomas' revolver while a guest of the St. Joe house. The examining committee decided that he was not sufficiently versed in the science of burglary to be awarded a certificate, and he was discharged for neglecting to improve his opportunities.

Charles Schrader, a laborer from the vicinity of Des Moines, was unwilling to talk before so many people on the subject on which he was to be examined—the larceny of a horse—and his case was continued. The charity club number being six, the members called out their lessons were recited with great indifference, and they were sent back for ten days of additional study. Their names were Michael Volhard, B. D. Cooley, J. H. Hughes, James Brown, J. B. Johnson and Hugh Coan.

The Bluffs Will Be There. Mayor Rohrer is engaged in selecting a committee of ten to represent this city at the coming "deep water" convention at Denver. It is easy enough to make the appointments, but not so easy to find citizens who will go. The board of trade has selected three of its members, and these, in connection with the ten appointed by the mayor will make a first-class showing for Council Bluffs. According to the circular issued by the mayor of Denver, every city is entitled to a delegate for 8,000 inhabitants, and another delegate for each additional 1,000 inhabitants. According to this, Council Bluffs is entitled to over thirty delegates, but it will be impossible to secure that number. The matter is one that intimately concerns this city, and it is very essential that it should be well represented. Other cities of the state are to send large delegations, among the number being Sioux City, Davenport, Burlington and Ottumwa, and it will not do for Council Bluffs to make an inferior showing. The trip will be one of pleasure for those who go, and it is expected that the convention will result in great profit to the inland cities of the country.

Those Wonderful Railroads. When the railroad was first opened between Moscow and St. Petersburg, says the Boston Globe, it was an object of great terror to the superstitious peasantry of northern Russia, who thought there must certainly be some witchcraft or magic in an invention which could make a train of heavy cars run along without horses at the rate of twenty miles an hour, when the speed of the wagons to which they were accustomed was only three miles an hour, or four at the very outside.

Some of them would not even go within sight of a train, and made the sign of the cross whenever they heard the whistle. Others peeped timidly over the palisade of the railway station to catch a glimpse of the fearful smoke-breathing creature, which they believed to be a living monster, and when the steam whistles sounded they cried out: "Hear him screaming! He's hungry and wants to eat somebody!" and took to their heels at once.

But little by little this terror began to wear away. The village priests were seen to go to and fro by train, and the simple country folk thought what they did could not be wrong. By degrees the peasants themselves began to try the "smoke wagons," too, and one day an old man named Ivan Petrovitch Maslov, who had never been out of his native village, thought what he might do and have a look at "Mother Moscow," which all Russian peasants reverence as the finest city in the world, and the real capital of Russia.

Now, it happened that the down express of homesick emigrants, which other at the station of Bologoy (midway between Moscow and St. Petersburg), where the passengers of both trains stopped for half an hour to have supper. Among the crowd of people who got out of the other train Ivan suddenly recognized an old friend. The two went into the refreshment room together, and had a chat over their steaming tumbler of tea and lemon juice, and then Ivan, without thinking of what he was doing, got into his friend's train instead of his own, and was soon traveling back to the spot whence he had started.

Their talk went on merrily for a while, for Ivan's friend never thought of asking the old man which way he was going. But presently Ivan began to grow silent and grave, as if pondering something which puzzled him very much; and at length, after sitting for nearly five minutes without uttering a word, he suddenly broke out: "Ah, Paxon Yur's betchik!" (Paul, son of Gorge), "what a wonderful thing these railroads are, to be sure! Here am I going to Moscow, and here are you going to St. Petersburg, and yet we're both traveling in the same car!"

Insane that psychologists have striven to designate by generic titles certain temperaments—as the bilious, the nervous, the lymphatic. The individual with a sallow complexion is set down as bilious, often rightly so. The Jew's Harp. Musical Herald: The manufacture of this musical toy was until recently one of the most flourishing industries in the town of Valsesia, Germany. At present their manufacture is chiefly carried on in Nuremberg.

It is interesting to note that this odd little instrument—if such it may be called—was in use as early as the sixteenth century. This is proved by a document still in existence dated 1524 which states that a certain Aneca Galeucia of Otrussia purchased from Giovanni Aronta, a wood at a place called Ovago di Curgo for "donzinas sacarina de rebbibis." It may be explained here that this toy is still known in Germany by its ancient name "ribebbe." When and for what reason it was designated a "Jew's harp" is a question that baffles research.

During the last century a vast number were manufactured at the village of Bocerio, averaging near five thousand daily.

Impulse as it is in construction no less than twenty tools are employed in its manufacture, involving twenty-five operations at the forge and vice.

It consists of two separate parts, the bow and the tongue. The former is subdivided into legs and circle, whilst the latter consists of the tongue proper and the hook, by means of which the pulsations are produced with the agency of the finger.

Unlike some other toys its resources are not susceptible of development, but there are many of the rising generation in Europe (not in America) who still have a predilection for the ribebbe or the Jew's harp.

Bear in mind that the Union Pacific takes third-class passengers through on express trains.
