

IT MADE MONEY THIS YEAR.

The Omaha Fair has cleared all expenses.

YESTERDAY'S RECEIPTS PROFITS.

A fair crowd in attendance the last day of the exhibition—the magnificent speed bursts on the course.

The Fair of 1888 Ended.

The uniformly good weather and consequent splendid attendance has placed the Omaha Fair exhibition on its feet with money ahead.

The attendance yesterday was about the same as that of Wednesday, and the managers are happy in the fact that every dollar taken in now is clear profit.

A sale of stock on the north side of the track was the only unusual feature of yesterday.

Mr. Burgess came very near losing a valuable draught horse by the latter breaking through the covering of an oak forsaken well on the south side of the track.

Mr. Wagner, who lives at 620 North Seventeenth street, lost his best Joseph in a crowd at the fair grounds Thursday and the child has not been seen since.

One of the most unique features of the fair is the pair of horses, the property of Councilman Bedford, which are displayed in the art hall.

AMUSEMENTS.

ON THE TRACK.

Five Good Speed Events for Lovers of Horse Racing.

The unfinished 2:30 pace was the first event called yesterday afternoon, with Burkholder, who took two hours, Thursday afternoon, at the pole.

The horses were sent off on the second scoring. Burkholder was first to show front, with Oliver E. clinging close, John third and Pete McCoy in the rear.

Oliver E. made a fine start and passed Burkholder, and increased his lead at almost every stride, coming in under the wire three full lengths the best of Burkholder, who was one in advance of John, with Pete McCoy barely saving his distance.

Oliver E. again went to the front and never relinquished his position, being two lengths ahead of Burkholder second, John third and Pete McCoy last.

The fifth heat was almost a walk-a-way for Oliver E., who was sent off with a lead of the send-off, and gaining a lead of six or seven lengths simply jagged the race out.

Burkholder, who worked as if he had just finished a hard day's work, and again fell back a poor third. In the three quarters Oliver E. made a fine start and passed Burkholder, and increased his lead at almost every stride, coming in under the wire three full lengths the best of Burkholder, who was one in advance of John, with Pete McCoy barely saving his distance.
