Dry Goods. 1st premium to Union sewing machine. A lecture will be given for the benefit of the W. C. T. U. in the Christian church, corner Twentieth and Capitol avenue, next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, by Mrs. O. A. Carr, on her travels around the world. The lady has visited every continent. Admission 25 cents. Tickets for sale at all drug stores. Among her many interesting and amusing reminiscences of travel her thrilling description of a fire at sea, a burial at sea, her narrow escape from armed Bedouins on the banks of the Jordan, and her amazing account of a donkey ride along the Nile are alone ample compensation for the small admission fee. Of Mrs. Carr's standing as a scholar it were useless to speak. After six years of travel in foreign lands and fifteen years' successful lecturing, she has received from the Missouri State university, she needs no commendation from her friends. We bespeak for her a large hearing from the intelligent people of Omaha.

1st premium to Union sewing machine. Omaha Business College. A beautiful display of plain and ornamental penmanship. Our state and county fairs are a source of growing pride and satisfaction to our citizens. The exhibits have grown from a few vegetables and a small herd of stock until it includes the products of the farm, the workshop, the model school, Mr. J. T. Dyer, who were astonished and pleased to learn the wide scope of the work accomplished. Its purpose is nothing less than to fit young men and women for the actual duties of life. What could be grander mission. No man who has been in life may be a thorough business education will assist you. Did you ever think that 95 per cent of all those who embark in mercantile pursuits fail? When we contemplate this fact we see how necessary is the special school. The business man may be sober, moral, energetic and well posted. Every one of these points receive especial attention from this school. Their course embraces everything necessary to a thorough business education, including Geography, Penmanship and Commercial Law. The Omaha Business College is located at the corner of 16th and Capitol avenue. Careful inquiry elicited the fact that this college is all it claims to be, and that its display was a fair index of what it is.

1st premium to Union sewing machine. Heyn at the Fair. Mr. Heyn, Omaha's favorite photographer, has done himself proud. Three great premiums at one and the same photographs, one on engravings and one on portraits. His display was elegant and comprehensive. Mr. Heyn has secured that accomplished artist, Mr. H. A. Collins, exclusively for his own property. Strangers to our city should visit this great gallery. The immense patronage enables Mr. Heyn to employ the most skillful workmen to be obtained, and also to equip his gallery with the latest appliances. Every picture in his display was a gem. Nothing but first class work can leave his hands. His prices are within reach, his studio the most central in the city, and his work is praised by every tongue.

1st premium to Union sewing machine. The Capito's New Painting. Washington Star: At present there is nothing being done with the belt of historic frieze work in the rotunda. It is proposed now to erase one of the panels, that has been completed and substitute for it another subject. The objectionable panel represents the death of Tecumseh. Colonel Dick Johnson is holding an old flintlock horse pistol under the nose of the Indian, who is recoiling as if he did not like the smell of powder. A horse is falling with the Indian in rather an awkward heap. The architect of the capitol has come to the conclusion that the picture does not add to the general effectiveness of the work, and moreover, the event is not important enough to be handed down to posterity in this way. Neither is it known to be true that Johnson's horse-pistol did the work. It is known only that the famous Indian was killed in that battle. This scene will be replaced by one representing the first settlement of the great northwest territory. It will be a court scene of frontier character, with a group of Indians in the background watching with wonder and forebodings the planting of civilization on their territory. This subject has been the most suitable subject for a historic panel, as it marks a most important step in the development of the vast wealth and resources of the country, and was a turning point in the nation's history. It has been definitely decided that the court scene of the belt will represent the driving of the last nail in the completion of the Union Pacific railroad, uniting the coasts of the continent. General Grant was present at the ceremony, and his features, together with those of some other prominent men, will be included in the group.

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK.

The Origin and Invention of the Horological Machine. All measurement of time is wholly arbitrary in its character, because the actual and that four clocks agree only as to local time on four days in the year. On June 14, August 14 and December 24, this applies equally to all local standards used in this country. The local standard of time is the local time of the country at the same time would seriously interfere with the local time of the country. In 1850, Prof. Abney suggested the adoption of four time belts for use in this country, based on the 15, 45, 75 and 125 degrees of longitude. There was to be just one hour difference in clock time between each two of these points. The change caused by important differences anywhere, save in places where two belts meet, and then in passing from one belt to another, there is just one hour difference in time. The plan is the simplest and most convenient that could be devised. The early history of clocks and watches is enveloped in much obscurity. It would be almost impossible to point out any individual who could with propriety be called the inventor. Striking clocks were known in Italy as early as the 14th century. The middle of the 14th century seems to be the time which affords the first evidence of the existence of regulated horological machines. The first regulated horological machine was a clock erected at Strasbourg, about the year 1360. It was a clock regulated in time by means of a pendulum. The first regulated horological machine is neither of so ancient a date as some writers suppose, nor, as the more recent invention of the last two centuries, and the inventor is not certainly known. So numerous have been the improvements in watches and timepieces within the last few years that the enumeration of the names of the inventors would occupy a considerable space.
