A marriage license was issued yesterday to Paul C. Anderson and Stena Anderson,

There will be no meeting of the board of trade this evening, but a special meeting is called for Thursday night. The funeral of the nine-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Burke took place from the family residence at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Lon Delos Jenks, a pupil at the state institution for the derf and dumb, died Saturday night of lung fever, aged thirteen years. The remains were forwarded yesterday to his home at Independence, Iowa.

The remains of John McAilister, who died here Sunday afternoon, were taken last even-ing to Villisca for interment. A large de-tachment of the I. O. O. F., of which organization he was a member, escorted the body from the house to the depot. The many friends of J. W. Cooper tendered that gentleman a surprise party Saturday evening at his residence, 12? Benton street, the occasion being the thirty-ninth anniver-sary of his birthday. About thirty couples participated in the festivities, which were kept up until a late hour. The young ladies in the northwestern part of the city will give a concert at an early date in the Baptist church, corner of Eighteenth street and Fourth avenue. The proceeds of the entertainment will go to the Homeof the Friendless. An excellent musical and literary programme is being prepared. Messrs. Day, Wright, Hannan, Besbe, Farrell, Moore, Shugart, Officer, Leonard Ever-ett, F. Wies, and T. J. Evans, constituting the paper mill committee of the board of trade, are requested, by the chairman, to meet at board of trade rooms this evening at 8 o'clock. Definite action must be taken at this meeting.

In the article on the paving which appe in The Bee yesterday morning, the type said, in speaking of the 6 per cent, twenty year improvement bonds, that the improve ment tax was made the highest of any for the benefits received. The word "lightest" was what was written and the compositor is accountable for the mistake. The improve-ment tax is the lightest that the citizens are called upon to bear.

Yesterday morning Justice Biggs united in marriage Paul Christian Anderson and Stena Anderson. The groom was granted a divorce from his first wife last week. He was engaged to Miss Stena before the divorce was granted and wanted to marry her a week ago but his attorney advised him to wait until the court made him a free man, otherwise he would have a thorny path to tread. He could hardly wait for the novelty of being a single man again to wear off before he took upon himself another wife.

Some time ago the members of the police and fire departments were required to pur-chase regulation uniforms. During the hot weather the men were allowed some privi-leges in the way of dressing for comfort, and were permitted to discard the regulation caps and helmets. On the 1st of September orders were issued for the fire department to orders were issued for the fire department to resume their caps and full uniform, but the policemen still appear in headgear of all styles and stages. As the men are already provided with helmets, no great expense is entailed by wearing them, and the weather is certainly cool enough. What is the mat-ter, chief!

Work For Vagrants.

Chief Lucas has taken a step that bids fair to solve the vag question very effectually. Some time ago the council passed an ord i nance providing for the working of vags and other inmates of the city jail, but did nothing in the way of enforcing it. For weeks it was a dead letter and promised to remain so. The chief of police determined to enforce this ordinance and accordingly laid in a sup-ply of shovels and hoes. Officer Tyson was detailed as "tramp boss," and as soon as the prisoners were sentenced yesterday morning they were turned over to the above named officer, who proceeded to equip them with tools, and then started them to work cleaning the gutters on Bryant street. There was no difficulty whatever in getting the men to work. In fact, it was generally remarked that they did nearly double the work of the men employed by the street commissioners in the same length of time The new plan promises to be a grand suc cess, and the streets will be cleaned without expense to the city. Officer Tyson sees that the work is done thoroughly and keeps track of the tools. His orders on this point are strict. Said the chief: "Tyson, these shovels are charged up to you, and if one is lost you must pay for it. If a man runs let him go, but don't let him take his charged with the said that the but don't let him take his shovel with him.

When Dan Carrigg is out of sight there are more betting democrats in the city than you can shake a stick at, but when he comes around no one has anything to say. Even he fellows who were just dying to stake their wealth on Cleveland but a moment before crawl down in their boots and tremble for fear Carrigg will give them an opportunity to show their insincerity. Yesterday norning one of the faithful disciples of the great unwashed party accosted The Bee man at the corner of Main and Broadway and delivered himself after the following

Seven Times Seven-Sixty. It is said that all of the saloons in the city were closed Sunday, and such was probably the case, but it has been the custom of the soakers for so long a time to get gloriously drunk on the Sabbath that the force of habit was too strong to be resisted, and they continued in the "good-old-way" (?) last Sunday to such an extent that before evening the cooler was nearly as full as the inmates. It was a sorry looking set that answered the roil call yesterday morning. They were all there, from the simple fifteen cent drunk to the double-complex-whole-month's-pay-and-a-week's-steady-booze-whirl subject, who had been having an unusually

Every few days when local items are scarce and uninteresting, and the political editor is-tired, the Globe publishes a column of names of purported persons who have renounced allegiance to the republican party and espoused the democratic cause for reasons of pure pa(y)triotism or mugwumpery. This not only furnishes matter supposed to be interesting reading for the unterrified, but it also saves considerable composition, for the matter can be left standing and new names and locations be filled in two or three times a week. All the care it is necessary to exercise is to locate the converts in the east-ern states, thereby avoiding any danger of successful contradiction.

City Council Proceedings.

At the council meeting last evening Mayor Rohrer and Aldermen Lacy, Waterman, Weaver and Knepher answered roll call, The Bebbington matter was expected to come up for final disposal, but as Alderman Metcalf was absent the matter went over. Wickham, $510, was referred to the finance committee. E. A. Wickham protested against such referment as he needs the money, but it remained with the committee for examination. The bill of the same con-tractor for intersection paving at Twelfth and Broadway was allowed after deducting the amount due from the Union Pacific company for paying between street car tracks. Bid of John Gilbert for $270 was alowed. Bill of the same for $19 was referre back to the city engineer to ascertain who did the original work. This bill was for putting sewer connection in the alley back of the Creston house, which was supposed to have been done years ago, but was omitted.

London and Continental Streets. Woman's World: To what is it to be raced, this utter absence of all kinds of charms and color, which surrounds street life in London as with the dry sand wastes of a desert? Is it due to limate, to character, to atmosphere, to education? Why is it that a milk cart is a picturesque object in France or Flanders, and a hideousone in Kensington or St. John's Wood? Why is a black barge moored by Rialto delightful, and moored by London Bridge frightful? Why is the man who sells mirlitons in the Trocadero a gay and picturesque spectacle, and the man who sells paper toys along Islington a disconsolate and painful looking object? Why does a vender of gauffres in the Montagne de la Cour make one wish for a pencil to sketch him, and an ambulent merchant of cakes in Holborn suggest only dead ties, chalk, saffron and general misery? Why is the most ordinary object or person in the cities of the continent picturesque, and all similar things and people in the streets of London dingy and unlovely? Why? Is the cause atmosphere. architecture, national temperment, cli matic influences, insular melancholy, or what is it?

The reasons may be various and com-plicated; the fact is plain and painful. am inclined to believe that the monotony of ugliness in the London streets -buildings constructed without an idea, without a meaning, without a single grace, without any charm of light and shade, of proportion or of form—repeating its own nullity again and again, as an idiot repeats its mumbling nothing-affects the minds of those who live amongst it, and the sickly anæmia of the factory or the serving girl becomes the dyspepsia and the on edom of the woman of fashion; and I believe the hypochondria of English men and women is due much less to climate than it is to the absence of beauty about them in their daily lives, and to the unenjoying haste in which they live. The influences of beauty on the mind are never sufficiently remembered nor esteemed. The anxiety which would make one commit suicide in a back street off Eaton square, seems but a mote in the air as we glide through the silver water to Venetian islets, or see the sunshine glisten through the gay green leaves of the Pre Catalan or the rich vernal aisles of the Bois du Cambre. The pall of smoke which is drawn like a stifling curtain around London, shuts out lovliness and light, and mirth, their sister. Society has a substitute for these in what is called Pleasure, but the streets, and the people in the streets, have no compensation for their darkness. What is beautiful in London, the luxurious interiors, the charming women, the spectacle of great parties in great houses, the profusion of hothouse flowers covering walls and staircases, these the multitude can never see. the beauty and wealth of a great society are displayed in its architecture, in its gardens, in its public pageantries and festivals, then the body of the public is a sharer in and a gainer by them; what is left of beauty in London is wholly shut away behind the iron gates of court vards and the hall doors of noble man-

A Little Social Episode.

Among the many amusing episodes that vary the routine of life at the different seaside resorts this summer was one which illustrates the truism of Bulwer's assertion, "It is difficult to know which do us the most injury in life, our enemies with the worst intentions or our friends with the best." It happened that in the crowd of pleasure-seekers at one of our seaside caravansaries were two ladies who in early times on the coast held the positions respectively of mistress and maid-of-all-work but owing to one of the metallic convulsions, producing upheaval of our social system. the two ladies were now upon equal footing in point of wealth. Mrs. Always-rich, we will call her, was, however, of a more distingue clique than her some "help," and consequently time never met her socially. Upon the occasion we speak of she was the center of an admiring group, who were listening eagerly to her suggestion for a four-in-hand drive and picnic to be given the end of the Suddenly one of her friends jumped up, and approached a lady who was passing along the veranda, said:
"Oh, Mrs. —, I must make you acquainted with my friend, Mrs. Alwaysrich who will, I know, be so happy to have you go along to her pienie, and suiting the action to the word, she drew the newcomer into the circle and presented her to her quondam mistress. Those who were in the secret of days gone by were curious to see the result and were not a little amazed to hear the whilom help reply. "I think we used to be acquanted wanst," but Mrs. Alwaysrich said with chilling hauteur: "Madam, you have the advantage of me." Needless to say she was not included in the picnic list, and the officious friend who introduced her with that idea, received a decided snub for the rest of the season from the Alwaysrich clique.
