W. H. Beck has found the gold watch and chain lost by him about two months ago. It was found in a pile of rubbish in the rear of the Mint, where he dropped it. THE NEWS IN COUNCIL BLUFFS.

The Salvation Army Has Thin Ranks But Intends Staying.

THE PROPOSED PONY EXPRESS. Will It Be Mainly For Bringing Whisky From Omaha?—Personal and Other Brief Bits of News About Iowa.

The Salvationists Will Stay. "How is the Salvation army prospering?" inquired a Bee man of one of the workers recently. "Oh, we are getting along pretty well," was the answer.

"Of course we don't expect very large audiences during the summer months."

"Why is that?"

"Well, you see, the majority of the people who attend our meetings are laboring people—many of the poorer class—and after working hard all day they do not feel like coming out to any religious service in the evening. They have so little time to spend with their families that they prefer to put their evenings in with them, either at home or out walking."

"Your evening parades are not as large as formerly."

"No. You see the above fact partially accounts for that. Then again, most of our converts are made during the winter. Then they parade with us. In the spring some of them go away from the city; others get lukewarm, and do not take the interest they did at first. In fact, we have about the same experiences that the churches have. The weather, special services, extra attractions and many other things largely govern these matters everywhere. You know what a great time we had when Mr. Booth was here? We are going to have another halloahigh meeting this month."

"How about backsliders? I notice every little while some of your members go back on the army and get to 'judging,' or in some scrap or other."

"Oh, yes; we must expect that. In all religious work a certain per cent of the new converts do not stick, and, of course, we suffer the same way."

"But it seems a larger per cent fall away from the army than from the churches," persisted the reporter.

"That may be, but I hardly think so. You see most of us have been here since some of us were well-known to the police in the past; so of course, when one of the boys fall down the police know it and it gets into the papers. We do not have many backsliders. Many a poor man today blesses the army, for it has been the means of their salvation."

"Do the police bother you much in your parades?"

"Not much. We are careful of the duties which we meet here, and I don't believe there has been an incident for a year that we are responsible for."

"What are your purposes for the future?"

"I suppose you mean if we are here to stay. Of course we are. Did you ever know of a grand religious revolution to fail? We are bound to stay. The army has its special place and work, and it will do it. Yes, the army will stay."

The Salvation corps of this city is making arrangements to celebrate its second anniversary of its establishment here, on the 12th, 13th and 14th of the present month. Several officers of the army from other points will be present, among them Captain Shilts, formerly stationed here. Captain Cadajans and wife and Lieutenant Hendy, of Omaha, and Lieutenant Barling, of Oskaloosa. The programme will consist of a harvest thanksgiving and anniversary meeting Friday evening; banquet and jubilee meeting Saturday evening, and a jubilee meeting all day Sunday.

Not a Water Route. "Say, Bee man, this new pony express business comes just in the nick of time," said one of the city officials yesterday.

"Indeed! How so?" inquired the scribe.

"Well, they are gradually closing down on the saloons, and it has got so that all the better-class of liquor dealers have been driven out of the business. It won't be long until the others will have to shut up shop, and then where is the booze to come from? Of course, there will be joints all over the city where those who are on can get all they want, but there are a great many of our citizens who like a drink occasionally, yet they would not patronize these 'holes in the wall.' Now, this pony express will settle the whole thing. All a man will have to do will be to call up a mounted messenger by telephone, send him over to Omaha and in less than half an hour he will be back with a pint, quart or gallon, or whatever has been ordered. The opening of the new bridge cuts rates for crossing right down to hard pan, and the paving of Broadway gives a splendid road for fast travel. Do you suppose that there is business enough here outside of this trans-Missouri liquor trade to carry any such enterprise as a pony express line? It is evident to anyone familiar with the situation that there is not, besides consider who is the prime mover in the scheme. Billy Beck is an old saloon man, and he isn't going to make a change at this late day. I tell you this is a very neat little plan to dodge the prohibition law. Just wait until the thing gets to running nicely, and if those boys don't carry fifty bundles containing liquor to one of our saloons, I will make you a present of the First National bank."

The Bee man walked on up Broadway pondering over what he had heard, when he met W. H. Beck, the gentleman to whom the council had issued the permit to operate the pony express line. After discussing the proposed enterprise for some time, the pencil pusher referred to the excellent opportunities offered for bringing over liquor from Omaha, and inquired whether it would be a part of the work of the messenger boys. "I can't tell anything about it," said Mr. Beck, "but it is very probable that they will be sent on some errands of that kind. It is none of my business what they carry so long as they don't try to carry a load for an express wagon. I shall keep thirty or forty ponies, and some of them will be in front of the office all the time ready for a call. Certain streets are to be set apart for our use, where the ponies can be sent along at good speed. We will deliver packages, take orders, or anything of that kind; in fact, do the regular work of messenger boys in a Little less than one-tenth of the time required by a boy on foot. There will be a good deal of business between this city and Omaha. If you order a District Telegraph by the office don't insist on knowing what the carrier, neither shall I. You order a boy and pay him for his services, and that is all there is to it. I shall get fixed ready for business as soon as the council prepares and passes the necessary ordinance, and I think we will have all the business we can attend to."

Ready For the Finishing Touches. This week's work on the electric motor line will greatly change the appearance of things. A car load of poles has been received and the work of setting them will be commenced on Broadway this morning. The iron has been laid from Seventeenth street to the bridge, and the line is in good running order for that distance. The track is also laid across the bridge, with the exception of the last span. The bridge is now floored and a watchman was placed thereon yesterday to keep the terms from driving across. The wires have been attached between the poles on Avenue A. The power house is completed and the boilers are being set. The work of setting the engines will be commenced to-day, a man having just arrived here to take charge of that work. The cars have not yet been shipped from Pullman, but are expected to arrive here on a time. By the end of the present week a great deal of the finishing up work will be completed, and the line will be nearly ready for operation.

A Dog-Faced Girl. In a lonely cabin on the banks of Otsele creek, in the town of Willett, Corland county, New York, says the New York Sun, may be found a remarkable freak of nature, known through the country as the "dog-faced girl." Here mother and daughter, named respectively Orilla and Sarah Walls, live alone, and in poverty, gaining a precarious support by picking berries and gathering roots and herbs, and from gifts at the hands of the numerous visitors whose curiosity brings to their hut.

The peculiarity of the dog-faced girl's features lies in the chin, mouth and nose, which protrude from the head and neck to an excessive and unnatural degree, and in a shape strikingly like a dog's snout or muzzle. Otherwise she is well formed and fully developed for a girl of fifteen years, and is notably robust and active. But she is weak-minded, and the wonderful thing about her imbecility is its canine characteristic in voice and movement.

Up to about ten years old the girl persisted in running about on all fours and in this posture she could outrun any child of her age. Her vocal utterances, also, were marvellously like the barking or howling of a dog. As she approached the period of womanhood she learned to walk erect, and her voice lost something of its canine tone, but her features and utterances are still so unmistakably dog-like as to attract marked attention and wonder.

She has a constant stream of visitors, including physicians and scientists as well as ordinary curiosity mongers, and these are told truthfully that her father, who died shortly after her birth, was in no way malformed or peculiar. Her mother is good looking in feature and figure, and ordinarily intelligent. None of the dog-faced girl's visitors have as yet suggested any plausible theory of the freak that gave her to the world.
