A canvass of the city is being made for the purpose of preparing a new directory. This is a need that should be met. With the many recent changes and additions, and with the worthless directory last published, this is a practically without any. A good directory, such as this company proposes publishing, should be heartily encouraged.

The invitations for the bridge celebration will be in readiness to-morrow, and all subscribers who desire to send out some of them are requested to call at the board of trade rooms to-morrow afternoon. Several parties who have refused to give a cent toward the celebration have shown themselves ready to send out invitations, but these have been reserved for actual subscribers. If there are more than enough for subscribers others will then be given a chance. The invitations are very handsome and will be greatly appreciated.

There were large audiences at Deoney's yesterday, both afternoon and evening, to see "A Cold Day," one of the most laughable comedies on the boards. It is very similar to "Two Old Crones," in fact the latter play is taken bodily from the former. For this reason the play last evening seemed a little dull, following as it did directly on the heels of the other one. The characters are well taken, and the singing and dancing are not to be excelled. The orchestra deserves excellent patronage, and will always be welcomed in this city.

THE BLUFFS IN ANCIENT DAYS

A Learned Opinion on the Recently Discovered Fossils.

THE RECEPTION TO TOM REED.

The Pulpit Themes To-day—A Newspaper Under the Hammer—The Wages Due From the Skipping Wells—Coming Rates.

Those Ancient Bones.

The public school museum is indebted to many friends for valuable presents from time to time. It now contains about four hundred specimens of native birds and twenty small mammals, and about the same number of reptiles, over one hundred sea shells, over one hundred geological specimens, consisting of rocks, ores, petrifications, fossils, etc.

During the past summer it has received from W. K. Keller, A. A. Parsons, H. W. Tilton and W. H. Casson, of this city, and Richard Ward, of Bloomer, the fossils described in the following letter from Dr. J. E. Todd, professor of natural sciences in Faber college and assistant United States geologist for Iowa, Nebraska and Dakota. These fossils are of considerable local and general interest. Superintendent McNaughton wishes to thank the donors for their gifts, and for their kindness and timely assistance in procuring these valuable specimens for the museum and furnishing a history and classification of the same.

"The specimens lately discovered in the gravel near Henton's station, which I had the pleasure of examining in your museum, are with little doubt teeth of the American Mammoth, and of a kind of horse not differing greatly from living horses. The three large teeth are those of Elephas Amund and other very closely resembling Elephas continentalis, the mammoth of the eastern continent. Some consider them varieties of the same species. A few specimens of the same have been found in Siberia with the flesh and all quite well preserved, frozen in mud and ice. They are remarkably alike to those from the root of the tusk to the end of the tail, and was nine feet four inches in height. The tusks were over twelve feet in length. It is generally supposed that the mammoth with man from the fact that rude drawings of it have been found in the caves of France. The fossils were found a few years since at Malvern, Ia., and is now in the museum of Faber college, with several vertebra and other bones apparently from the same animal.

"The tusk is over eight inches in diameter. The large bone in your collection obtained from Bloomer township, is the tibia or shin bone of a very like of the same animal and animal. They seem to have been more common in this region than the mammoth, which was extinct here, but had quite different teeth.

"The three teeth in a portion of jaw are the three front incisors, or pre-molars, in the lower jaw of a horse, very like the common species. It is remarkably like the one almost, if not quite, indistinguishable from the common one existed in North America in recent geological time, although none were found here by any of the geologists and paleontologists to have had no traditions concerning such an animal.

"After examining your specimens I proceeded to examine the locality where they were found. I fortunately found Mr. A. A. Parsons at the place and he very accomodatingly took me to show me the locality, and how they were deposited in the gravel. They were all found within a few feet of the bottom of the gravel in the western side of the bluff, fifteen to twenty feet above the bottom land, twenty-five to thirty feet below the top of the bluff and about 250 feet below the top of the bluff east. They may have been from ten to forty feet below the surface, according to the location, but that does not signify. They were clearly deposited with the gravel, and were not blown there, as it was blowing at a higher level, or as it is most likely, it was a current in a lake like expansion of the stream somewhat like Lake Pepin. They are all somewhat worn, indicating that their owners had then been some time dead. Since they were deposited eighty feet of gravel and sand, and over two hundred feet of yellow loam, the main constituent of the present bluffs, have been brought and laid down over them by the action of the great forces which by the melting of the great glaciers which filled the Minnesota and Des Moines valleys, and the James river valley, making them resemble the interior of Greenland of the present day. Besides these floods from the north and east, the Elkhorst, Platte, etc., were also the great forces which by their deluging the Rocky Mountains and the plains at that time. Nor does this account for more than half the time since these teeth were buried in the gravel, and the fact that some of the teeth were found in the same place. The great Lake Missouri was in time drained, the ice sheet gradually withdrew to its northern home and disappeared, and the present drainage of the country was established. It is to be hoped that the difference may be exercised by some one upon the ground to save all specimens of this sort which are unaccounted for, and that they are placed in your museum where they may be preserved and studied. By so doing valuable and perhaps entirely new light may be thrown on the conditions of that time long gone by. Hoping that the sum of human knowledge and enjoyment may be so increased."

The Woman's Christian association will meet with Mrs. Ross, on Willow avenue, Monday evening, at 8 o'clock. All members of committees are especially requested to be present.

Enthusiastic Over Reed. The reception tendered the Hon. Thomas B. Reed yesterday was a compliment alike to him and a credit to the people of Council Bluffs. It demonstrated the fact, if demonstration were needed, that "Jim Blaine" has a warm place in the hearts of the American people, so has "big-hearted Tom Reed."

It can be truthfully said that no speaker addressing himself to purely political questions has ever in Council Bluffs stood before an audience representing in a greater degree the intelligence of American citizenship.

Masonic temple was filled. Fully one-half the audience were ladies. Before the hour set for the address there was not a vacant seat in the hall. A detachment of the Young Men's Republican club was detailed to escort Mr. Reed from the residence of Mr. I. M. Frey, whose guest Mr. Reed was during his stay in the city. At 2:30 the escort entered the hall and Mr. Reed advanced to the platform round after round of applause greeted him. Upon the platform were the Hon. Joseph W. Keene, Colonel W. E. Sapp, C. E. Hari and others. Just before the speaker was introduced the Hon. W. H. M. Pusey came into the hall and was escorted to the platform amid a storm of applause.

At 2:45 the Hon. C. M. Hari called the assembly to order and nominated Mr. Lyman as chairman of the meeting. Without lengthy preamble Hari simply saying he wished to be at home again, he introduced Mr. Reed, who spoke for nearly an hour and a half, confining himself wholly to the question of the tariff. The address was much enjoyed by the audience, and at its close a large number of gentlemen crowded to the front and were introduced to the speaker. After these congratulations Mr. Reed was driven to the Broadway depot, and at 4:45 left for Omaha, where he was to speak during the evening.

A Newspaper Change. At 10 o'clock yesterday morning the property of the late Star Herald Printing company was sold at sheriff's sale to satisfy a mortgage held by Mrs. W. R. Vaughn. The task of one of a few years since was sold to Mrs. Vaughn, who proceeded to foreclose it. The property was sold to W. R. Vaughn, who bid it in for Mrs. Vaughn. Mr. Vaughn was seen in regard to the matter and stated that for some time a part of the stockholders had refused to advance a cent to pay any of the debts of the company, leaving the property to be sold by a sheriff's sale. Another source of trouble and annoyance was the alleged breach of contract of the United Press association. Mr. Vaughn had agreed to furnish the Herald with exclusive reports for this city, but violated the contract and furnished the same to the Globe. He said a suit for $100,000 was pending against him by the United Press association. It is understood that the entire plant will be moved to Omaha, where the Herald and the Daily Democrat, the latter owned by C. H. Churchill, Pat Swenson, C. H. Mitchell, E. A. Frothingham, D. A.
