Considerable excitement was occasioned at the store of Eiseman & Co. Saturday afternoon, when a case of three dozen fur caps was missed.

Later in the day a farmer returned the case, having taken it through mistake in place of a box given him by Mr. Eiseman.

M. Mott was run in last evening for disturbing the peace. He had been drunk for a week and did not know that an election had taken place.

His vigorous yell for Cleveland attracted the attention of a republican member of the police force and the bandanna waver was placed behind the bars.

It is reported that Mark Janett, the unfortunate man who died in this city of small pox two weeks ago, was a relative of Dr. Patton of this city.

A communication has been received from relatives in West Virginia, asking as to his treatment, etc. They will be here shortly to dispose of his effects.

Officer Casiek arrested a fellow giving the name of Norton for the larceny of four pairs of pants from the store of M. Marcus, Saturday evening.

The investigation was considered as usual, but there were but few of them. W. F. Lyons was arrested in Meyer's coal yard, where he was sleeping off the effects of a heavy potation, wrapped up in an overcoat supposed to have been stolen from him.

Several stories are told as to how the shooting occurred, but glaring discrepancies tend to disprove them. Brooks says that he was walking up street with Allen when some unknown party fired the shot from behind, but this is manifestly wrong, as the ball struck Allen in the forehead.

Dare To Be Like Daniel. Yesterday morning at Broadway Methodist church the Rev. D. C. Franklin fitly opened the week of prayer for the Young Men's Christian association by an address to young men.

He selected as a typical young man Daniel, as he is pictured in Holy Writ. He was "God's type of a perfect man."

The speaker said he was indebted largely for the thoughts embodied in this discourse to his experiences in college towns, where his intercourse with young men had been extensive and varied.

"Whatever may be our ideas concerning other matters, we all unite as to what constitutes a noble character," said the speaker. "Daniel is a lofty type of character, and whatever may be God's plan of determining a true man; whatever denominational lines may demand as such a character, we all unite in giving our mead of praise to the true man wherever we find him."

Like a mountain peak, which rises higher than all surrounding hills; the one which catches the first glow of the morning sun; which rests in the radiant glow of the rays of departing day; whose air is the purest; whose towering grandeur can be seen from all the lower heights; thus stands the young man who has an "excellent spirit within him."

He who would accomplish anything in this life, he who would imitate that which would conduce to his highest good must follow in the footsteps of those whose feet have not pressed velvet carpets, but whose way has been among the rocky ways which lead to the higher life.

The secret of a young man's success, said the speaker, is in his faculty of right principles. Having this fact settled, settles all other questions which come into a man's life.

The speaker deprecated the practice of carrying the so-called pleasures of the world into the practices of the christian. Dancing, card playing and kindred amusements were handled without gloves, and the way of the christian was laid out by the speaker in no unequivocal manner.

We are liable to imitate those with whom we associate their gait, speech, thought, etc," said he, "and to attempt to carry both without injury to the higher life, will result in entire failure and an ultimate loss of the soul."

"Remember, resemble, persevere, are the stepping stones which lead to success if they lay in the right direction. The old saw, 'In Rome do as the Romans do,' is a fallacy. Daniel would never have heard of him had he adopted this course of action."

If you expect success in business on account of social relations and intercourse and barter away your individuality, you make a serious mistake, for it cannot be accomplished by these methods."

In the matter of resisting temptation he said: "If you carry the civility and sweetness of David's life into yours you can resist all appeals to do wrong, and that, too, without giving offense."

"Do right because it's right," the speaker said, "was the cardinal principle of manhood. 'Make your principles manifest not by directly antagonizing the opposition, but by showing by actual experience which course of practice is the best—the most conducive to happiness and success.'"

He paid a glowing tribute to the praying mother, who through years of waywardness of her boy never falters in her faith and prayers. He then said that the times was insufficient to conclude the subject as he desired, and he would speak next Sunday evening upon the same subject.

On Tuesday, November 20, at 10 o'clock a. m. I will set up public auction the machinery and fixtures taken from the "General Terry." Place of sale, river bank, just below west end of Union Pacific bridge in Omaha.

HOW CHARLEY ALLEN WAS SHOT.

He Wildly Attacks an Officer—The Tax For the New Bridge—Offensive Partisanship—The Politician—Brief Mention.

Who Shot Allen? A shooting affray took place on Upper Broadway Saturday night that came near resulting fatally to Charles Allen, who has gained some local notoriety as a prize-fighter.

The story of the affair as told by eye-witnesses is as follows: Allen and Tom Brooks, another pugilist, became involved in a dispute in front of a saloon near the Ogden house stable, and finally began to fight. Allen pulled a knife and made a vicious slash at Brooks, cutting open his clothes across the abdomen, but without injuring him.

Brooks drew a revolver and fired at his antagonist, the ball taking effect in Allen's head. Allen fell to the ground stunned, and was removed to the office of Dr. Houghton, who dressed the wound. The bullet struck Allen squarely in the forehead at the edge of the hair, passing through his hat band.

The ball glanced along the skull, passing out at the side of the head over the ear. After having his wound dressed, Allen was able to go home, although considerably dazed. He visited the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. Lafenburg, yesterday forenoon, and created a disturbance, throwing things about the floor and smashing them, and several other acts of cussedness.

Mr. Lafenburg entered a complaint against him and he was arrested by Marshal Guannella. After taking him to the station the officer allowed to lock him up on account of his wounded condition, and allowed him to sit down by the stove in the office.

Officer Fowler, who was recently disabled by a sprained ankle, was among those sitting in the room and the first thing he knew of the matter was that one of the heavy brass jugs lying on the desk, hurled it at the officer with terrific force.

Fowler dodged, and the missile shattered the plastering behind him. Allen was at once seized by Deputy Marshal Barhyte and thrown behind the bars. A while later Barhyte fixed up a glass of medicine prescribed by the doctor and handed it to Allen, who prepared to drink it, and then, as though seized with some insane impulse, dashed it to the floor.

He was taken to the county jail and locked up for safe keeping. It is asserted by some that he is playing a part and feigning insanity, while others maintain that it is simply the innate cussedness of his disposition. He has entertained a strong dislike for Officer Fowler for some time, and his attack upon him can be easily accounted for.

If the key had struck the officer in the head, as it was aimed to do, it would undoubtedly have fractured his skull. Allen's reputation as a fighter is well known, and the police talk very strongly against him.

Several stories are told as to how the shooting occurred, but glaring discrepancies tend to disprove them. Brooks says that he was walking up street with Allen when some unknown party fired the shot from behind, but this is manifestly wrong, as the ball struck Allen in the forehead.

Major Lyman Stricken. Yesterday afternoon the report was circulated that Mayor Joseph Lyman had suddenly died. Inquiry revealed that about 2 o'clock, while sitting with his family at home, he had been stricken with epilepsy.

The attack was an uncommonly severe one. Dr. Macrae, the family physician, was immediately called. The stricken man lay for a long time as one dead, but finally the attack passed away.

Last evening he was resting easily and with good promise of a speedy restoration to health. It is said that this is his third attack, the first having occurred ten years ago and the second during his residence in Washington.
