Mr. Ed Pierce, who was paving inspector over the work done by McAdams & Amberg, has been placed in charge of this work.

Murray and Murphy, in "Our frish Visitors," held the boards at Dohany's last evening. They drew a good house and gave a highly pleasing perform-ance. The music of the orchestra was one of the principal features and was well received. If the management of the opera house would secure such a musical attraction its effect would be speedily noticed in the increased size of the audiences.

It is stated that the Second ward will be divided into two precincts before another election. There are about 1,400 voters in this ward, and the work en-tailed upon the election boards is very arduous, to say nothing of the inconvenience to voters. If the voting is held off until afternoon, it is almost impossible for the ward to poll a full vote. The proposed move is a step in the right direction and will be appreciated.

Now that the celebration is over, and the tar barrels are burned, the attention of horsemen is called to the iron hoops left as ghostly reminders of the big pow-wow. These hoops are dangerous to the horse's legs, and as they are scattered in the streets are a great nui-sance. Horses are liable to be cut and lamed by them. As the republicans as well as democrats pay taxes here, it would be well for the city authorities to have the hoops removed.

There is a great deal of complaint about the condition of the road between here and Crescent City. About a mile from the city limits is a deep gulch, around which the road bends. It is perfectly level ground to the edges of this gully, and around it there is no manner of protection. It is surprising that no serious accident has as yet occurred at this point, for there is nothing to prevent a team, driven on a dark night, from plunging headlong into this gully. It is in Garner township, and the township authorities should spend $10 here and give protection to the traveling public.

Democratic Supervisors.

Although the count is not yet completed, the indications are that Samuel Underwood will be re-elected county supervisor by about 120 majority; and that Charles Alexander will receive about 150 majority. Underwood was severely scratched throughout the county, and was elected on republican votes given him in this city. He has served the county well, and his friends are glad to see him re-elected. It is said that he was thought by the democrats to be altogether too honest, hence their lack of support. He will continue to do business at the old stand notwithstanding.

Counting the Vote.

The board of county supervisors met at noon yesterday to canvass the votes cast in this county at the last election. The work was not completed last evening and will be continued to-day. Tomorrow morning a full report of the vote of the townships will be given. The vote of the precincts of this township for township officers was as follows:

The Electric Motor Rates. It is not fully determined what the rates will be on the electric motor line between Council Bluffs and Omaha. The company is discussing the matter. Of course the company is bent on having the venture prove a profitable one. Few would offer any objection to the company making a fair profit on the investment, but there is much anxiety to have the rates so low as to enable men of moderate incomes to live in Council Bluffs and do business or labor in Omaha. The company has been figuring how to offer such rates as would accommodate these classes without reducing the expected revenue and causing a loss. The city charter of the company provides: "That the said company shall in no case charge each passenger car-ried on said railway and across said bridge to any part of its street railway lines in the city of Council Bluffs to its ten (10) cents for each person, and not to exceed 5 cents within the limits of the city of Council Bluffs." The officials of the company declare that they cannot make a commutation rate, if they are obliged to stick to the 10 cent rate for transients. The plan seems to be to get the council to permit the company to charge 15 cents for a trip from Council Bluffs to Omaha, or 25 cents for a round trip, and then make commutations from that amount to 5 or 6 cents for the accommodation of certain classes. The company figures that the increase on transients will be sufficient to allow for the decrease on regulars. It is urged that 15 cents each way or 25 cents for the round trip would not be objectionable to transients, or citizens crossing only occasionally, and that these would about as soon pay 25 cents as 20 cents. The company would then be able to put on trains in the morning and at night, for western terminus in Omaha to exceed the accommodation of workingmen and others, and make a low fare for commutation. The Union Pacific now has such trains between the packing houses and Omaha, and make ten rides for 50 cents. It is claimed that if the people object to the transient rate the company will simply abide by the the rate now estab-lished by ordinance and make the fare

10 cents each way.

The matter is to be presented to the council, and the action of that body, and the voice of the people will deter mine what the new tariff will be.

About daylight yesterday morning a young German, giving the name of August Walter, appealed to Officer Cusick for assistance. He said that he had been robbed of $737 in a lower Broadway saloon. He was from Chicago, but had worked all summer for a farmer near Sioux City. He came to Missouri Valley and met a friend there. The friend did not know that he had money, and proposed that they walk to this city, which they did Sunday afternoon. They entered a saloon and he displayed his roll. They drank considerable during the evening and visited several places in the city. It was after midnight when they visited the saloon above referred to, and he was roboed. He had a fine overcoat, but his friend was wearing it as they started to come out. Just as they got outside the friend grabbed his pocketbook and was out of sight before the astonished Teuton fully realized what had happened. The pocketbook contained $37 in money and a draft on a Chicago bank for $700 officer advised him to telegraph to Chicago to stop payment on the draft, but the fellow had no money and decided to visit Omaha and see if he could find his missing "friend."

Too Good Republicans. Neil Voorhis, foreman of hose house

No. 1, and Peter Kuykendall, foreman of hose house No. 3, severed their connections with the fire department vesterday morning. They received communications from Chief Walters Sunday afternoon to the effect that their services could be dispensed with after Monday morning. It was stated in yesterday morning's BEE that such a move was contemplated. It is understood that Chief Walters alleges that Voorhis disputed the authority of his superiors and was not in sympathy with the administrative power. The nature of the charges against Kuykendall is not known, but they are probably similar to the others. The two men discharged are republicans, and are proud to acknowledge that they voted the republican ticket. There are others in the department who have formerly voted the republican ticket, but it is stated that in order to keep their jobs they now insist that they cast their ballots for the democratic nominees at the recent election. Voorhis is succeeded by J. W. Rapalye at No. 1, and James Bradley becomes foreman of No. 3.

It is urged that both of the promoted men are republicans, and that the change is not made on account of poli-There seems to be very good reasons why Bradley is not discharged. The simple fact of the case is that the department can not get along without him. He is the electrician, and his services are indispensable. He was recently laid off for ten days on account injuries he received by being assaulted on the street. Less than a week afterwards something got out of order on the police alarm, and Bradley was sent for. He refused to work, sav ing that he was laid off. He was immediately reinstated, in order to perform the work. The discharged firemen were not even given an opportunity to resign. They were notified in a most ungentlemanly and discourteous manner that they were "expelled." The following is a copy of the letter received

He joined the department in November, 1868, just twenty years ago. He has always been faithful and trustworthy and was one of the most valuable men in the department. He asked why he was discharged, and was informed by Chief Walters that he understood that Vorhes had criticised him. Vor-hes denied this, but the chief had nothing more to offer. It served very well as an excuse, and had probably as much truth in it as any other charge that could be trumped up.

Some Highly Moral Democrats. The Local democracy are reforming all at once, and think that betting is entirely wrong. It will be remembered that a few weeks ago Dan Carigg the Manhattan, to the extent of $500. Since the election they have been very sore over the matter, and now propose to get even with Carigg for beating them, by turning over the money to the school fund. They will take advantage of the law on gambling, and the stakeholder, who is a well known con-tractor of this city, will be required to pay the money to the treasurer of the school board. This sudden attack of morality (?) on the part of the unterrified supporters of demorracy is such a violent change for them that it is feared that it may not be lasting, but the republicans evince a forgiving disposition and express the hope that they are departing from the error of their ways for all time.

How the Great Artist Was Secured to Create the Role of Juliet. The Paris Figuro prints an interesting story of the way in which Mme. Patti was engaged to create the rule of Juliet in Gounod's opera of "Romeo and Juliet," which is to be presented in Paris under the direction of the composer on the 28th inst., and of the care which was taken to surprise M. Gounod with the good news. On October 23 Messrs. Ritt and Gailbar I, directors of the opera, were consulting M. Guonod in reference to the rehearsals, when a telegram was handed to M. Cailbard. He tore it open nurriedly, glanced rapidly first at the signature and then at the contents, and then excitedly handed it to Gounod. The composer wiped his glasses and began to read, his face lighting up as his eye passed from line to line, and at the close of the reading he grasped Gail-hard's hand and shook it warmly, while tears of joy tilled his eyes. Here is the dispatch which so sensibly affected the great composer: M. Gailhard, Director of the Opera, Paris: My Dear Comeans: I could not have been more pleasantly touched than by the attack which you have made on me near Craig-y-Nos castle. You invite me to take part in the execution of an artistic chief d'œuvre conducted by the master himself, to create Juliet at the opera. I answer you, yes.

When the composer's evidences joy had somewhat moderated, M. Gail-hard related to him the circumstances under which Patti had consented to sing the part, and explained to him that the negotiations had been kept seeret in order that he might not be too severely disappointed, should the great artist decline the work. On Oct. 20 M. Gailhard took the train from Paris, having previously telegraphed to Patti that he was coming, and the following day at dinner he appeared at the castle

Craig-y-Nos, in Wales. "I will wager," said the diva, as she welcomed the director, "that I know what brings you here. You have come to make propositions to me for the exposition. "You have lost your wager," answered M. Gailhard; "I don't want you for the exposition; I want you at once. 'At once! What do you mean? A benefit? A charity concert? "Better than that. We are preparing for Romeo at the opera; will you be the Juliet?"

"You are serious in proposing this to "Do I look like a joker?"
"I beg pardon! This is such a sur-And when do you want me?

and we will wait for you. "It seems to me that I am dreaming," exclaimed Patti, "but it's such a deli-cious dream. To create a role, and such a role, at the opera in Paris before the public which I love so well, which has so spoiled me, and whose approval I value so highly! But the prospect you open to me is too beautiful! I am afraid!"

"Afraid!" fairly shouted M. Gailhard; "you, who have sung Juliet more than a hundred times, the role which you love the best and in which you have von some of your greatest triumphs!" "Yes: but I have always sung it in Italian.

"And Marguerite, and Valentine; did you sing them in Italian at the old opera? Have you forgotten those deli-cious nights?" "What a tempter you are! Shall we Patti took the French part which M. Gailhard had brought with him, seated herself at the piano, and with her golden voice rendered the celebrated waltz song of the opera. M. Gailhard was in ecstacies. "I will not leave this castle," he exclaimed, "without your signature to the engagement." Patti was not in such a hurry to sign. She insisted that she must have time to exinsisted that she must have time to examine the entire work in French, and promised to give her answer in two or three days. "And for my own sake," three days. "And for my own sake," she added, "more than for yours, I hope that it will meet your wishes. Say to M. Gounod that I am touched to the bottom of my heart by the honor which he has done me, and that if I recoil before it, it is only through mistrust of my-
