The Sunday round-up of the police failed to materially increase the number of boarders at the city bastile. The cool weather seemed to have a depressing effect on the boozers, and they did not show up. For order and quiet, it was a model Sabbath.

The house is quarantined, and all possible precautions taken to prevent the spread of the contagion.

Nothing has been heard lately in regard to the new pest Louse to be erected by the city. At last accounts a plan had been adopted and grounds purchased near Big lake, but so far as can be learned no contract for the erection of the building has been awarded. It was stated that the house would be built as soon as possible.

The board of trade meets Tuesday evening to consider the matter of a new union depot. Most of the needed ground this explanation was given, introduchas been purchased, and it seems that the enterprise should be pushed to a speedy completion. Several of the railways need new local depots, and need them badly. They have been waiting to see what would be the outcome of the union depot project. If it is delayed much longer they will begin the building of local depots. Then the union depot will not materialize for years

The Whisky War Transferred to the Country Justice Shops - Two-Round Fight on Broadway -All About Town.

A Quiet Sun day.

The streets were very quiet yesterlay, being altogether too muddy for pleasant driving. The sun came out about 11 o'clock, and the snow which fell on the preceding day disappeared rapidly. By 4 o'clock very little of it remained, and that was in the shadows of the buildings. The sidewalks were not in a particularly inviting condition n the morning but the attendance at the various churches was quite large, notwithstanding that fact. The usual throng of Sunday afternoon prome-naders remained indoors until late in the day, when a number of them appeared and the streets in the central part of the city presented quite a lively appearance for an hour or so. The Sunday delegation of Omaha visitors failed to materialize and the city presented much the same appearance as on the Sundays previous to the opening of the new bridge.

A Church With No Creed.

With the rapidly increasing population in the lower part of the city has come the demand for schools and churches within that immediate area. In the matter of churches the people are partially supplied, several missions having been established; and are supported by various denominations. While these are doing good work for the people and the denominational irterests represented, there is one which represents no creed and is supported in the interest of no especial church. Its maintenance is for the diffusion of religious truth, the leading of men and women into a better life. Being unsectarian, persons of every shade of religious belief gather there and worship. Preaching services, Sunday school and prayer meetings are regularly held and well attended. Judged by its fruits the Overton mission is a successful depart-ure from the ordinary and generally practised rules of religious work.

Yesterday morning a representative of THE BEE visited the mission. It is located on South Seventeenth street. Its internal fixtures are plain almost to severity, but very neat, and to the one who attends church to worship it is sufficiently attractive. The Rev. Mr.

Alexander occupied the pulpit and preached a very excellent discourse.
His subject was the "New Birth" as explained by Jesus. As preliminary he ing the the different persons of the text and the positions they occupied in the church and state. Nicodemus' failure to apprehend the meaning of the command "Ye must be born again," the speaker said, showed the condition in which every sinner is. As an abstract proposition it was difficult to accomplish, and the church itself does not give the light it should upon the subject because it is not made as simple as it really is. Repentance and baptism are the beginnings of conversion. Then the man is a "new creature in Christ Jesus." From this he grows up into Christ. The analogy of the christian life is the life of a man. First a babe, then adding to his stature by faith and works, until he becomes "com-plete in Him." Said the speaker: "Two things are shown in this text. First, the necessity for a radical moral change: second, the principle of eternal life in volves something which comes through Jesus Christ. The new life means a 'new love,' divine in its inspiration and object, coming to us through the medium of the Son of God. 'Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom The preacher closed with a personal appear, asking the question "What are your present hopes of eternal life?" not what do you think of this whole matter, but in its application to your personal self-how stands the matter between you and God?"

The War Against Whisky. The saloon men of the city are at present in a state of disagreeable uncertainty in regard to the result of the latest move of the prohibitionists. The latter have as yet caused but three arrests, and the trial of these cases will not come up until the 27th inst., before Justice Walker, at Oakland, Until the result of these hearings is made known, the liquor dealers will keep rather quiet. It is reported that several new saloons were to have been opened about this time, but since these arrests were made it has been deemed advisable by the interested parties to await developments before branching up more extensively. It is feared by some of the liquor men that the move may result fully as well as the prohibitionists hope and for some of the dispensers of tanglefoot have already quit the busi-

At the last term of the district court no saloon cases were taken up, although there were dozens of them on the docket. On the docket for the present term there are about thirty criminal cases against saloons, gambling houses and houses of prostitution, and on the equity docket there are enough more injunction cases to swell that number to nearly a hundred. The liquor men seem to feel but little annovance from this source, but are decidedly shaky concerning the cause now being pursued in the justice courts. As long as the cases were confined to the city, little anxiety was felt, as the saloon interests were not allowed to suffer, but it rather takes the wind out of the liquor dealers' sails to start out on unknown seas. As yet no regular line of defense has been laid out by the saloonists, but it is probable that after the cases now pending are heard, some plan will be formulated.

Social Impurity. The Rev. D. C. Franklin delivered a powerful sermon yesterday morning at Broadway Methodist church. In it he drew some pointed lessons from the recent murder in Omaha, using as a basis the case of a fallen woman who was saved to a useful life by the power of sympathy among men and faith in God. In describing the work of the destroyer, the lecherous villain who, under the guise of a friend, a lover, wins from a girl all that makes her lovable in the world and respected by herself, the speaker grew very eloquent and gave expression to some ideas which, if adopted in social life, would be a power for good. Said he: "I wish that every man who, by blandishment and the promise of a false friend, won from her her self-respect and the gems which are priceless to womanhood, every man who purpose ly aided in her downfall, could be consigned to the same odium and shame which now awaits her. Could he be an outcast from society, no door open to receive him, no smile awakened at his approach, no friend to greet him with a pleasant word; could be be forced to thus stand as to-day stands his victim, methinks society would hastily revolutionize itself and men and women would be the better for it." Strong words,

An Eye For an Eye.

John Oberman, of Omaha, and Thomas Evans, of Atlantic, became involved in an altercation on Lower Broadway yesterday afternoon, and soon came to blows. Evans had the worst of it, and was being roughly handled when Officer Isenberger appeared and took both parties into custody. One side of Evans' face was disligured, but he seemed to regard the whole affair as a huge joke. Both men had been drinking, and had whisky bottles on their persons. They were booked for disturbing the peace and were locked up to await trial this Female Detectives.

Evening Telegram: Although for a long time detectives of the fair sexand some of them of good social status— have been employed for the discovery of crime and grave political offenses. and also for making private inquiries where delicacy and tact is requisite, fe-male detectivism has but occasionally been employed in the United Kingdom for public purposes, and even then with merely insignificant results.

In a recent government report upon the Scotch police by Captain Monro, H. M. inspector for constabulary for Scotland, he says that the employment of a few women on the detective staff in large and populous places might possibly be of valuable service. Owing to this statement, and the important fact that the employment of women as private detectives in London has made great progress, the writer of the London Queen has carefully investigated the subject of this article, on which he has received some appreciable information from those who are the most competent to speak with authority on the question. As regards the engagement of women for the detection of crime in this country, it is not only very limited, but merely extends to few offenses, the most important of which appear to be shoplifting and pocket-picking cases, and other thefts. In these and other instances they generally act under the guidance and close supervision of regular members of the detective staff. Some years ago a large firm of omnibus pro prietors always engaged women to find out the dishonesty of the conductors of these vehicles in robbing their masters of a portion of their fares, and it is stated that women are even now employed for this purpose.

As competent and trustworthy women are difficult to secure for secret service in police forces, and as no efficient means exist for training them for this duty, and as they are indifferently paid for their work, there is a general feeling among policemen of all ranks that under present regulations it would be unwise to permanently employ women on detective staffs, or as agents or assistants to a member of such in connection with criminal and political investigations. On the other hand, in Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg, and other large centres of population on the continent, the detective services rendered by women to the police in these cases are very valuable. The social position of ladies employed is often of a superior order, while their general knowledge is very advanced. The diplomatic corps of some continental nations engage ladies as detectives out of their own country. It is stated that a few of the fair sex are employed in London on behalf of the French and German embassies, and render very efficient help to those to whom they are responsible for such.

Now for private detective work in England—as that required in divorce cases, tracing missing friends and other secret inquiries-a great number of women are employed, and their number and services have immensely increased during the last ten years or thereabouts, when female detectiveism as a system is said to have commenced by firms of private inquiry agents in the metropolis. The writer has been informed by the principals of two important private inquiry offices in London-in both of which a large staff of women are employed—that the latter are far more efficient for their duties than men would be. Great care is taken in their selection, and they are better paid for their services than women who are temporarily employed in police forces in proportion to the time they are respectively engaged in their work.

One metropolitan firm at least not merely engages a great number of female detectives permanently to devote their whole time to private inquiry business, but pays them a liberal salary, in addition to giving them a bonus in respect of each investigation which they have been mainly instrumental in bringing to a successful termination. The amount received by the employers of these women in several of such cases is very large, and the latter are paid accordingly. One firm of inquiry agents has a very clever lady in their service | FOR RENT-Nicely furnished front room cen
