

THE CITY.

The First Ward Contest.

Speaking on the subject of the double-headed ticket in the First ward, Mr. Donovan yesterday morning said: "I was at the primaries on Wednesday and I never saw any thing to equal them in reality in my life. They were held in the Slaven house—at least that used to be its name. It now belongs to one of the Caseys. The saloon was full of people, and the poll was a part of the saloon. I went there with some others and we got there before 12 o'clock. The crowd inside was drinking. We were voting on the outside of the door, for the polls to organize. I recognized men from Hugh Murphy's three paving gangs. They were there under their former names, Doyle, McDonald, and another whom I can't recall. Flynn, Murphy's book-keeper, was flying around, master of ceremonies. He was filling the men with whisky. He must have spent $20 for the gang's drinks. Slaven was sweating for us there, and made no bones about it. Slaven was there himself with his men, who had their brooms and their shovels. We waited on the outside of the door, waiting for a chance to get in an election officer. We heard a shout from the inside, and we learned that the judges had been elected by the crowd in the saloon. They didn't give us a chance to vote.

"Well, then they commenced to receive votes. Fatty Gleen, you know him, appeared as one of the judges, a fellow named Henderson, a rouser, I think was the other, while Tobin was clerk. I saw a number that the crowd did not belong to the ward, and they were in and cast their vote. If they were challenged they made evasive answers, anyway they put in their votes. One of the judges, I saw aiming at a man, enabling him to vote. I knew he didn't live in the ward and I knew many of his men didn't live there. I asked him what he was doing there and he said it was none of my business, and that I was an old fraud. This was because I made him and his men do the work Murphy had contracted for instead of that which he wanted to do. I went up to the polls, but it was by crowding and squeezing such as I never experienced before that I was able to get in. I got my vote, too, but when I tried to get out of the line a little fellow—an Englishman—jumped up on my back, put his arms around my neck and pulled me away from the window. Slaven came around bossing and shook a bundle of ballots under my nose in a threatening manner. Others who were opposed to Lowry tried to vote, but they might just as well have tried to reach the moon. The lines were so packed with Lowry men that no others could get in. At the time they were walking around and brought up to the polls a second and third time, just as many times as they could, in fact, Slaven was being as good as a dog in the manger. I tried it, but they laughed at me. We began to see that there was no chance to get in, and the crowd of noisy power is a fraud. We almost gave up in disgust. But some of the anti-Lowry men made up their minds to get a fair count in another way and established another polling place on the other side of the street. Who it was that organized the last one I don't know. I had nothing to do with it.

"But that was not the worst of it. They had their carriages, and when the men got through voting in the First, they were put in the back of the wagon and carried up to the Third ward, where they voted again. It's a fact. Why I met a man named Kinsella, who lives at Papillion. I asked him what he was doing there, and he said they had got him there to vote, and vote he did."

Mr. Tracey Talks.
William Tracey, who was Lowry's opponent in the primaries, said: "I was at the polling place and it was full of people. Slaven was acting as the representative of the democratic city central committee. I was not regularly in the field. I was in the hands of my friends. I had not sought the place, but they said they couldn't get any other person to run, and I gave way rather than have it go abroad that Lowry was the choice of the people. All I wanted, or rather that my friends wanted, in the election board was one man. They tried to get him, and Pat Hegy was nominated. But Slaven, acting for the city central committee, would not put the name. So the Lowry people elected their own board. Some time later, I was on the outside in the crowd and Lowry came up to me and said: 'Billy, I am sorry I did not know you wanted a man, and I am glad that this dirty kind of work has been done. I don't know exactly who it was organized the polls in my behalf, but I know it was done only when the people found out that they could not get a chance to poll in a decent manner.' I saw some of our leading citizens in the ward go to the polls and then turn away in disgust when they saw the rabble at the place. I don't know, exactly, who organized the opposition, but the names of the officers are the same as those published in 'The Bee.'"

"Are you in favor of Lowry's returning to the council?"
"Sir, my ward is pretty well supplied with improvements, but our people are not in favor of a man who is for our ward only. We are friendly to and take an interest in the city. We want a man who will work for the city and not for himself alone."

"Let me have an instance of Lowry's working for himself?"
"Take the case of the viaduct. He got an assessment against property almost a mile south of it, people who were benefited but little; while for Callahan, at the corner of Mason and Eleventh streets, the man who was most benefited by the viaduct, he got damages. Besides, the assessment runs down to Ninth street and then slips down south until it takes in a certain lot, and in this manner avoids Lowry's own property. We had the matter up at the engine house meeting, but we could not get him there."

"Will you run against Lowry?"
"I don't know, for the reasons I gave to you before. My friends were to have met last night. If they think I ought to run, I shall respect their wishes."

Redman's Methods.
Mr. Holbrook, who was a competitor of Joe Redman as a republican candidate for the council from the Fifth ward, was seen yesterday. He stated that a number of his friends had urged him to run independently, but until today he had hesitated to announce himself as an independent candidate. He has been assured of the support of many of the best men in the ward, and has decided to step in and make a determined contest for a seat in the council.

Incidentally he was asked concerning the reported irregularities in the Fifth ward republican primaries on Tuesday. He replied that he was forced to believe that such reports were founded on facts. In the first place, he believed there were more votes polled at the late primaries than there were voters in the ward. At the presidential election Nov. 4, the ward polled a strong vote and nearly every known voter came to the polls. Altogether there was less than 1,200 votes deposited then, and yet at the late primaries there were 1,415 votes polled. This was strong evidence that something was wrong.

Mr. Holbrook said he knew of several actual cases where men were non-residents of the ward, yet were rushed in and voted for Redman. There is no doubt that the repeaters also got in their work. One of the men leading about the polls even came to Mr. Holbrook and asked him why he did not take the voters in troops to the neighboring saloons and treat them. He further stated that there was a number of men who had voted for Redman, and would repeat their votes for Holbrook, if he would treat to whisky and beer. Mr. Holbrook, of course, refused to be party to any such crime.

TRAIN TALK.

A Glimpse of the New Golden Gate Special Vestibule Train.

The new train for the Golden Gate special is now completed, and will reach Council Bluffs Monday. On Tuesday it will be on exhibition at the transfer, and will be worth seeing as the finest piece of workmanship ever turned out by the Pullman company. There are five coaches or cars in all. That nearest the engine is a baggage car, but it also contains six berths for the train crew, a bath-room for gentlemen, a barber shop, and the engine and dynamo necessary to the electric-lighting. The dining-car comes next, and is said to be the finest on wheels, with a seating capacity for forty persons. Two twelve-section sleepers will come next, each containing all the latest improvements, with smoking-rooms, library, etc. The last car is known as a composite car, with eight sections, or berths. The remaining portion is furnished with rotary easy chairs for the benefit of passengers wishing to survey the scenery from the windows which reach to the floor. A wide platform runs around the outside, guarded by a brass hand-rail, and will be used as a point of observation by passengers so inclined. Every care has been taken for the proper ventilation of the coaches, which are made continuous train by a system of vestibuling, and every precaution possible is made against accidents. For the first time female attendants will be employed in the railway service, who will look after the wants of the lady passengers. The libraries will be supplied with the choicest standard novels, and a leading Chicago publisher, and all the latest pictorial magazines and periodicals will be supplied gratis. The train will reduce the time of the trip to about thirty hours, leaving Omaha at 9 a. m. Wednesday and arriving in San Francisco at 9 p. m. Friday. Returning, it will leave San Francisco at 9 p. m. Saturday and arrive in Council Bluffs at 9 a. m. Tuesday.

A FAMILY ROW.

A Wife Beater Jumped Through a Pane of Glass.
The neighbors of Frank Beason, who lives in the same building at 1916 Cuming street, say that they were greatly alarmed about 7 o'clock Thursday evening by the great disturbance he raised in his family. They say that he knocked his wife down and kicked her fearfully, while she was lying helpless. She finally managed to get up and seize a hatchet in manner and proceed to defend herself. Beason then seized their only child, and jumping through the window escaped. He did not stop to even raise the window, but went through the large pane of glass as though it were paper. He was badly out while making his exit.

Mrs. Beason telephoned to her brother at Red Oak and he arrived yesterday morning. Mrs. Beason is said to be badly bruised.

AN EXPLANATION.

Hundreds of customers to whom we have sold overcoats during the past few weeks, expressed their astonishment and inquired how it is possible that such garments can be sold in the regular way at such figures. To those and to thousands of others who cannot understand this, and think that the goods must be inferior because we sell them so cheap, we will explain that the reason lies only in the buying. The warm weather prevailing for the last few weeks has been especially disastrous to the clothing trade. Manufacturers are overstocked and discouraged, and to realize cash they offer goods at ruinous prices. This is the chance for the wide-awake and large retailer. Our ample resources enable us to take advantage of such opportunities, and thus it is that we are now offering Overcoats which were made up to retail at $15, $20 and $30, at one-half and less these figures. The overwhelming success which we have had with our overcoat sales, has emboldened our buyer, and induced him to make several big deals. We have opened during the past few days over

5,000 OVERCOATS AND ULSTERS.

All from first class manufacturers. We intend to make just as quick work with them as we did with our first purchase, and if our former prices have created excitement, the figures we put on this last lot, will do so still more.

GOOD CHINCHILLA OVERCOATS, with heaviest serge lining, well made, at $3.75; other houses ask $8 for such a garment.

GOOD CHINCHILLA ULSTERS—with plush collar and cuffs, lined with heavy casimere, very long cut and an excellent storm coat at $4.75; regular this garment would cost about $10.

A lot of ELEGANT CHINCHILLA COATS, lined throughout with fine quilted satin, corded edge, satin sleeve lining and of excellent workmanship, we have marked $7.75. This garment we had intended to mark $9, but we made such a big hit with our first $7.75 satin lined overcoat, and so many customers were disappointed, within the last few days, at not getting it, that we have decided to mark this the same, though it cost $2 more. We challenge any house in this country to match us in that coat.

We are opening every day novelties in our furnishing department. Yesterday we got in an elegant line of Silk Mufflers and Scarfs for holiday trade. Prices as usual, just about one-half what others charge for such goods.
