Too Much Salvation Oil. Last evening W. H. Robb and George Bratt visited the Salvation Army hall. They listened attentively to the services, and left the building in a very peaceful frame of mind, because neither was aware of the other's presence. They met in front of the Bechtele house. The good lessons just learned were forgotton, and both started in to settle an old grudge regarding a certain female, whose reputation is said to be rather unsavory. Bratt struck Robb with a pair of steel knuckles, cutting a long gash through his upper lip. Robb picked up a brick and was retaliating vigorously when Officer Isenberger appeared and arrested both paties.

They were taken to the station and locked up to await an examination this morning. Robb's cut bled furiously, which rendered his appearance quite revolting, and led to the belief that he was seriously hurt, but an examination failed to declare the content of the amination failed to disclose any serious wound Bratt escaped with little injury. The impromptu mill was getting decidedly warm when the policeman appeared, and but for his interference somebody would have been dangerously hurt.

The Motor Line Gets a Start-The Sad Details of Hanson's Death-Personal and Brief Bits of News.

Funeral of E. E. Harkness.

Few events in this city have so touched the hearts of this community as the death and burial of Mr. E. E. Hackness. Not only had he won a hold upon this people by his long residence here, but his life has had such a ring of true manhood as to secure strong admiration and carnest regard. The expressions of sorrow and sympathy, of love and respect, have been so general, so varied, and so heartfeit, as to surprise even his friends. Few realized how highly he was esteemed until his departure called forth the general

The last rites were held yesterday. Private services were held at the residence at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the family and im-mediate friends being present. The choir of the Congregational church, Mrs. Hawley, Mrs. Evans, and Messrs. Westcott and Mc-Dernid, sang an appropriate selection. Rev. G. W. Crofts, the paster, read passages of scripture and offered a most tender prayer. The remains were their taken to the Congre-The remains were then taken to the Congregational church, where public services were held, the family yielding their personal preferences to gratify the general desire to have an opportunity given for a service where all could attend. The family occupied one of the rooms adjacent to the pulpit, where they could be retired, and yet hear the services. The church was filled, and many friends were unable to get. pulpit, where they could be relieved, and yet, and many friends were unable to get even standing room. The remains were in a casket of plain broadcioth, the mountings being simple yet rich. The floral triputes were numerous and very elaborate. There was a large lyre, the offering of the board of trade, who attended the services in a body; an open bible from the employes of Harkmess Bros.; the letters "Y. M. C. A." in cut flowers with green background and border, the remembrance of the Young Mon's Christian association of which he was the beloved president; a beautiful wreath from the reading club, of which Mr. Harkness was a member; a large floral harp by Mr. Samon Eiseman; a cross and sickle on a stand, the tribute of the Sunday school of which Mr. Harkness was for years the superintondent. There were many other tributes from other There were many other tributes from other by Mr. Caspar the florist.

The services were very appropriate. The opening song was "One Sweetly Solemu Thought." It was a favorite of the one whom all were mourning. Rev. Dr. Cooley, of the First Baptist church, read selections of scripture. Rev. Dr. Phelps, of the Congregational church, offered a sympathetic prayer. Rev. Mr. Crofts, the pastor, gave a brief address. He dwelt mainly brief address. He dwelt mainly upon the words: "Though dead, he yet speaketh." He paid a befitting tribute to the character of the de-parted one and showed how clearly how he yet lived—in the memory and esteem of all. He pictured vividly the many ways in which the influence of his life yet spoke and would continue speaking to all who knew him, arg-ing them to be true to God, to their fellow men and to themselves.

friends the whole being tastefully arranged by Mr. Caspar the florist.

After an opportunity had been given to all to look upon the beloved face again, the casket was closed and the form born to Fairview cemetery, where it was placed in a vault, there to remain until the friends remove it to New York for final interment. The pall bearers were Dr. Woodbury, Judge Aylesworth, W. W. Wallace, J. M. Ousler, J. D. Edwanson and H. L. Chambers. Aylesworth, W. W. Wallace, J. M. Ousier, J. D. Edmonson and H. J. Chambers.

Among the frie is from out of the city who came to attend the funeral were Miss Grace Lester, a sister of Mrs. E. E. Harkness, from Binghampton, N. Y.; Mr. Barrett, from the same place, who is associated in business with Mrs. Harkness brother; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Truesdell, of Fremont, Neb.; Prof. Farnham, of Peru, Neb., superintendent of the Nebruska state normal school; Miss Wright, one of the teachers in the same justifution; Mr. and Mrs. Frank

Among the Churches. Rev. G. W. Crofts went to Omaha yesterday morning to supply the pulpit of the First Congregational church. His pulpit here was occupied by the evangelists, Messys. Smead and Smith. Mr. Smith sang a very effective solo and participated in the opening and closing services. Mr. Smead gave an earnest address to christian believers, his topic being, "Assurance." He illustrated the mission of the evangelist by the railway man sent down into the yards to start up some new lights, and in doing so he found that some of the old ones were burning dimly and needed attention. So the evangelist must not only strive to start new lights but must pick up the wicks of the old ones, replenish them with oil and get them to burn more brightly. His talk yesterday was mainly to encourage christians to have a firmer and clearer faith. He quoted various passages of scripture showing how they could clearly determine whether they were really children of God, and giving assurances as to how they need never doubt as to their acceptance. The union services will be held during the present week in the Presbyterian church. Interest in these meetings is constantly increasing and quite a large number of conver ions are reported.

The Methodist folks are also organizing working forces to operate by personal solicitation. During the past week a number of devoted women have been engaged in visit-ing places where religious work is most needed, and with apparently good results. Within a short time it is expected to begin a series of revival services, the details of which have not as yet been fully settled.

How Hanson Was Killed.

The death of George Hanson, in the Northwestern yards Saturday evening, was brought about by a sad misunderstanding, and leaves grave doubts as to whom was responsible for the sad affair. The facts in the case as revealed at the coroner's inquest are as follows: A drawbar was pulled out of a sleeper, which was to go out on the Sioux City train. The remaining cars of the train were pulled away from the sleeper, to give the repairers an opportunity to replace the drawbar. There was a space of about ten feet between the cars and the repairers asked for a little more room. Frank Geiser, the switchman, who was standing near, signalled the engineer to move ahead a little further. The signal was understood by the engineer to back up, and he did so slowly. The switchman started toward the engine, and heard the cars as they started. It was quite dark, and he supposed of course that the train was being moved up a little. Haprear end of the car call out: "Pull up; you've caught a man," He then signalled to go ahead, and ran back just in time to see Hanson's body fall to the ground as the cars

James C. Madison, a car repairer, was with Harson when he was caught. The two men were looking at the broken drawbar, preparatory to going to work on it. Madison holded around and saw the approaching cars about a foot and a half from him. He jumped, and called to Hanson to get out of the way. He then heard Hanson's exclamation as he was crushed between the colliding

All witnesses agreed that the cars came to-gether very easily, and that the sleeper was not moved by the collision, although this may be due to the fact that the brakes on the latter were tightly set.

A. J. Snyder, the engineer, is a hostler for the Northwestern company, and has worked for them for eight years. He testified that he obeyed the signals as they were given, or as he understood them. He explained the difference between a signal to "go ahead" and one to "back up." He was about five car lengths from the switchman who gave the signal. A coroner's jury consisting of W.C. Estep.

O. Jones and E. C. Hunt, returned a ver-act to the effect that the deceased "came to one to the effect that the deceased "came to his death by being crushed between the cars while in the discharge of his duties as an employe of the Chicago & Northwestern rail-way company, and that the cause of the ac-cident was a misunderstanding of signals," The remains of the deceased were taken to the undertaking rooms of Field & Esten, where they were prepared for burial and where they were prepared for burial, and were yesterday removed to the home of a married sister, at No. 912 Avenue G, where the unfortunate man was boarding. The de-ceased was twenty-two years of age, and had been in this country about lifteen months, during all of which time he had been in the employ of the Northwestern.

The Motor Really Starts. The electric motor line began active operations yesterday. During the forenoon the motors were all run out and over the line as a test. At 12 o'clock the cars were attached and during the afternoon trips, were made between the two cities. Regularity was impossible and in fact was not attempted. The trains were run into Omnha two or three blocks, and as soon as possible connections will be inade so that passingers can get into a motor train at the west end of Omiting and with one change go to the cast end of Council Bluffs. Everything will be running smoothly in a few days.

Mr. Lincoln's first vice-presi dent. Mr. Bamlin, was a widower and lived at a hotel. In fact, until Mr. Hendricks was chosen, the office seemed to be a refuge for widowers, for there followed Hamlin, Johnson, Wilson, Wheeler and Arthur, Colfax married during his term of office. They were all widowers. Two filled out their terms in the office of president, the daughter of one and the sister of the other presiding over the White House. Mr. Hendricks would have had a pleasant house for society if he had not died almost at the beginning of his term of office, for Mrs. Hendricks is a charming and accomplished woman. It will be Mrs. Morton's privilege and pleasure to revive the social glories of the office to which her husband has been chosen. and there is no doubt that the ancient splendor, which was in truth not re-markable in ante-bellum days, will be

The old Hooper house, which Mr. Morton bought, became one of the most delight ful places at the capital. Its affairs were administered with all the grace and tact for which its mistress is fa mens, and there is no doubt that the spicador of the Morton hospitality during the coming administration will be as much greater than that of eight years ago as the office of vice-president s more dignified than a seat in the house of representatives.
