

GOODMAN DRUG COMPANY

Dr. E. C. West's

THE REWARD TREATMENT

A guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain resulting in Insanity and leading to Misery, Decay and Death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary Losses and Spermatorrhoea caused by over exertion of the brain, self abuse or over-indulgence.

Each box Contains One Month's Treatment. $1.00 a Box or Six Boxes for $5.00. Sent by Mail Prepaid on Receipt of Price.

WE GUARANTEE SIX BOXES

To cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with $5. we will send the purchaser our written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by

Goodman Drug Co.,

Sole Agents, 1110 Farnam Street, Omaha

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation or Costiveness, we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely vegetable and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar coated, large boxes containing 30 pill, 25c. For sale by all druggists. Beware of counterfeits and imitations. The genuine manufactured only by JNO. G. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 862 W. Madison St., Chicago. Free trial package sent by mail, prepaid, on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. Sold at retail by GOODMAN DRUG CO., 1110 Farnam Street.

Dr. E. C. West's NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT is a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Epilepsy, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain resulting in Insanity and leading to Misery, Decay and Death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary Losses and Spermatorrhoea caused by over exertion of the brain, self abuse or over-indulgence. Each box contains one month's treatment. $1.00 a box, six boxes for $5.00, sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price.

WE GUARANTEE SIX BOXES To cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with $5. we will send the purchaser our written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by

Goodman Drug Co., SOLE AGENTS. 1110 Farnam-st., Omaha

Dr. E. C. West's NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT is a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Epilepsy, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain resulting in Insanity and leading to Misery, Decay and Death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary Losses and Spermatorrhoea caused by over exertion of the brain, self abuse or over-indulgence. Each box contains one month's treatment. $1.00 a box, six boxes for $5.00, sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price.

WE GUARANTEE SIX BOXES To cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with $5. we will send the purchaser our written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by

Goodman Drug Co., SOLE AGENTS. 1110 Farnam-st., Omaha

C. F. GOODMAN

DEALER IN Drugs and Chemicals

OMAHA, NEB., Dec. 27, 1888. Messrs Jno. C. West & Co., Chicago, Ill. Gentlemen: Ship us twenty gross of West's Nerve and Brain Treatment. The 10 gross ordered of you Nov. 21st, 1888, has been sold at retail, a large amount of it being on mail orders from the different states. Many of the orders have been duplicated and not one complaint which is conclusive evidence that the remedy will do all you claim. Yours truly, Goodman Drug Co., Druggists.

C. F. GOODMAN

DEALER IN Drugs and Chemicals

OMAHA, NOV. 27, 1887. Messrs Jno. C. West & Co., Chicago, Ill. Gentlemen: Ship us ten gross of West's Nerve and Brain Treatment at once. We have been selling this remedy for the past eight years and to a large extent. The medicine has a large sale in this city and the constant demand is evidence that there is merit. This makes it very gratifying to us to have had and we hope soon to make another order so that our total sales will be one hundred gross. We think it will be as gratifying to you as to us. Yours respectfully,

C. F. GOODMAN, Druggist.

$500 REWARD.

of counterfeits and imitations. The genuine manufactured only by JNO. G. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 862 W. Madison St., Chicago. Free trial package sent by mail, prepaid, on receipt of a 3 cent stamp.

THE RULER OF THE CHOSEN.

A Visit to the Palace of the King of Korea.

INTERVIEW WITH HIS MAJESTY.

Solemn Ceremonies and Magnificent Surroundings—His Opinion of Men and Affairs—The Crown Prince and His Appearance.

Carp's Letter.

OMAHA, NEB., Dec. 27, 1888. Messrs Jno. C. West & Co., Chicago, Ill. Gentlemen: Ship us twenty gross of West's Nerve and Brain Treatment. The 10 gross ordered of you Nov. 21st, 1888, has been sold at retail, a large amount of it being on mail orders from the different states. Many of the orders have been duplicated and not one complaint which is conclusive evidence that the remedy will do all you claim. Yours truly,

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

They were all clad in their court dresses and the head of each showed a top-knot, shining like a crown. The king's hair was white, with great wings flapping out at the sides. They had rows of fine materials of various colors which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

It was a low room, perhaps fifty feet long, raised about five feet above the ground and reached by three flights of steps. It was open at the front and was not more than twenty-five feet deep. At the back of this room and in the center, in front of a screen and behind a small table, his royal majesty stood. The ministers preceded us, and the king, wearing a black robe and a black hat, and followed by his royal guards, and escorted by the two greatest generals in the Korean army, were taken into what might be called the hall of foreign entertainment. It was a long, one-story, tiled building with great overhanging roof upheld by massive beams, which showed in all the natural beauty of the wood. A brass carrier about as large as a lady's like those you see at home were in the center of the hall, and upon these were plates of colored glass which had been made in an American baker shop, and ranged around the table were glasses of champagne. Here I was introduced to the king's ministers, and I drank wine and clinked glasses with the secretary of state and the general of the Korean army. I talked with them through our interpreter, who, by the way, was one of the best in Korea. I found them both intelligent and polite.

TRAIN ROBBERS' CHRISTMAS

Manned on the Day of Peace and Good Will.

DEADWOOD'S REDUCTION WORKS

Fifty Thousand Tons of Ore for a Starter—Developments of the Mines—A Pioneer Society on the Tap.

DEADWOOD NOTES. Special Correspondence of The Bee. Christmas has come and gone with its monotonous duties, bitter reflections and pleasant memories. Whoever poured a drop of comfort into a bruised and aching heart on yesterday's bright sunny day is surely doubly blessed. But to two at least from this community the day was fraught with bitterness, and let us hope it had its warnings. Albert G. Nickerson and John Telford (the would-be train robbers) as they mounted the coach, manned, and in charge of two deputy sheriffs enroute to the Sioux Falls penitentiary to serve fifteen years each at hard labor, had scarcely any pleasant reminiscences. Nickerson, who was tried first, was visibly affected. As the clerk read the findings his head lowered and tears dropped from his eyes, hastily rising he reached for a goblet of water, drained it at a draught, turned toward his seat, and in the effort recoiled and nearly fell. He quickly gathered himself, however, and resumed his seat, with the same stolid demeanor manifested during the trial. Telford, on the other hand, was unconcerned during the trial, except by the almost total absence of color from his face, and during the arraignment he remained immovable, head erect, and eyes firmly fixed upon the judge, unaffected by aught that was said. At the conclusion he entered seemingly into pleasant conversation with a friend, as indicated by continuous smiles.

They were ably defended by a rising young lawyer of this city named Henry Frayley, who combated the theories of the prosecution so eloquently and ably that "soldim," if ever he has so much been made out of a forlorn case. Before sentence was pronounced he offered a motion in arrest of judgment (which was overruled) that "soldim" be set free on three conditions: that he be allowed to go to his home in the mountains of Idaho, that he be allowed to go to his home in the mountains of Idaho, that he be allowed to go to his home in the mountains of Idaho.

RELIGIOUS. The clergy of the Church of England of all trades from Archbishops to curates, number 21,000. The Evangelical Alliance of Great Britain has issued a call to prayer for the week January 6-13, 1889.

The Hebrews, who entered Utah with Johnson's army in 1848, have built their common synagogue in Salt Lake City. A revival is in progress among the Scandinavians at Salt Lake City, and they are leaving the Mormon church in large numbers. Yale college theological students are making a house to house canvass of New Haven, gathering materials for a religious census of the city.

There are two Episcopal ministers—missionaries on the Yukon river, Alaska. They are 1,000 miles from the southeastern line of the territory. Rev. John M. Grady, who died at New York Tuesday, was president of the Catholic young men's national union, and was considered one of the ablest young pulpits in the Roman Catholic church.

Roman Catholic archbishops in America have received orders from Rome to rather statistics concerning marriages of Catholics with persons of other faiths. While mixed marriages are forbidden as a rule, permission is granted in certain cases, especially when a Catholic party is likely to be brought into the faith.

For Abuse of Alcohol. Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Dr. W. E. Crane, Mitchell, Dak., says: "It has proven almost a specific for this disorder. It checks the vomiting, restores the appetite, and at the same time, allays the fear of impending dissolution, that is so common to heavy drinkers."

The first congress of colored Catholics was held in St. Augustine church, Monday, January 1. Six hundred delegates, mostly from the south, were present.

No buffet should be without a bottle of Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Manufactured by Dr. J. G. B. Siegert & Sons.

having the utmost confidence in the practical theories of the promoter. The revolution that will follow this plan will be a new era in the mining history of the Black Hills and will supply the reduction works in the many holders of Ruby Basin and Bald Mountain properties, and their name is legion, the success of this project will be the ultimate cause of their hopes, for in these districts alone there is ore enough in sight to supply this plant for years, while other properties are daily developing ore of a fine quality, as instanced in the recent development of the Ruby Basin and Bald Mountain properties, these properties join the Ruby Belt that has the distinction of being one of the best developed mines in the camp and is supplying the reduction works and supply the reduction works with ore, in sixty feet in one, another twenty-two feet on the contact, and a contract has been let recently and is in operation for an additional 100 feet.

The Homestake Mining company paid on Christmas day dividend No. 125, of 23 cents a share, aggregating $25,000, making $300,000 on $2.40 cents per share paid this year.

The Golden Reward and Tornado, like the Ruby Belt, are well developed, and supply the reduction works with ore. These mines, for the magnitude of their deposits, are a marvel to mining men.

The Duluth, an old discovery but lately organized, lies in the track of the ore belt between the Ruby Basin and Bald Mountain districts. They have encountered the same quality of ore in their workings that predominate in these districts.

The Platte mining company is located on the great gold belt of the Black Hills east of the Homestake and California, and is amongst the oldest locations in the Black Hills. Therefore they have been having this ore to outcrop a distance of from three to four miles. Within the last year they erected a twenty-stamp mill, which has been running continuously since completion. The monthly clean-up will average $8,000. Twenty stamps more will shortly be added to the mill, which has water power for 120 stamps.

They have large bodies of fine milling ore similar to the Homestake and California mines, but richer. Negotiations are now pending between Superintendent Hunter and Secretary Palmer of the Kansas City Mining exchange, to list this property on that board. The plan is non-associating this ore to outcrop on January 8, 1889, to organize the near society of the Black Hills, and already 250 members have enrolled.

PIONEER. For Abuse of Alcohol. Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Dr. W. E. Crane, Mitchell, Dak., says: "It has proven almost a specific for this disorder. It checks the vomiting, restores the appetite, and at the same time, allays the fear of impending dissolution, that is so common to heavy drinkers."

The first congress of colored Catholics was held in St. Augustine church, Monday, January 1. Six hundred delegates, mostly from the south, were present.

No buffet should be without a bottle of Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Manufactured by Dr. J. G. B. Siegert & Sons.