WHO DOES THE RATE CUTTING?

A Traffic Manager Takes Issue With President Adams. IS HE MERELY A FIGUREHEAD? This Critic Wants to Know Why He Don't Investigate Violations of the Interstate Law By the Employees.

Some Inside Facts. A writer, over the signature "Traffic Manager," takes issue with Charles Francis Adams upon the latter's views on railroad management.

I would earlier have criticized Mr. Adams' remarks, but from the fact that I am one of those railway officers whom he accuses of being dishonest.

I have been in railway service for the past twenty-eight years and claim to know something of the practical workings of the same.

The Dodge Light Guards are a little better off than they expected. They had supposed that they would have to purchase their own overcoats for the trip to Washington.

Blank books made to order. Can furnish blank binding for parties wishing the same.

A Forgotten Volume. A few days ago a musty volume was unearthed in this city.

I beg to question this very much, as I do not think statistics will bear the statement out, as the construction of new roads for two years prior to the interstate commerce law coming into effect was certainly far greater than that since.

Further on he says: "Then followed a depth of railroad morals among freight agents lower than had previously existed in this country."

The title of this ancient work is "The Compiled Ordinances of the City of Council Bluffs," and its authors were men who in their day stood well with their fellowmen as keen, far-seeing citizens.

The speaker then read the following petition: "The undersigned, in the name of all our citizens who love law and order, and who desire to see all laws respected and respected, we most earnestly ask that you use all power conferred upon you for the suppression of these evils."

The following gentlemen were designated as committee to present the petition to the city council at the session which shall be held following the meeting of this evening: L. W. Tulley, Rev. D. C. Franklin, Henry Coker, E. S. Barnett and Henry De Long.

It is probable that the same action taken here will also be taken by the Baptist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches next Sunday.

The petition was signed by about twenty-five converts were baptized and added to the roll of membership.

At the Presbyterian church the number admitted was thirty-three. The ordinance of baptism was administered to forty-two-thirds of the number.

At the Baptist church the number admitted was thirty-three. The ordinance of baptism was administered to forty-two-thirds of the number.
