THE NEW ADMINISTRATION.

The inauguration-day of President-elect Harrison will reinstate the republican party in the control of the executive branch of the government...

The republican party returns to full possession of the government at the beginning of its second century, and this interesting fact will doubtless have due prominence in the inaugural address of President Harrison...

The republican leaders unquestionably appreciate the situation, and there is every reason to expect from the new president a wise, careful and conservative administration. The policy which will guide the next administration the country will learn to-day, and its enunciation will be received with great interest by men of all parties.

THE RETIRING PRESIDENT.

To-day Grover Cleveland, four years ago elevated to the great office of president of the United States, will retire to private life. Contemporary judgment may not be able to fairly determine the place he should occupy in our political history...

The sudden and startling suicide of the infamous forger and informer Pigott, at Madrid, cannot fail to have a beneficial effect on the wretches that curse the Irish cause and sell their birthright for British gold. Pigott came into notice in the dark days of the land league...

MORRISSEY AS A MARTYR.

For sublime and adamantine cheek commend us to the person by the name of Frank Morrissey, who for four weeks was permitted to hold down the seat in the lower house of the legislature, now so creditably filled by Hon. Christ Specht. Sunday's Herald is adorned by the following pen-picture:

Waterloo is achieving a reputation as a fine horse country.

The Iowa Chautauque assembly has been permanently located at Colfax. There are twenty girls to two boys at Waterloo and a male importing society is talked of. Corro Gordo county will be taxed $3,000 for the luxury of having the Brown poisoning case.

THE FOREMOST EXPONENTS OF DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES AND POLICY.

They could assure Mr. Cleveland the reward of a solid south, but with that their ability to repay him was exhausted. Mr. Cleveland will not be denied credit for courage in giving his party a clearly defined tariff policy, but here again he was unfortunate in the men entrusted to give the policy practical form...

A BILL slipped through the New Mexican legislature appropriating fifteen thousand dollars, instead of five thousand dollars, a year, for the support of an immigration bureau. The methods employed to secure the plunder would put to shame the best efforts of the Lincoln lobby. And yet it has been asserted that the residents of Green-sand were not sufficiently advanced to enjoy the lucre and liberties of state-hood.

The legislature is asked to establish the agricultural college as an institution separate and away from the state university. Change of scene and change of diet will, however, not affect its chronic weakness. An agricultural college is costly and unsatisfactory. Such has been the experience of other states, as well as Nebraska. For that reason the state agricultural farm and college, as such, should be abolished.

THE CRUADE OF THE GOVERNMENT AGAINST THE MORMON CHURCH AND ITS PROPERTY.

The crusade of the government against the Mormon church and its property, appears to be particularly satisfactory to the receiver and his associates. The former receives a salary of ten thousand dollars for the first year, an attorney fifty-five hundred dollars, and an assistant four thousand dollars. It is safe to predict that their annual report will applaud the Edmunds law and demonstrate that the only way to stamp out polygamy is to make the apostles pay liberally for the luxury.

PRESIDENTS OF A CENTURY.

Statemen Who Have Administered the Government 100 Years.

A GALAXY OF IMMORTALS.

The fifth president of the United States, James Monroe, whose famous "doctrine" was a high reputation for bravery as a soldier. He was born on the 28th of September, 1758, in Westmoreland, Virginia, and at the age of eighteen abandoned his studies and joined Washington in New York, making during the ensuing two or three years a high reputation for bravery as a soldier. In 1783 he appeared in the continental congress, of which he became a leading member...

Sketches of Chief Magistrates.

When President Cleveland's term of office expires at noon to-day, March 4, there will have been completed a hundred years of continuous government in the United States. The occasion seems appropriate for a brief review of the careers of the twenty-one presidents who have administered the government during its first century of existence.

GEORGE WASHINGTON. The first president of the United States was the most illustrious of our statesmen. As soon as the constitution was adopted, in the framing of which Washington shared as president of the convention, he was elected to the office of citizen entitled above all others to first executive functions under it, and with extreme reluctance yielded to the popular will. This first eminent of American patriots, the record of whose illustrious career should be a part of the education of every American citizen, was descended from an old English family, the name of Washington being traceable as far back as the thirteenth century. About 1657, ten brothers of John Lawrence Washington emigrated to Virginia and settled at Bridge-Creek, on the Potomac, in the county of Staffordshire. Lawrence, the father of George Washington, himself a most estimable man, was twice married, and she who is honored in our history as Mary, the mother of Washington, was his second wife. Her great son was born on the 22d of February, 1732.

JOHN ADAMS. The second president of the United States was a man of high ability and a politician of no common skill. He was born on the 30th of October, 1735, in Braintree, Massachusetts. He was educated at Harvard College, and in 1759 he was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the Virginia convention, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress.

ANDREW JACKSON. The seventh president of the United States was a man of high ability and a politician of no common skill. He was born on the 15th of March, 1767, in Waxhatch, North Carolina. He was educated at the University of the South, and in 1787 he was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the Virginia convention, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress.

WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON. The ninth president of the United States was a man of high ability and a politician of no common skill. He was born on the 9th of February, 1773, in North Bend, Ohio. He was educated at the University of the South, and in 1793 he was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the Virginia convention, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress.

JOHN TYLER. The tenth president of the United States was a man of high ability and a politician of no common skill. He was born on the 29th of March, 1790, in Charles City, Virginia. He was educated at the University of the South, and in 1810 he was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the Virginia convention, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress.

JAMES K. POLK. The fourteenth president of the United States was a man of high ability and a politician of no common skill. He was born on the 2nd of February, 1795, in Meigs County, Tennessee. He was educated at the University of the South, and in 1815 he was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the Virginia convention, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress.

ZACHARY TAYLOR. The seventeenth president of the United States was a man of high ability and a politician of no common skill. He was born on the 24th of November, 1784, in Greenburg, Kentucky. He was educated at the University of the South, and in 1804 he was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the Virginia convention, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress.

MILWAUKEE. The eighteenth president of the United States was a man of high ability and a politician of no common skill. He was born on the 31st of July, 1797, in Waukesha, Wisconsin. He was educated at the University of the South, and in 1817 he was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the Virginia convention, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress.

FRANKLIN PIERCE. The nineteenth president of the United States was a man of high ability and a politician of no common skill. He was born on the 23rd of March, 1794, in New Hampshire. He was educated at the University of the South, and in 1814 he was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the Virginia convention, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress.

REUBEN W. WOODBURY. The twentieth president of the United States was a man of high ability and a politician of no common skill. He was born on the 18th of December, 1782, in New York. He was educated at the University of the South, and in 1802 he was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the Virginia convention, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and in 1773 he was elected to the Continental Congress.
