OMAHA'S CREDIT.

It Is First Class and Eastern Brokers Prove It.

City Treasurer Rush made an extraordi nary sale of Omaha bonds yesterday. The amount of the bonds sold was $275,000, divided as follows: $100,000 Union Pacific renewal bonds, $100,000 sewer and $75,000 paving. There were many competitors among the eastern financial brokers, and the bids varied from $1.03 17-100 to $1.08% premium on the batch of bonds. The brokers who purchased the bonds at 8% cents pre mium with accrued interest, were N. W. Harris & Co., of Chicago. The New York and Boston brokers who have heretofore been the successful bidders for Omaha securities were in with generous offers, but lost the bonds by merely fractions of cents. The city treasurer stated that it was a wonderful sale and had exceeded all previous expectations. He attributed the big preous expectations. He attributed the big pre-mium paid on the bonds to two causes. One was the fact that money was plentiful in the east and bonds were in active demand. The principal and stronger cause was that $172,000 worth of Omaha securities fell due April 1 and were redeemed by the treasurer as fast as they were presented. According to these facts Mr. Rush says that Omaha

THE SUNDAY LAW. If It is Being Broken The Offenders Escape

The cases against the saloonkeepers of the city for selling liquor on Sunday have not panned out very well. Out of nearly a score of complaints but three convictions have been secured, and these have appealed their cases to the district court. The police court juries have not taken kindly to the methods adopted by the police in sending spies to secure whisky on Sunday from the saloonsecure whisky on Sunday from the saloon-keepers, pleading sick wives and similar ex-cuses and then turning informer on the saloonkeeper. The case against Ed Rothery was tried before Judge Berka yesterday afternoon. Two witnesses who were in Rothecy's place at the time arranging some correspondence for a sporting journal, testified positively that Hudson did not secure anything to drink in the place. General Smith, for the prosecution, tried to show that the defense's witnesses were mistaken as to Hudson's appearance and had in mind some other party who had been refused a drink. "How did who had been refused a drink. "How did Hudson look!" asked the general of one wit-ness. "He looked like a hobo," was the answer that convulsed the court and spectators. Realizing that it would be useless to attempt to shake the evidence of such a witness th general rested and Judge Berka dismissed the case.
