SYMPATHY FOR PARNELL.

How It Was Manifested in Omaha Last Night.

ELOQUENCE AND ENTHUSIASM.

The Meeting at Boyd's Opera House an Entire Success, Closing With Resolutions of No Uncertain Sound.

The Parnell Meeting.

Patriotic Irishmen and sympathizers with Parnell in their great fight for liberty and justice, assembled in goodly numbers at Boyd's opera house last night to help in one of the greatest causes for the little isle across the sea—home rule.

The theater presented something of a change in appearance when the auditors began to arrive. There was no tragedy to be enacted, no comedy to be played, no farce or drama to be witnessed. There were no pretty, décolleté actresses to emerge from the green room, but instead came Irish speakers and some not Irish, but all in sympathy with Parnell.

On the stage was a circle of chairs, arranged somewhat similar to a minstrel first part, and the "interlocutor," or, more plainly speaking, chairman, for this occasion, was Governor John M. Thayer. In the center of the stage, just before the footlights, was a magnificent bouquet of roses of various colors, to which Hon. John L. Webster made an eloquent apostrophe in the course of his speech.

Among the distinguished gentlemen upon the stage were: Governor Thayer, J. M. Thurston, T. J. Mahoney, M. V. Gannon, M. Donovan, R. O'Keefe, Colonel Chase, J. E. Boyd, J. P. Sutton, J. L. Miles and John Groves.

The demonstration was held for the purpose of raising a fund to aid Parnell in his fight for liberty, home rule and against the tyranny and coercion of the English Tory government and its right bower, the London Times. The fund has been established in the eastern cities and has extended west with the prime object of enabling Parnell, and through him, the Irish cause, to draw itself against the foul slanders printed in the Times and the Tory government was represented by the most eminent counsel, while Parnell and his colleagues had the services of Sir Charles Russell. The result of the investigation may be judged by the fight and suicide of Pignot. To defray the expenses of the trial the Parnell fund has been started, and to contribute to this fund the Irish people and sympathizers to that cause assembled last night at the opera house.

When the dozen or more distinguished speakers of the evening came upon the stage John L. Miles introduced Governor John M. Thayer, who stated that he was grateful for the invitation extended him to preside over a meeting so important, and which was held in the interest of Charles Stewart Parnell. The governor hoped for success in the great Irish cause in which Parnell was engaged. The speaker thought he saw the signs of brighter days for home rule. He congratulated Mr. Parnell for his great work. Justice was slow, with a leaden foot, but it got around at last with an iron grasp. He trusted that the day was near at hand when evil, landlordism and Pignottism would be banished forever. The governor stated that the English government had been a party to the crime against Parnell. Pignot, he said, had done the only decent thing by ending his existence, and that if the London Times would follow his example by shooting itself, it would be a blessing. The paper and Pignot had done a pitiful thing, but they fell into it themselves. It had always been a great mystery to him why England could not see what Ireland would do for her if England would only be just to the little isle across the sea. In conclusion the governor said he had faith to say that justice would be done to Ireland.

As chairman of the meeting, Governor Thayer introduced John M. Thurston, who said:

that of your committee to sympathize with Parnell, and to protest against the gigantic conspiracy against him and the Irish people. The gathering of American citizens to sympathize with Ireland in efforts in favor of free government has brought down on them, I am sorry to say, the disfavor of many American papers. Why should we not sympathize with the great moral effort that tries all countries against the tyranny and coercion of despotic governments and despotisms? So long as this constitutional government continues, as its citizens be pure, just so long does it stand as a menace against despotic and tyrannical governments. Any government in which every man may not assert his just rights, should be effaced from the face of the earth. To-day we are here to congratulate ourselves that the time has gone by in the history of the world when revolutions against tyrannical, but it is the arbitrary settlement of great principles by thinking men of both and all nations. When Pignot was convicted on his own word, the cause of Ireland was won, and only remains for people of Great Britain, at the next election, to show that education in the wrongs of Ireland will result in the granting of home rule to all its people are desirous of and wish for." The speaker closed his remarks and Governor Thayer stated that he was very much pleased to hear that Dr. George L. Miller, who was booked for a speech, was afflicted with a sore throat and would have to be excused.

John P. Sutton, of Lincoln, was the next man who spoke. When he looked upon this city he thought of the dear old land which he left in ruins and decay caused by the tyranny and coercion of English government and landlords. The making of this great and glorious country had been from freedom and untrammelled government. There was not a doubt that in three years home rule would be given to Ireland. He said he was very much pleased to hear that the people who are now struggling against tyranny and oppression.

After the band had played a short piece the chairman introduced Hon. John L. Webster, who made an elaborate address. When he first came to this city thinking of the how from a system acknowledging the people's right to control their own political affairs, and that we extend our cordial sympathy and support to the Irish people in their great and well sustained struggle for home rule.

Resolved, That we congratulate Charles Stewart Parnell and the Irish people on the exposure of the informer's conspiracy of the Tory government and the Times newspaper to blacken the character of the Irish race by the attempted moral assassination of the recognized leaders.

Resolved, That we approve of a peaceful and Christian-like settlement of the international quarrel between England and Ireland. At the same time we fully recognize the right of every people to try every means in their power for the attainment of that which Americans have so happily and successfully won, the right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Resolved, That we congratulate our fellow citizens, Patrick Egan, of Nebraska, upon the care, prudence, and skill, which enabled him to unreach the infancy of Pignot and lay bare the hate, malice, and perfidiousness of the Times-Tory combination against justice and liberty.

Resolved, That we take an especial pride in the heroic and self-sacrificing conduct of

Wm. O'Brien, and those imprisoned with him, in their manly efforts to expose the systematic torture which the Tory government inflicts upon its political prisoners, and we send them an assurance in their prison cells that their determination is greatly appreciated by the Irish race, and has the approval of all lovers of human liberty.

Mr. Brennan was one of the organizers of the Land League. In the course of his fiery speech he said:

"After the manner in which you have received the reading of the resolutions which I have presented for your consideration, it will be unnecessary for me to say much respecting them, more especially after the eloquent speeches which you have just heard.

We meet here, however, and send a message to our brothers across the water that the war of races should cease. We see no reason why there should not be a republic of England, Scotland and Ireland as well as that of the United States. We have had the peace of death, of the prison cell, but now we want the peace of honor. Our work now is one of peace to uphold the hand of a man who directed Irish enthusiasm into practical channels. Our duty is to support Parnell, and to destroy the most damnable conspiracy against a man who has done so much for the awakening of a race at hand. Our fight is not with the English people but with the infamous and Tory government of that country. It does not become us to make threats or idle boasts, but it would be good to-night to send a message to Halifax and to O'Brien's jailer that if anything happens O'Brien's hundred thousand Irishmen will get tired of giving the heirs of John Brown to the impetuous Dutch princess who seek her shores with no other possession than ten acres of ground."

M. V. Gannon and T. J. Mahoney, both lawyers and Irish orators, delivered eloquent addresses, and were enthusiastically applauded. J. E. Boyd also made a brief talk, and said he was an Irishman and sympathized with that nationality in its efforts to obtain justice.

The secretary was called upon to read the names of subscribers to the fund. The contributions amounted to about $1,000. A vote of thanks was extended to James E. Boyd for the use of the opera house, Governor Thayer, and the speakers.

The Majestic Police. About 4 a. m. this morning, as a well known physician on North Sixteenth street was returning from a visit to a patient, to whose bedside he had been suddenly called, he was halted by Officer Mike Milligan, and the following colloquy ensued:

"Where are you going?" asked the cop. "I am going about my business," replied the doctor.

"Come now," said the officer, "none of your impudence, or I'll run you in. Now, say that is your business?" "It is, sir," replied the doctor.

"Ah, an' it's fishin' yer point," said the policeman. "Dum ye, o'ill tache ye to go a fishin' at 4 o'clock in the mornin'. Come with me, now," and the cop marched the doctor to the patrol box and prepared to ring for the patrol wagon.

The saw-bones meanwhile attempted to explain matters to the policeman, but the law, and finally succeeded in explaining that the words "doctor" and "physician" meant the same thing, and thereby escaped being locked up in a foul-smelling cell as a "suspicious character."

THE BOARD OF TRADE ALERT.

Members Resent the Charge That the Body is Asleep.

CITIZENS WHO STAND ALOOF.

The Ex-Secretary Makes a Statement Showing That Hostile Criticism Is Unjust—The Excursion to Deadwood.

Last night in the board of trade hall President Martin reported to order a fair attendance of members.

The property committee reported collections for the month of March amounting to $1,554.49; from April 1 to April 8, $1,574.16; past due rental account, $1,018.30; unoccupied rooms, Nos. 38, 42, 43, 47, 56, 57, 58, 55, 11, rental value $105.

On behalf of the committee appointed to confer with Senator Manderson in respect to the location of Fort Omaha, G. M. Nattlinger asked for further time. Granted.

The secretary read a communication from the Nebraska Fuel company.

Stephenson—"Each and every person signing that paper will have to take gas and fuel for a certain length of time."

President—"We are simply asked to endorse this method of raising fuel. The communication will be laid on the table and members can sign if they desire."

There was read a letter of E. A. Houston, of Niobrara, Neb., on the advisability of the extension from Verdier, twelve miles away, to that place of the Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley railway, securing to Omaha the market of Niobrara instead of leaving it to be reached by Chicago via Running Water on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway two miles distant. Mr. Houston stated that his precinct would bond itself to the extent of $5,000 and give depot grounds, etc. Referred to committee on transportation.

A circular letter from Alex D. Anderson, dated at Washington, April 5, in relation to the Three Americas exposition in 1892, regarding progress and asking the appointment of a committee of three and the secretary to represent the Omaha board of trade. On motion the appointment of such committee was authorized.

The president said that it did not seem to be generally understood that the board of trade is a corporation. There is apparently an impression that members are elected or appointed, and are subject to strictures as an elected or appointed body. Particularly people who have lived here a long time and haven't had the liberality to join, are severer upon us. "I don't," he said, "admire those men who stand on the sidewalk and decry what is done by this body."

John G. Willis—Some of those who have been members of the banking are strangers in the city.

It C. Patterson inquired if there was not enough revenue to be derived from the rents of building to exempt members from annual dues of $25.

The secretary said that it was a matter of policy to pay the indebtedness, that when this indebtedness was paid off the stock would be worth $20,000 more, and that the by-laws provided regular assessment for current expenses.

Major Wheeler stated that the revenues of the building were pledged to the liquidation of the mortgage indebtedness, and that it would probably take the full earnings of the next two years to pay off the second mortgage bonds.

Secretary Nason had nothing to say: "I have been asked a number of times if I had seen a certain Sunday paper, to which I have replied—Yes."

forth in its articles of incorporation, copies of which are obtainable by interested parties at the office of its secretary, an examination of which will disclose the fact that it is an incorporation, duly and regularly created under the laws of the state. Membership conveys to each individual member, and to his heirs in event of death, a joint interest in the property of the association. Persons who do not hold memberships or have ownership in the corporation, have no more voice in its management than any other joint stock association. Its management, its objects, its usefulness, its origin and finally concern only its membership. However, it may not be inappropriate to say that among its objects is to aid by the organized effort it secures, in building up the commercial interests of the city. And notwithstanding the fact that the author of the articles referred to has cast insinuations that nothing to the benefit of the public has resulted by the influence and labors of the board, there are numerous incidents and a larger amount of testimony to the contrary. Respecting information disseminated throughout the country by means of the secretary's report, it would be difficult to estimate the actual benefits derived from it, but I am led to conclude from the numerous applications received during the brief period of my office, and from the fact that there is justification for the publication and distribution, and since there have been no objections raised by individuals who contribute in funds for the promotion of it, I presume the plan will be continued notwithstanding the adverse criticism of such a powerful body. There is apparently an undisciplined paper as the one referred to."

There was a discussion of the Black Hills trip.

O. Lobeck said: "I am going to the Black Hills to talk for Omaha. There is where our business lies. Every traveling man we encounter is a missionary for Omaha. Instead of forty excursionists there ought to be 100."

Stephenson—"Nothing could do Omaha more good. There are hundreds of cars going from Chicago to Rapid City, and if we can get some of this trade this trip would be a grand thing for the promotion of the city. Other members expressed similar opinions, and after reaching the unanimous conclusion that the western visit could result in nothing but good to the city, the meeting adjourned."
