

SOCIETY LEADERS AND LIONS

And Their Followers Again Indulge In Social Pleasures.

A GREAT WEEK FOR WEDDINGS.

The Various Brilliant Gatherings in Ball Rooms and Parlors—Jollity Reactions Over the End of Lent.

Kauffman-Bean.

On Wednesday afternoon Miss Allie Bean, daughter of Mr. George L. Bean, 2215 Capitol avenue, was united in wedlock to...

Stelling-Palmer.

At 3 p. m., Wednesday, Mr. Frank S. Stelling, receiving teller in the First National bank, was married to Miss Mabel E. Palmer, daughter of Mr. J. H. Palmer, of...

Hay-Blackman.

The marriage of Henry Ray, judge advocate of the department of the Platte, to Miss Ida Blackman, sister of Mrs. Ernest Hiall, took place in Trinity, Monday.

Bartow-Wright.

Alfred Bartow, a leading attorney of Chadron, Neb., was married Monday at Trinity cathedral, Bishop Worthington officiating, to Mrs. Mary A. Wright.

Drexel-McKenna.

On Wednesday evening Miss Minnie McKenna, one of the most popular and charming young ladies in Omaha, was married to Dr. D. M. Drexel, of Chicago.

Womans Relief Corps Ball.

On Wednesday evening at Exposition hall, the Woman's Relief Corps will give a grand ball for the benefit of disabled soldiers and war widows and orphans.

Social Forms at Home.

The youth who is careful to salute his lady friends and acquaintances according to the usages of good society sometimes seems to forget to pay the same respect to his sister, not because he is wanting in affectionate regard, but because he has grown so familiar with her that it seems awkward to him to treat her in any formal way.

It should be exhibited. Politeness at home and between relatives, even between husband and wife, though of much more importance in every-day life, is too often neglected.

The Western Art Association.

The committee having charge of the forthcoming spring exhibition of the Western Art association, which is to be held from the 15th of May until the 30th of the same, is composed of the following members: Clement Chase, chairman; W. H. Alfred, Dr. Jonas, Mrs. Edwin Davis, Mrs. M. S. Silkworth, Mrs. Dr. Park, H. A. Collins, Miss E. J. Shultz, Miss M. Butterfield.

Industry a Society Fad.

Would heart of man ever think it! Industry has positively come to be the fashion; and now the average girl of society takes pride in earning—at least in the appearance of earning—her own living.

Fireman's Ball.

The second grand annual ball of the Omaha Paid Firemen's Association will be given at Exposition hall on Tuesday evening, over that the fire ladders could hope for.

Merry Metropolitans.

The closing ball of the Metropolitan club took place at the club rooms Tuesday evening, April 23, and was one of the most pleasant of the season.

Mrs. Margaret's Closing Party.

Mrs. Margaret's last party of the season was given at Hartman hall on Thursday. Unfortunately the hostess was prostrated with pneumonia at the time, and could not be present, but she insisted that the dance should go on just the same.

Pay as They Go.

The Omaha motor company has paid into the city treasury $12,000 for paving done by the construction of its tracks on Sherman avenue.

Articles of Incorporation.

The Wyoming Capital Investment company filed articles of incorporation yesterday with the county clerk.

Coming Cabmen's Ball.

One of the most notable social events of the coming week will be the first annual ball of the gripmen and conductors of the cable line on Tuesday evening at Exposition hall.

The prospects are very good for the sale of a great many more. No pains are to be spared to make the initial dance equal to any grand ball given in Omaha.

Emmett Association Ball.

Masonic hall was crowded with merry dancers on Monday evening, the event being the twentieth annual ball of the Emmett Monument association.

Omaha Guards Reception.

On Tuesday evening the Omaha Guards held their reception in honor of the centennial of the inauguration of George Washington.

His "Darling Nellie Gray."

April 24 Mr. R. A. Smith, of this city, was united in wedlock to Miss Nellie Gray, of Peru, Ind.

Social Gossip.

Mrs. R. E. Gaylord is in Chicago. Mr. J. H. Evans is on his way to Europe. The black-lace dress is declining in popularity.

G. W. Cook returned Wednesday from a trip to California.

Colonel Bronson and wife have returned from Los Angeles.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton has returned to New York City.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Crittenden will summer at Fort Benton, Mont.

The Young Men's club gave a May party Wednesday evening.

Miss Burns gave a reception at her home, 1723 Dodge, on Thursday evening.

The Vesta chapter gives a May party at Exposition hall on Thursday evening.

On May 13 the A. O. U. M. society will give a ball for the benefit of the A. O. H. hall.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mowery have returned from a month's trip in the east and south.

Miss Nellie Gray, of Peru, Ind., is visiting Miss Fanny Bishop, on California street.

Silas W. Niles, of the B. V., left Wednesday for Nileville, N. Y., to visit with his parents.

Dr. J. Hensley, late of Winterset, Ia., will make his future home in this city at 833 Park avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Poppleton, and the Misses Poppleton report that their trip south was a pleasant one.

Mrs. Dr. Coffman gave a luncheon at the Union club Thursday afternoon to a number of lady friends.

The coming event at Germania hall is the concert and ball given by the pupils of Prof. Ed Dvorak on the evening of May 25.

Hon. John L. Webster, of Iowa, and the Misses Dandy left for New York Wednesday to attend the centennial celebration.

Mrs. E. M. Keating gave a musicale yesterday afternoon at her home, on the tenth street in honor of Mrs. Montefiore and Miss Metz.

The eighth annual May party of the Home Circle club will be given at Germania hall next at Germania hall. The usual splendid time is anticipated.

A fishing party, consisting of O. J. Phillips, T. H. H. Wells, J. J. Jones, J. H. McConell and Rev. T. M. House, has been at Manitowish, Minn.

Ed Austin returned from Owatonna, Minn., on Tuesday, with one of the fairest bunches of that section.

Mrs. Austin are at home Tuesday-second and Pierce.

The last session for the season of the West End Euchre club was held Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Nichols, on Mason street.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. French at their beautiful new residence in Central Park, on Tuesday evening, for their daughters, the Misses French and Charles French.

Miss Lizzie Dwyer, for many years clerk at S. P. Morse's, leaves next Tuesday on a visit to her brother at Walla Walla, W. T.

On last Tuesday evening Mrs. J. Daley tendered the young lady a farewell party at her residence corner Thirty-fifth and Franklin streets.

A very pleasant party was given by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. French at their beautiful new residence in Central Park, on Tuesday evening, for their daughters, the Misses French and Charles French.

The splendid exploit of the officers of the Missouri in taking off more than seven hundred people from the sinking ship and landing them safely makes it evident that the chief hope for a steamer disabled in mid-ocean is to get into a route where she will be sighted by other steamers able to carry her.

An interesting saying the New York Herald.

An understanding existed among transatlantic steamship companies that their vessels would, at least in the stormy months, follow definite routes—varied, of course, to suit the changes of the seasons—the North Atlantic would be robbed of half its perils.

Just as the safety of travelers crossing the Sahara is immensely increased if they keep to the regular routes, so it is with the safety of life at sea as increased if the great steamship fleets adhere to definite and advertised routes.

It is to be hoped that the International Marine conference, which meets at Washington in October, will earnestly consider the importance of this suggestion.

The idea has more than once proposed that there should be at intervals of ten degrees certain defined crossings in the transatlantic routes to which all passenger steamers should agree to approach in each passage near enough to sight any vessel at the crossing. A disabled vessel, by making for one of these crossings, would thus in a few hours be overtaken by one or more powerful steamships. Possibly this plan of "relief areas" would entail less delay on steamers generally than the adoption of the "lane" routes.

Pay as They Go.

The Omaha motor company has paid into the city treasury $12,000 for paving done by the construction of its tracks on Sherman avenue.

Articles of Incorporation.

The Wyoming Capital Investment company filed articles of incorporation yesterday with the county clerk.

Coming Cabmen's Ball.

One of the most notable social events of the coming week will be the first annual ball of the gripmen and conductors of the cable line on Tuesday evening at Exposition hall.

ECHOES FROM THE ANTE-ROOM

Celebration of the Seventieth Anniversary of Oddfellowship.

V. A. S. LODGES CONSOLIDATE.

Coming Knights Templar Conclave—Oriole's Second Anniversary Proposed Nebraska Masonic Home—Pythian Points.

I. O. F.

Bohemian Court Brokop Velky has been organized at South Omaha by District Deputy High Chief Ranger George J. Seltzer, with twenty-eight charter members.

Knights Templar.

The annual convocation of the grand commandery of Nebraska at York, Tuesday, will be thoroughly representative of the state.

Old Fellows Celebrate.

The Custer County Lodges of I. O. O. F. celebrated the seventieth anniversary of their order at Broken Bow yesterday, under the marshaling of Major C. E. Wilkinson.

Knights Templar.

The annual convocation of the grand commandery of Nebraska at York, Tuesday, will be thoroughly representative of the state.

Modern Woodmen.

Venerable Charles Jones and Neighbor Bridenstain, of Council Bluffs, visited the Omaha camp Wednesday and exemplified secret work.

A. O. U. W.

Committees from the different lodges in Omaha and South Omaha have been appointed to make arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the supreme lodge which meets in this city the third Tuesday in June.

It WAN TAME.

The Commissioners' Meeting Devoid of Swear Words or Anger.

It WAN TAME.

The following bills to run county graders Nos. 1 and 2 were opened and referred to the board of county commissioners.

It WAN TAME.

The following resolution, introduced by Mr. Mount, was adopted.

It WAN TAME.

Matthews Smith, who was recently found in the city of St. Louis, was arrested and taken to the city of St. Louis.

been charter members, by Mrs. A. A. Young, of Concord, N. H. Mrs. Young will also institute a lodge at Hastings, Neb., before returning home.

Royal Arcanum.

Fidelity court No. 136, Royal Arcanum, had a session of special interest last Friday evening. There were a goodly number of visitors from Omaha.

Old Fellows Celebrate.

The Custer County Lodges of I. O. O. F. celebrated the seventieth anniversary of their order at Broken Bow yesterday, under the marshaling of Major C. E. Wilkinson.

Knights Templar.

The annual convocation of the grand commandery of Nebraska at York, Tuesday, will be thoroughly representative of the state.

Modern Woodmen.

Venerable Charles Jones and Neighbor Bridenstain, of Council Bluffs, visited the Omaha camp Wednesday and exemplified secret work.

A. O. U. W.

Committees from the different lodges in Omaha and South Omaha have been appointed to make arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the supreme lodge which meets in this city the third Tuesday in June.

It WAN TAME.

The Commissioners' Meeting Devoid of Swear Words or Anger.

It WAN TAME.

The following bills to run county graders Nos. 1 and 2 were opened and referred to the board of county commissioners.

It WAN TAME.

The following resolution, introduced by Mr. Mount, was adopted.

It WAN TAME.

Matthews Smith, who was recently found in the city of St. Louis, was arrested and taken to the city of St. Louis.

AMELIE'S BEAUTIFUL MOUTH

Ethiastic Description of It By Senator Ingalls' Daughter.

THIS WOMAN KEEPS SECRETS.

She is Mrs. Clarkson, and is as Shrewd a Politian as Her Husband—Gossip About the Fair Sex.

Tea Cigarettes.

The ingenuity of the women of London and Paris in inventing new dissipations will not limit, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

Tea Cigarettes.

The ingenuity of the women of London and Paris in inventing new dissipations will not limit, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

Tea Cigarettes.

The ingenuity of the women of London and Paris in inventing new dissipations will not limit, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

Tea Cigarettes.

The ingenuity of the women of London and Paris in inventing new dissipations will not limit, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

Tea Cigarettes.

The ingenuity of the women of London and Paris in inventing new dissipations will not limit, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

Tea Cigarettes.

The ingenuity of the women of London and Paris in inventing new dissipations will not limit, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

Tea Cigarettes.

The ingenuity of the women of London and Paris in inventing new dissipations will not limit, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

Tea Cigarettes.

The ingenuity of the women of London and Paris in inventing new dissipations will not limit, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

Tea Cigarettes.

The ingenuity of the women of London and Paris in inventing new dissipations will not limit, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

my turn for presentation I thought of a tall, statuesque woman with a head crowned with the rare auburn locks so loved by Titian, for this was the impression I had of her from the fact that I had read of this far-famed Virginia beauty. I have scarcely recovered from the surprise I experienced when I saw her, and I was in doubt for some time as to whether I was not being imposed upon. Next everything I have read about her seems to be a complete contradiction, or else she impressed me differently. In the first place she is short, with a pretty figure, and her hair is yellow. Her eyes, most notably, are blue. She alone possesses the power to describe them. They are dreamy, unfathomable eyes shaded by such long, curly, dark lashes that their color is lost. Her face is a study in itself, not only in its features, but in its expression. Every feature is expressive. Her mouth is as sensitive as a child's waiting to cry or smile. Whether speaking or listening, every word she utters is full of meaning. She is dramatic and self-conscious. I saw no trace of either during the moments I watched her and talked with her. For everyone who was presented to her she had a pleasant greeting. She never seemed to be not at all affected. Could you have heard, as I did, her conversation with two young girls, you would not have recognized in her anything theatrical. Her horse, with its shining coat, its long neck, its white poll, its long, dreamy rides through the old Virginia hills, and her girl friends were the subjects which she talked about as simply as any child. I asked her when she worked, and she said: "In the city, for two years, as she is going abroad soon to be gone a long time. She and her husband propose to ride horseback through England, for which purpose her favorite horse will be sent over the ocean.

AMELIE'S BEAUTIFUL MOUTH

My turn for presentation I thought of a tall, statuesque woman with a head crowned with the rare auburn locks so loved by Titian, for this was the impression I had of her from the fact that I had read of this far-famed Virginia beauty. I have scarcely recovered from the surprise I experienced when I saw her, and I was in doubt for some time as to whether I was not being imposed upon. Next everything I have read about her seems to be a complete contradiction, or else she impressed me differently. In the first place she is short, with a pretty figure, and her hair is yellow. Her eyes, most notably, are blue. She alone possesses the power to describe them. They are dreamy, unfathomable eyes shaded by such long, curly, dark lashes that their color is lost. Her face is a study in itself, not only in its features, but in its expression. Every feature is expressive. Her mouth is as sensitive as a child's waiting to cry or smile. Whether speaking or listening, every word she utters is full of meaning. She is dramatic and self-conscious. I saw no trace of either during the moments I watched her and talked with her. For everyone who was presented to her she had a pleasant greeting. She never seemed to be not at all affected. Could you have heard, as I did, her conversation with two young girls, you would not have recognized in her anything theatrical. Her horse, with its shining coat, its long neck, its white poll, its long, dreamy rides through the old Virginia hills, and her girl friends were the subjects which she talked about as simply as any child. I asked her when she worked, and she said: "In the city, for two years, as she is going abroad soon to be gone a long time. She and her husband propose to ride horseback through England, for which purpose her favorite horse will be sent over the ocean.

AMELIE'S BEAUTIFUL MOUTH

My turn for presentation I thought of a tall, statuesque woman with a head crowned with the rare auburn locks so loved by Titian, for this was the impression I had of her from the fact that I had read of this far-famed Virginia beauty. I have scarcely recovered from the surprise I experienced when I saw her, and I was in doubt for some time as to whether I was not being imposed upon. Next everything I have read about her seems to be a complete contradiction, or else she impressed me differently. In the first place she is short, with a pretty figure, and her hair is yellow. Her eyes, most notably, are blue. She alone possesses the power to describe them. They are dreamy, unfathomable eyes shaded by such long, curly, dark lashes that their color is lost. Her face is a study in itself, not only in its features, but in its expression. Every feature is expressive. Her mouth is as sensitive as a child's waiting to cry or smile. Whether speaking or listening, every word she utters is full of meaning. She is dramatic and self-conscious. I saw no trace of either during the moments I watched her and talked with her. For everyone who was presented to her she had a pleasant greeting. She never seemed to be not at all affected. Could you have heard, as I did, her conversation with two young girls, you would not have recognized in her anything theatrical. Her horse, with its shining coat, its long neck, its white poll, its long, dreamy rides through the old Virginia hills, and her girl friends were the subjects which she talked about as simply as any child. I asked her when she worked, and she said: "In the city, for two years, as she is going abroad soon to be gone a long time. She and her husband propose to ride horseback through England, for which purpose her favorite horse will be sent over the ocean.

AMELIE'S BEAUTIFUL MOUTH

My turn for presentation I thought of a tall, statuesque woman with a head crowned with the rare auburn locks so loved by Titian, for this was the impression I had of her from the fact that I had read of this far-famed Virginia beauty. I have scarcely recovered from the surprise I experienced when I saw her, and I was in doubt for some time as to whether I was not being imposed upon. Next everything I have read about her seems to be a complete contradiction, or else she impressed me differently. In the first place she is short, with a pretty figure, and her hair is yellow. Her eyes, most notably, are blue. She alone possesses the power to describe them. They are dreamy, unfathomable eyes shaded by such long, curly, dark lashes that their color is lost. Her face is a study in itself, not only in its features, but in its expression. Every feature is expressive. Her mouth is as sensitive as a child's waiting to cry or smile. Whether speaking or listening, every word she utters is full of meaning. She is dramatic and self-conscious. I saw no trace of either during the moments I watched her and talked with her. For everyone who was presented to her she had a pleasant greeting. She never seemed to be not at all affected. Could you have heard, as I did, her conversation with two young girls, you would not have recognized in her anything theatrical. Her horse, with its shining coat, its long neck, its white poll, its long, dreamy rides through the old Virginia hills, and her girl friends were the subjects which she talked about as simply as any child. I asked her when she worked, and she said: "In the city, for two years, as she is going abroad soon to be gone a long time. She and her husband propose to ride horseback through England, for which purpose her favorite horse will be sent over the ocean.

AMELIE'S BEAUTIFUL MOUTH

My turn for presentation I thought of a tall, statuesque woman with a head crowned with the rare auburn locks so loved by Titian, for this was the impression I had of her from the fact that I had read of this far-famed Virginia beauty. I have scarcely recovered from the surprise I experienced when I saw her, and I was in doubt for some time as to whether I was not being imposed upon. Next everything I have read about her seems to be a complete contradiction, or else she impressed me differently. In the first place she is short, with a pretty figure, and her hair is yellow. Her eyes, most notably, are blue. She alone possesses the power to describe them. They are dreamy, unfathomable eyes shaded by such long, curly, dark lashes that their color is lost. Her face is a study in itself, not only in its features, but in its expression. Every feature is expressive. Her mouth is as sensitive as a child's waiting to cry or smile. Whether speaking or listening, every word she utters is full of meaning. She is dramatic and self-conscious. I saw no trace of either during the moments I watched her and talked with her. For everyone who was presented to her she had a pleasant greeting. She never seemed to be not at all affected. Could you have heard, as I did, her conversation with two young girls, you would not have recognized in her anything theatrical. Her horse, with its shining coat, its long neck, its white poll, its long, dreamy rides through the old Virginia hills, and her girl friends were the subjects which she talked about as simply as any child. I asked her when she worked, and she said: "In the city, for two years, as she is going abroad soon to be gone a long time. She and her husband propose to ride horseback through England, for which purpose her favorite horse will be sent over the ocean.

AMELIE'S BEAUTIFUL MOUTH

My turn for presentation I thought of a tall, statuesque woman with a head crowned with the rare auburn locks so loved by Titian, for this was the impression I had of her from the fact that I had read of this far-famed Virginia beauty. I have scarcely recovered from the surprise I experienced when I saw her, and I was in doubt for some time as to whether I was not being imposed upon. Next everything I have read about her seems to be a complete contradiction, or else she impressed me differently. In the first place she is short, with a pretty figure, and her hair is yellow. Her eyes, most notably, are blue. She alone possesses the power to describe them. They are dreamy, unfathomable eyes shaded by such long, curly, dark lashes that their color is lost. Her face is a study in itself, not only in its features, but in its expression. Every feature is expressive. Her mouth is as sensitive as a child's waiting to cry or smile. Whether speaking or listening, every word she utters is full of meaning. She is dramatic and self-conscious. I saw no trace of either during the moments I watched her and talked with her. For everyone who was presented to her she had a pleasant greeting. She never seemed to be not at all affected. Could you have heard, as I did, her conversation with two young girls, you would not have recognized in her anything theatrical. Her horse, with its shining coat, its long neck, its white poll, its long, dreamy rides through the old Virginia hills, and her girl friends were the subjects which she talked about as simply as any child. I asked her when she worked, and she said: "In the city, for two years, as she is going abroad soon to be gone a long time. She and her husband propose to ride horseback through England, for which purpose her favorite horse will be sent over the ocean.

AMELIE'S BEAUTIFUL MOUTH

My turn for presentation I thought of a tall, statuesque woman with a head crowned with the rare auburn locks so loved by Titian, for this was the impression I had of her from the fact that I had read of this far-famed Virginia beauty. I have scarcely recovered from the surprise I experienced when I saw her, and I was in doubt for some time as to whether I was not being imposed upon. Next everything I have read about her seems to be a complete contradiction, or else she impressed me differently. In the first place she is short, with a pretty figure, and her hair is yellow. Her eyes, most notably, are blue. She alone possesses the power to describe them. They are dreamy, unfathomable eyes shaded by such long, curly, dark lashes that their color is lost. Her face is a study in itself, not only in its features, but in its expression. Every feature is expressive. Her mouth is as sensitive as a child's waiting to cry or smile. Whether speaking or listening, every word she utters is full of meaning. She is dramatic and self-conscious. I saw no trace of either during the moments I watched her and talked with her. For everyone who was presented to her she had a pleasant greeting. She never seemed to be not at all affected. Could you have heard, as I did, her conversation with two young girls, you would not have recognized in her anything theatrical. Her horse, with its shining coat, its long neck, its white poll, its long, dreamy rides through the old Virginia hills, and her girl friends were the subjects which she talked about as simply as any child. I asked her when she worked, and she said: "In the city, for two years, as she is going abroad soon to be gone a long time. She and her husband propose to ride horseback through England, for which purpose her favorite horse will be sent over the ocean.

AMELIE'S BEAUTIFUL MOUTH

My turn for presentation I thought of a tall, statuesque woman with a head crowned with the rare auburn locks so loved by Titian, for this was the impression I had of her from the fact that I had read of this far-famed Virginia beauty. I have scarcely recovered from the surprise I experienced when I saw her, and I was in doubt for some time as to whether I was not being imposed upon. Next everything I have read about her seems to be a complete contradiction, or else she impressed me differently. In the first place she is short, with a pretty figure, and her hair is yellow. Her eyes, most notably, are blue. She alone possesses the power to describe them. They are dreamy, unfathomable eyes shaded by such long, curly, dark lashes that their color is lost. Her face is a study in itself, not only in its features, but in its expression. Every feature is expressive. Her mouth is as sensitive as a child's waiting to cry or smile. Whether speaking or listening, every word she utters is full of meaning. She is dramatic and self-conscious. I saw no trace of either during the moments I watched her and talked with her. For everyone who was presented to her she had a pleasant greeting. She never seemed to be not at all affected. Could you have heard, as I did, her conversation with two young girls, you would not have recognized in her anything theatrical. Her horse, with its shining coat, its long neck, its white poll, its long, dreamy rides through the old Virginia hills, and her girl friends were the subjects which she talked about as simply as any child. I asked her when she worked, and she said: "In the city, for two years, as she is going abroad soon to be gone a long time. She and her husband propose to ride horseback through England, for which purpose her favorite horse will be sent over the ocean.

AMELIE'S BEAUTIFUL MOUTH

My turn for presentation I thought of a tall, statuesque woman with a head crowned with the rare auburn locks so loved by Titian, for this was the impression I had of her from the fact that I had read of this far-famed Virginia beauty. I have scarcely recovered from the surprise I experienced when I saw her, and I was in doubt for some time as to whether I was not being imposed upon. Next everything I have read about her seems to be a complete contradiction, or else she impressed me differently. In the first place she is short, with a pretty figure, and her hair is yellow. Her eyes, most notably, are blue. She alone possesses the power to describe them. They are dreamy, unfathomable eyes shaded by such long, curly, dark lashes that their color is lost. Her face is a study in itself, not only in its features, but in its expression. Every feature is expressive. Her mouth is as sensitive as a child's waiting to cry or smile. Whether speaking or listening, every word she utters is full of meaning. She is dramatic and self-conscious. I saw no trace of either during the moments I watched her and talked with her. For everyone who was presented to her she had a pleasant greeting. She never seemed to be not at all affected. Could you have heard, as I did, her conversation with two young girls, you would not have recognized in her anything theatrical. Her horse, with its shining coat, its long neck, its white poll, its long, dreamy rides through the old Virginia hills, and her girl friends were the subjects which she talked about as simply as any child. I asked her when she worked, and she said: "In the city, for two years, as she is going abroad soon to be gone a long time. She and her husband propose to ride horse