Hardins of last season. The open-ing game will be played on next Sunday with the Union Pacifics, of Omaha. The motor line will run half hour cars to the grounds. Judge Aylesworth opened the May term of the superior court yesterday morning. The docket was called, and assignments made for the trial of the several cases. The docket has been greatly reduced in size, there being less than half the number of cases for this term than there were on the docket a year ago. The actual time occupied in try-ing cases will not be very extended, but the usual waits will doubtless prolong the term to about the usual length.

Preparations are being made for the proper observance of Memorial day. As usual, Abe Lincoln Post, No. 29, will have charge of the excemonies, and other organi-zations will be invited to participate. The ladies who have heretofore superintended oration of graves will again have charge of the work. The usual committees ill soon be at work, and it is the intention to have appropriate exercises.

W. W. Chapman has made arrangements to occupy the building just vacated by the Boston Tea company, after the 1st of next month. He will occupy both floors, the first for his heavy stock of finished goods, mouldings, pictures, frames, etc., and the second floor for an art display gallery. A large sky-light will be put in, and the rooms well lighted. It will be one of the finest places of the kind in this section of the country.

The city marshal was busy yesterday looking after loose signs and bill boards that threatened the lives and limbs of pedestri-ans in the central portion of the city. Several narrow escapes from serious injury were reported on account of the flying mis-siles. A sidewalk sign in front of the Northwestern ticket office started on a little tear, and smashed a passer-by in the back, fright-ening the wits nearly out of him, but doing no particular damage. The balcony railing in front of the Salvation army hall was also blown down, but no one was injured.

Light For Chautauqua.

Mr. Thomas Officer, in a communication to the city authorities, states that it will cost $1,200 to construct an electric light line to the chautauqua grounds, and if the city will build the line, he will furnish the light free. The council is in favor of building the line, some of the aldermen expressing the belief that the city would receive enough benefit from the chautauqua to warrant it is bearing the entire cost. Alderman Everett favored appropriating $500, provided Mr. Officer would place certain lights along the line for one year.

Bids for the construction of the line have been advertised for, so it is regarded as cer-tain that it will be built. A committee was appointed to confer with Mr. Officer regarding the matter, and a report will be made at the next meeting, which will be favorably acted upon, if the line can be erected at the

Two frail females residing at Stella Long's bagnio, on Upper Broadway, appeared at police headquarters yesterday morning and desired the arrest of two of the "tin horn" gamblers of this city on the charge of larceny. The two courtezans had visited Manawa on the preceding evening in company with the two men, and on re-turning discovered the loss of a watch. The chief of police declined to make the arrest, but went out and secured the watch, which was turned over to the righful owner. The prosecuting witness was satisfied with the return of her property and the parties will not be brought to justice.

Manawa's Auspicious Opening. As previously announced, yesterday was the time set for the opening of Hotel de Manawa and the lake generally for the season of 1889. During the day but few visitors took advantage of the half-hourly trips of the Manawa motor trains to visit the lake owing to the dust and strong wind, and at 5 o'clock there were very few people to be seen of the grat crowd that was expected. At that time, however, the wind fell considerably, and soon after the stream of humanity began to flow toward the lake. Until after 9 o'clock the south bound cars were filled to overflowing and came back empty for other loads that were waiting to follow. The hotel was hardly to be recog-nized in its bright, new colors, and the great improvements about the grounds in the way of walks, lawn, shade trees, etc., combined to render more complete the wonderful transformation effected there since last season. Landlord Tamisica was seemingly present everywhere, looking after the comfort of each and every guest. It was evident at first glance that he was the man for the place, and thoroughly under-stood the art of conducting a summer resort hotel in a manner to satisfy even the numerous demands of a critical public.

It was not, however, until the doors of the dining hall were thrown open at 60'clock, that the full realization of the fitness of mine host for his position dawned upon the minds of the assembled hundreds. It was like entering another sphere. The decorations of the room were of a nature both unique and beautiful. Opposite the door was a large "Welcome," wrought in evergreens, upon the wall, and upon all sides, as well as from the ceiling, were artistically arranged figures in Jap-anese fans and parasols. The large pillar in the center of the room was almost hidden from view behind a mass of vines and flew-ers. On the tables and in various places about the room were groups of cut flowers and potted plants, the whole burdening the air with a rich and delicious fragrance.

Covers were laid for a hundred guests, and waiting to attend to their wants were a lozen colored waiters, faultlessly attired. It was a scene not soon to be forgotten by the favored ones, whose eyes first fell upon it before the rush and hurry of hungry guests had marred its perfect arrangement. The menu was most elaborate and was gotten up in a highly artistic and pleasing manper, and the guests carried them away as beautiful souvenirs of the occasion. Space forbids extended mention of the countless inscious dishes prepared by the capable chef. Dinner was served to the constantly arrividg guests until after 9 o'clock. Early in the evening the parlors were cleared for dancing, and until long after midnight the visitors tripped the light fantastic to the delightful strains of Prof. Heiser's orchestra, which furnished music for the afternoon and evening. Over two hundred people were present from Omaha, and expressed their unqualified de-light and appreciation.

The occasion was more than was expected, and opens the season at the lake in a man-ner so far in advance of all former attempts as to admit of no comparison. There was a noticeable absence of disreputable or unwel-come characters, and this feature will char-acterize the season of 1889 at Manawa. As an opening the occasion was an unquali-fied success, and as a pleasant social event it was far superior to many more pretentions affairs in swelldom. Laudiord Tamisica and his nost estimable wife are to be congratuated on the success crowning their efforts, and the pleasure-loving public may congrat-ulate itself on the auspicious outlook for its comfort and enjoyment for the coming

The Hotels Busy. Business is reported as rushing at the various hotels, and the registers bear silent testimony to the truth of the statement. "It is a little early for the rush to begin," said a leading hotel man, yesterday, "as it usually strikes us about the middle of the month strikes us about the middle of the month. There is nothing extraordinary to bring them here at this time, so I am forced to believe that it is the regular spring increase, just a little bit ahead of time. We are having all we can do. We have not had an empty front room, and very few empty back ones, for over two weeks. The indications are that the coming season will be a busy one with us, and I think that hotel men will make more money this year than for a long time."

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE PRETTY SISTER OF JOSE, by Frances Hodgson Burnett, Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

The author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" has created a great reputation for herself, and in this, her latest novel, it is fully sustained. This is a bright romance in which the passionate nature of the Spaniard is delineated with picturesque effect. The scene is laid in Madrid. The heroine, Pepita, a seifwilled, tempestuous girl of the humbler class, when introduced to the reader, is possessed of a vivacious and joyous nature, with a distinct antipathy to the amorous overtures she is continually receiving from the men in her neighborhood, owing to her fascinating beauty. In spite of this avowed antipathy, however, she at length surrenders her heart, after a very obstinate struggle, to the superior power of Sebastiano, the favorite matador of Madrid. Pepita's behavior to Sebastiano would discourage an American lover, but her apparent coldness only fans the flame of the Spaniard's passion, yet he at one time loses all hope, owing to Pepita's unpre-cedented conduct at a bull fight. When Sebastiano, at the most exciting moment of the conflict, throws the devisa into Pepita's lap, she deliberately scorns the nonor by publicly stamping on the ribbon. This action on her part is possi-ble, no doubt, but bearing in mind the fact that she was a true Spaniard, such treatment of the devisa appears very im probable.

The humbling of Pepita's proud spirit and the ultimate avowal of her fierce love for Sebastiano, is beautifully told. The splendor and excitement of a bull fight in Madrid is graphically described, The plot is not peculiar for any originality, except in the dramatic intensity of the incidents developing it. The of the incidents developing it. The story is related with the piquancy and agreeable simplicity so characteristic of the author. The illustrations are good in design, but the engraving is

DIVORCE, OF FAITHFUL AND UNFAITHFUL, by Margaret Lee; Frank F. Lovell & Co.,

The plaintive cry, "Is marriage a failure?" has become wearisome by the monotony of repetition. One man's affirmative is answered by another man's negative, and so the controversy is sustained without much benefit to society in general. 'Margaret Lee, in this novel, has apparently desired to show what a terrible failure can be made of marriage under certain conditions. The heroine, Constance, is high souled and sensitive, with a sweet dispositionaltogether a very lovable girl-though hardly a reality in this so-called practical age. Her purity of purpose shines resplendent, resembling some star conspicuous for its brightness in an atmosphere recking with subdued immorality, where separations and divorces are discussed as lightly as a change in the weather. Such is the New York society in which Constance moves. Unfortunately, she passionately loves Gilbert Travers, a very handsome, magnetic and intellectual man, but also a mass of egotism and selfishness. He finally developes into a repulsive brute. Con stance is young and invests him with all the attributes of her ideal; she marries him solely because of her great love for him; he marries her for of himself. Such a union is productive of the usual results. When the husband's passions are aroused by the fascinations of another woman, Constance, unable to cast out love for her husband, suffers inconceivable tortures. He deceives her to the end, when the refinement of cruelty is attained by his contemptible method of obtaining a divorce without her knowl-

The story certainly illustrates the evils existing in society of the present day, but the public require no novel to impress that fact, as the law courts furnish ample opportunity for studying our social immorality. The author offers no remedy for the disease, but only laments the legal facilities for obtaining livorces. From the incidents related, it is difficult to decide as to the merits or de-merits of "Divorce Made Easy." Matrimony is undoubtedly a very serious and sacred compact; its success must depend on the behavior of the contracting parties themselves. The evil in man can seldom be cured by legislation. To those who enjoy an illustration of a spreading social epidemic, this novel will prove acceptable. Prefatory to the story is an interesting review of Rt. Hon. W. E. Giadstone.

AN I. D. B. IN SOUTH AFRICA-By Louise Vesceius Sheldon. Frank F. Lovett & Co., New York.

Refused Two Future Presidents. Among the curious coincidences gathered by the Religio-Philosophical Journal is that two girls from the same small Obio villiage rejected two future presidents of the United States, and both for the same cause-poverty. Hayes was one of the suitors, but the parents of the girl opposed the match on the ground that he showed hardly sufficient ability to warrant trusting their girl in his care. Garfield paid attentions to the other, and again the parents objected that his future prospects were none too bright. Bedford, the village in question did not at that time contain 500 inhabitants. But in Ohio a girl runs great risks of refusing a president when she declines any suitor whatever. The coincidence would be stronger if it had occurred in some state where the lightning strikes less unex-

THE SAMOAN CONFERENCE.

An Estimate of Germany's Terms Receptions and Reviews.
[Copyright 1885 by James Gorgon Bennett.]
Bennin, April 7.—[New York Herald Cable

to quote, I am enabled to present to you an approximate estimate of the terms that would satisfy Germany in the solution of the Samoan difficulty. 'It cannot be denied, nor is it denied by Americans who have been in the island, that Germany has invested more money-three times as much money they claim-in Samoa as both England and the United States taken together. What the German government therefore claims is, in the first place, satisfaction for the killing of the German officers and sailors in the action with Mataafa's men on December 17 last; and, secondly, compensation for losses sustained by German investors and owners of plantations. If, therefore, the United States will purchase the plantations owned by the German company, or the Samoans themselves purchase the planta-tions, payment being guaranteed by the United States, Germany will not make the slightest objection to the installation of Malietoa or some one of the minor chiefs not hithertonamed, Tamasesee having no follow ing and Matasfa being utterly out of the question from the German standpoint. The state of war, too, still nominally existing, they will probably urgs the punishment of Matasfa, say by imprisonment for a time on board the German man-of-war or on the island under the German flag. They may waive this condition in consideration of a round sum being maid the a round sum being paid the widows, orphans or nearest relations of the Germans slain on the island. The third condition, equally acceptable to each of the three powers, is that the three col-lectively guarantee the neutrality of Samoa. In other words, Germany wishes to save the stake in the islands, and it would perhaps be the wisest policy on the part of the United States to accept this, after all, simplest solu-tion of the difficulty, and by well timed concessions to Germany's tender sense of honor and solicitude for the welfare of her col-onists, make friends of her forever.

Well informed Germans assure me that Count Herbert Bismarck had not the slightest intention of impressing the Englishspeaking members of the conference with a sense of the greatness of Germany at the expense of their own feeling when he made that famous speech in French at the begin-ning of the conference. He was obliged, though he speaks English like an English-man, to uphold his right to use French as the language of diplomatic intercourse. If he had opened the conference in English the Spaniards, Italians, Portuguese and Russams might have pointed to the precedent as justification of their right to use their own language with which he might not be equally familiar at some future conference. Nor is it true that the two American members of the conference were entirely ignorant of that language. Phelps spoke that language in diplomatic intercourse at the Austrian court, and Bates himself assured me that he understood almost every word the count ut-tered on that memorable occasion.

At the presentation of colors last Thursday morning to the First regiment foot guards, Kasson, Phelps and Bates were in evening dress and I understand that the kaiser was graciously pleased to express his regret at the iron rule that insists on that costume on such occasions as a substitute for the full uniform. Amid that large crowd of imperial guests, attired one and all in uniforms of every hue of the rainbow, the American representatives attracted general notice by the republican simplicity of their attire. It is safe to say that if ever three American diplomatists regretted the absence of diplomatic uniform in the American service, these three gentlemen did, Two young navat officers, Buckingham and Parker, were in full uniform, cocked hats and all, and a couple of handsomer young fellows could scarcely have been picked out to do Uncle Sam's service credit. While it is well known that England's leanings in the conference are towards Germany, on that vexed question of a secret un derstanding concerning Tonga, Sir Edward maintained an obstinate silence. He exother month will see the labors of the con ference ended. He had met Mr. Kasson before at the Congo conference when both of them represented their respective countries Edward's library there lies on a little spider table near the window a large folio containing, in all the glory of gilt edges and magnificent printing, the minutes of the Congo conference. When the Herald asked mittee. "The Congo conference," he re-marked, "only sat ten times during those three months. Five or six sittings, therefore, will, in all probability, suffice to settle the Samoan matter." Nothing could have been more eminently gracious than the manner in which Count Bismarck received the guests at the dinner the other day in the pavillion of the foreign office, where he makes his home. When the time for leave taking came and it was a late one, for Count Herbert is a host who will not be denied, he walked across the large garden with each one of the departing guests, while in the great trees that sur-round the house the siren voices of great numbers of nightingales poured forth a volume of sweet melody to enchant the ears of Uncle Sam's republican representatives. Some people have ventured to assert that when the emperor issued his invitation to the Americans to attend the parade at Potsdam, he did so with a view to impressing them with a sense of the military power of the emperor. If so, he certainly succeeded. "Nowhere in the world," said one of the naval officers at-tached to the commission, "can you see such absolute precision of movement, such large masses of men so deftly and skilfully han
