Midsummer struck Council Bluffs yesterday all in a heap, and the way the mercury climbed in the thermometers was a caution.

Shortly after noon the thermometers on Midway boulevard registered 84 in the shade, and this fact, more than the actual state of the weather, rendered passers-by extremely uncomfortable. Fans and straw hats appeared in profusion, indicating the arrival of the "heated term."

In yesterday's announcement of the program for Saturday afternoon at Union Driving park, it was omitted to state that "owners must drive" in the roadster races.

This will be one of the conditions of these races. Entries close at 12 o'clock, and there will be a large field of starters, and both the pacing and trotting races. The entries will not close until this evening.

Piling Up Brick—Funeral of Nolan's Victim—The City Council—Tournament Rates—General and Personal.

Kittie Edwards' Funeral.

The funeral of Kittie Edwards took place at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from her late residence on Pierce street, and was attended by a good sized representation of the sporting population of the city. The remains were clad in a rich funeral robe of cream colored satin and costly lace, and lay in a massive metallic casket in the parlor.

At the head of the casket was a bank of flowers, and grouped around it were numerous beautiful floral emblems. Filling the room in which the casket lay and those immediately adjacent, were the members of the fallen sisterhood to which the deceased belonged.

Many of them were there from simple curiosity, but the majority of them, those who had personally known the deceased, gathered to pay their last respects to the memory of a friend.

The services were conducted by Rev. T. J. Mackay, of St. Paul's church. The regular burial service of the Episcopal church was read, with the exception that the scripture lessons were the ones of the previous day. After a few very brief remarks the services were concluded with a fervent and most touching prayer.

There were few dry eyes, and many a tear of genuine sorrow was shed when the final leave was taken of the remains. The casket was closed, eight pall bearers bore it to the waiting hearse, and all that was mortal of Kittie Edwards, the woman of the world, was taken to its last resting place in Fairview cemetery, following the usual custom of women of her class. The final chapter in the terrible Nolan tragedy had been enacted.

Rates for the Tournament.

President Lacy, of the Firemen's association, states that he is now working for railroad rates that will be even better for the success of the tournament than the cent a mile for which such a fight has been made for the past two years.

Said he to the Tribune yesterday: "The Burlington and Milwaukee roads have signaled their willingness to carry our freight free, and other visitors at one fare for the round trip, and will agree to do this if the other roads will do the same. If this rate is secured, the firemen all over the state will throw up their caps and hurrah for Council Bluffs. Such a rate as that would fill every hotel in Council Bluffs and Omaha to overflowing, and would bring a crowd that our streets would swarm with people. The railroad officials say that there are volunteer fire companies all along their lines which have in years past saved thousands of dollars for them, and never received a cent in pay for it. If this had been done for private individuals, purses of $25, $50 or $100 would have been presented to them as a token of appreciation of their labors, but the railroad companies have never taken account, and they now desire to show the firemen that their services are not forgotten. They feel that they owe the firemen of the state a debt that calls for some return, and in this manner only can they fully reciprocate. The other roads have not yet been seen, but we are sanguine that this year's rate will be better than any in the history of the state, and we are fully satisfied that the June tournament will be one of the greatest and most successful ever held in the country."

Picked by the Police.

In the police court, yesterday, James Corvatt had his case continued until this morning at 10 o'clock to prepare his defense.

Morris Brown and J. Smith were each fined $8.10 for drunkenness.

E. J. Davis and Harry George were towed in for larceny, and the hearing of their cases was postponed until this morning.

The Covatt-Kramer case grew out of a difficulty on one of the electric motor trains, of which Kramer is conductor. Covatt was noisy and the conductor hounded him, a policeman collared him, and he then swore out a warrant against Kramer to get even.

The Brown case is simply the outcome of an old man's craving for drink. He was released from the station, Tuesday morning, after paying $7.00, but was soon full again, and was taken to the police station, where he was held until he was sober enough to be released.

The Brown case is a sad one. He is a fifteen-year-old youngster, who struck the city, Tuesday. Each had a suit of clothes and a trunk, and they were taken to a tailoring establishment to have them cut down. The case was reported to the police and the lads were arrested. At first they denied each other's acquaintance, but finally said that they came from Chicago and Omaha, and had bought the clothes of a man named George. The lads were considerably on the tramp order themselves, the store was regarded as fishy, and they were ordered held for examination.

Superior Court.

In the superior court, yesterday, Judge Aylesworth made material progress in disposing of the old chestnuts on the docket. There were forty-one old liquor cases that had been pending for two or three years, and by the instructions of the court, they were brought forward and dismissed.

About fifty cases were disposed of, reducing the number of cases standing on the docket to about one hundred and seventy, and many of these will share the luck of the others. The cases in today's assignment are those numbering between 530 and 600 on the bar docket.

The jurors for this term are William Dewey, George Davis, George Miller, John Booth, John Wagner, Peter Bechtel, S. Corvatt, Robert Pettibone, L. V. Williams, Sam Morrison, L. Swearingen and J. Mul-noun, Jr. It is the intention to reduce the docket this term to less than half the size at the opening of the term, and to continue the slaughter during the next term, which convenes June 8.

Something Wrong Somewhere.

Last evening thoroughly demonstrated that the legitimate drama can not hope for popular recognition in Council Bluffs under the present condition of things. The star was none other than Frederick Warde, the eminent tragedian, who, supported by an excellent company, presented "The Mountebank" to a house filled with empty chairs. It was not a $75 house at the very outside, and yet there are those who are constantly kicking because no first-class companies visit the Bluffs. In the light of last evening's experience, it need not be wondered at even if such was actually the case. However, this is not so, as many of the companies on the road every season, but their reception is almost invariably similar to that of last evening. A fourth-rate minstrel troupe, with a fair brass band attachment, is greeted with a packed house, but the eminent actors, who stand very high in their profession, receive only the slightest encouragement. The state of affairs was almost the sole topic of conversation among those who were out last night, and it was severely and bitterly criticized and condemned.

Just why this state of affairs should exist has not been satisfactorily explained, and this Bee proposes to look into the matter and see if the true cause can not be ascertained and a radical change effected. With one of the most beautiful opera houses in the world, and a city of 40,000 people, there is no good reason why a first class company can not receive liberal patronage. It is hoped that the citizens of Council Bluffs will assist in effecting the desired end.

City Council Proceedings.

The city council met last evening with a full body. As a doubt had been expressed as to the validity of the proceedings of the body without having first elected a president by formal vote, Alderman Lacy was nominated and elected to that position.

The ordinance granting to an electric motor company the right to construct a line from the Union Pacific bridge upon certain streets, was read and passed. Alderman Lacy being excused from voting.

An ordinance prescribing the duties and powers of the city treasurer was read. The hours are from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., or such other hours as the city council may elect. The twentieth rule was suspended and the ordinance adopted.

An ordinance providing for the appointment of a city veterinarian and prescribing his duties, salary, etc., was read. The mayor, with the consent of the council, moved the appointing power. The veterinarian shall examine all meat exposed for sale; all waiting horses, and all that are driven or horses exposed for sale. Another ordinance providing for milk inspection was also read.

The city veterinarian shall provide all own-ers of dairies with the necessary health, which shall be the credentials necessary to a lawful sale of the product. Both were referred to the committee on health.

Alderman Knepper moved that the city engineer advertise for bridges on Eighth and on Mynter streets, the latter to be opened for the public use. Referred to committee of the whole.

J. W. Kelly's bill for $281 for intersection grading was allowed, Alderman Lacey voting no.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Political, Financial and General Happenings in the Future State.

HERON, S. D., May 7.—[Special to THE BEE.]—For a country that is yet in swaddling clothes—only a child out into Dakota's credit is quite healthy. Treasurer Bailey said today that $75,000 of bonds at a premium of 15 per cent on the bonds bearing only 4 per cent interest. This is the lowest rate of interest which any of our eight or ten series of bonds bear, and we Dakotans think the rate of interest and the premium speak very highly for our country.

For the last decade the financial management of the territory have been well managed. There is over $90,000 in the treasury to-day, which does not include the result of the aforementioned bond sale. The money raised by the treasury sale.

Only a few of the district conventions have been held this week. Three-quarters of them are yet to be held. For May 6, 7 or 8. Thus far the delegates nominated by the republicans are of the very best class of our people—intelligent, temperate, upright.

If the nominees of the democrats are of the high character the convention of 1880 will rank along with that of '85; and it was the best assembly of good citizens ever known in the territory.

Governor Mellette has given us no appointments this week. He was at home for a week "resting" and the work day was done. Nearly all of his appointments are very satisfactory, barring the natural disappointment of those who did not receive them.

It is over this with the army of the left.

Yet more of the Oklahoma mourners arrived this week. With a few work days, acres in each of our ten land districts, without a filing on any of it, we can furnish homes for hundreds of thousands of homeless ones, and then leave untouched the 11,000,000 in the Sioux reservation that may be opened at some future date.

Hard frosts during the last few nights of the week have done a little damage to the wheat at some points. In Miner county a few fields from the frost to the ground. But the area was thus injured but as a drop in the bucket in comparison with the best fields of wheat that were untouched. Our farmers are not so much worried as they were formerly. They find that some other crops are more profitable. Corn put into cattle and hogs gives a better return; sheep raising pays well and costs nothing more except for dogs; flax yields heavily with half a chance. All this is dawning upon the farmers and they are beginning to understand it.

A large number of Russians—just from the "old soil"—have gone into Campbell and McPherson counties and are rapidly taking up the fine lands in that part of Dakota.

The railroad commissioners have organized by electing Judson LaMoure, of Pembina, president; J. L. Robinson, of Watertown, secretary. LaMoure is one of the oldest humans west of the Mississippi, and does not know it. He has been a member of the legislature three times, and was always with the chamber when it got there. Mr. LaMoure is another of the lucky newspaper men—lucky in this instance.

There is strong a determination to repeal the Sioux law constituting a jury, rather, such a unanimous belief that it will be adopted on May 14, that there is danger of having a full jury of twelve.

But it is hoped that all the press will next week open every South Dakota voter to be at the polls and vote, even though he stops corn planting a day to do it. Let us start right in building this state by everyone taking a hand in its creation.

FRESH FROM THE PRESS.

This is a novel, the incidents of which illustrate life in the diamond fields of South Africa. The plot is a very common one nowadays—the faithfulness of a wife to her husband owing to her irresistible passion for another man, who in this case is an Austrian, Herr Schwatka. This gentleman after his first sin in encouraging the illicit love of Dainty Laure behaves far better than the usual run of such offenders. The finale of the plot is somewhat abrupt, but novel.

At the reading of the episode related in the first chapter, one is prepared for a medley of improbabilities; this supposition, however, is speedily dispelled by the general interest aroused in the attractiveness of the story. A profusion of effective coloring produces an agreeable display, but the movements of the actors, though vigorous, are not quite artistic in design. There is a lack of individuality in the characters with the exception of Dainty Laure—a creation full of life. The native blood coursing through her veins is vividly presented by her passionate and impulsive behavior, especially in the scene with Herr Schwatka, when he, with his refined strength, endeavors to control the wild, impetuous daughter of Africa. Brevity and vivacity are the pleasing characteristics of the book. The printing and illustrations are exceptionally fine.

See an Allegory of the Church, Frank P. Lovell & Company, 142 and 144 Third street, New York.

Recent religious productions have been conspicuous for vigorous attempts to banish everything spiritual and mysterious from the realms of the church, leaving only a rationalistic and almost a business-like creed, which these writers would have us believe is the essence of divine faith, often ignoring the fact that life is the most inexplicable mystery there is. After a surfeit of such literature it is pleasant to turn to "She, an Allegory of the Church."

Those who have read Rider Haggard's "She," will remember the author's expressed inability to interpret his story, which he imagined was some gigantic allegory, the explanation of it he left to others. Leo Michael undertakes this task, and this is the interpretation: "She," is the church; Leo, is intuition; Holly, science; Job, practical service; Ustani, spiritualism; Mohamed, infidelity; Battail, the priesthood; Kor, the modern world; The Hamhagar, the devotees of superstition; Hot-pot, religious persecution.

She—the church, has become the sole guardian of truth, but is ignorant of the exact nature of her charge; she is also possessed of the secret of eternal life, and yet incapable of dispensing it. "She" has watched and waited through the generations for a deliverer who shall come and explain three mysteries. The allegory is well sustained by all the characters assisting in the effort to release the truth from the grasp of the church. This result is at length achieved mainly by Intuition and Science aided by Practical service; in consequence of whose actions the church finally plunges into the bath of fire which is destined to destroy the spirit. The fleshly form of the church thus perishes, but her spirit was new-born. By this act "She" receives the knowledge of truth and eternal life. Intuition and Science at the same time imbibe enough of the fire to experience its exhilarating potency. "She" becomes enshrined in the hearts of Leo and Holly, though the mantle of She falls through the gloom of the night upon Leo. As the Holy both live, so shall science and intuition work together as one. Religion is to become scientific and science religious. The allegory signifies that truth can only be found by means of the spirit; that there is no dependence on external methods either in the physical or psychic realm, but on the spirit alone. It is the soul that saves us—not we the soul—provided we go forth and seek our inheritance. This is certainly a marvellous revelation, the outcome of religious enthusiasm operating upon an imaginative mind. Those who cannot soar above the heavy clouds of rationalism will probably condemn it as fantastic; none can deny its beauty and fascination.

Mexico—By Susan Hale; illustrated: published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

Susan Hale gives a recapitulation of historical facts, the value of which is greatly modified by the insertion of much superfluous explanatory twaddle that neither amuses nor instructs. She makes the great mistake of committing to paper everything that excites her own perceptive faculties, thinking that a reciprocal sympathy will be aroused thereby in the mind of the reader. Her style is somewhat jerky; also conspicuous for a superabundance of pronouns: Laying aside these faults the work is readable and gives much interesting information regarding Mexico. The illustrations are good.

Economic Value of Electric Light and Power by A. R. Foote, Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati.

The capabilities of electricity and the beneficial results to be derived therefrom, are now exercising not only the minds of the leading scientists but also the entire community. This book contains a comprehensive mass of well arranged information, and is designed to be of service to those interested in obtaining state or municipal legislation. It is maintained that the electric service of a city should be framed on the basis of a public improvement, with special privileges calculated to enhance the interests of all citizens, rather than difficult undertaking considering the many opposing interests. However, the author substantiates his theory by dispelling the many illusions prevalent among the adversaries of electric extension. Special attention is given to the also asked of manufacturers, and those who are, or intend to become, interested in electric central stations.

These uninitiated in electrical terms will find considerable assistance in an explanation in untechnical language in the appendix. The book is not remarkable for literary brilliancy or extreme profundity of thought, but the writer has a useful knack of conveying his meaning in a simple phraseology, and succeeds in his avowed object of creating interest in his theme, and imparting much useful information.

THE STEELWARTS; OR, WHO WERE TO BEAT THE FIGHT MARION NORTON, Chicago, Ill.

This is a novel based on the assassination of Garfield. It is written by Mrs. Norton, the sister of Giteau, to prevent history from giving the same verdict that the jury gave at her brother's trial. The first portion of the story is remarkable for ambiguous phrases and contradictory statements. The writer allows her imagination to run riot, and in the excess loses proper control of her pen. Unimportant details are described.

with precision, but the frequent opportunities that occur for the display of literary ability are often treated with feebleness. In the latter part of the book, however, where the material is richer, she appears to have received a sudden infusion of literary vitality. The incidents are striking and frequent, though the style of diction still lacks refinement and grace. Many historical characters and political intrigues are woven into the story.

Sullivan's Training Quarters.

John L. Sullivan's friends in New Orleans have already selected his training quarters. Sullivan, they say, may be expected in New Orleans shortly. He will go on to Abita Springs to train for his fight with Kilrain, and thus will avoid the crowd by which he was constantly surrounded at Carrollton when he trained for his fight with Ryan. At Abita Springs he will be well cared for at the house of some friends, who have a perfect gymnasium on a small scale in one of the large apartments of their residence.
