Deserted His Wife. Mrs. Robert Wallace is a woman in distress. She came to Omaha three or four days ago, with her husband and two small sons. They came here from Canada and stopped with Mrs. Byrne, who lives at Thirtieth and Leavenworth streets. Mrs. Wallace is a sister of Mrs. Byrne's. She had $300 in money, and her husband was the possessor of a ticket for California. She gave it to her, and he has not been seen since. She claims that she has never had any domestic troubles, and can not account for his waywardness. She has no relatives in California, and she has no money.

Will Practice Law. After eighteen years of active ministerial duties, Rabbi N. S. Benson, minister of the Congregation of Israel in this city, has determined to carry out a hope cherished for years, i. e., the study and practice of law. Some time ago he sent in a communication to the board of trustees of his congregation notifying them of his future intentions and expressing no desire to serve after the expiration of his present term.

Rabbi Benson came here from Owensburg, Ky., about four years ago and found here a comparatively small congregation to the one at present. Possessing active executive and constructive ability it was not long before the membership doubled. Necessary reforms were made, several benevolent institutions were organized, the funds being mostly raised by him for the purpose of beautifying the cemetery at Pleasant hill, in which his activity was greatly manifested. Dr. Benson in his new career takes with him the good wishes of hundreds of friends whom he has made in this community. His popularity will certainly aid him materially in the prosecution of his chosen life, enabled to practice law he will exert some efforts to unite the smaller congregations in one body and organize a religious school for the children of these parents whose views are not in harmony with those of reform Jews.

Many people habitually endure a feeling of lassitude because they think they have to. If they would take Dr. J. H. McLean's Sarsaparilla this feeling of weariness would give place to vigor and vitality.

SENATOR PADDOCK.

His Views on the Omaha Postmaster-ship and Other Matters.

Senator A. S. Paddock reached the city yesterday direct from Washington, and is at the Murray. He will remain here three or four days looking after his business interests before going home to Beatrice.

"Regarding the postoffice controversy," said he, "I have no more information than the people of Omaha. I have kept entirely out of the matter, believing that it was not my business to take any part in it, but if the supervising architect has submitted his findings to Secretary Wilson, I see no reason why a decision should not be reached soon. I had a brief talk with the architect last Wednesday, and he told me then that the secretary reported Saturday afternoon, and petitions, letters and telegrams in his possession, and would be ready to lay it before the secretary on Saturday afternoon. Senator and Council are looking after the affair, and will not leave Washington until it has been settled."

"In what condition is the Omaha postmaster-ship? Is a change likely to be made soon?" "No, I think not. The president is very slow about the removal of a postmaster for cause, which means extreme offensive partisanship, dereliction of duty or crookedness in office. Senator Manderson has entire control of the postoffice, but I do not believe he has recommended anyone for the place, if he has I have no knowledge of it.

"What changes will be made in the offices of district attorney and revenue collector. When the time comes George S. Baker, of Fairmont, and John Peters, of Albion, will succeed the present incumbent. The selection has been agreed on, and their selection was favorably received by the administration."

Senator Paddock declares that the number of applications for office is no greater now, in proportion to the population, than at any previous time. He said, "but the new administration, I am satisfied, is strong and popular."

The senator left his wife and daughter, Miss Fanny, at Atlantic City, N. J., where they expect to spend the summer. He will return to New York City, and then go to Washington for a few days, and then come home to remain until congress meets again.

THE EPISCOPAL CONFERENCE.

Meetings of the Woman's Auxiliary and St. Andrew's Brotherhood.

The Woman's auxiliary of the Episcopal diocese of Nebraska met in annual session at Trinity cathedral, yesterday afternoon, Bishop Worthington, president ex-officio, presiding. There was a large attendance from the city parishes, and a number of delegates from abroad were also present.

The treasurer's report was read. It showed a deficit of $100.00 for the year ending the 31st of December. The president of the organization, Mrs. J. M. Woolworth, in a few remarks, welcomed the delegates from abroad to Omaha, and thanked them and the society generally for the work accomplished during the year. She called the attention of those present to the necessity of doing missionary work among the Indians and in this connection read a letter from an Indian girl in St. John's school, in Dakota. The letter would have done credit to any American girl.

After the different parish delegates had renewed their pledges for the ensuing year, the following officers were appointed by the bishop and confirmed by the conference: Mrs. James M. Woolworth, of Omaha, president; Mrs. J. F. Harnard, Lincoln, secretary; Mrs. E. Smith, Omaha, treasurer; Mrs. M. Oliver, Hastings; Mrs. S. S. Falls, Ashland; Mrs. Arthur Putnam, Chadron, and Mrs. T. Foley, North Platte, vice-presidents; Mrs. Robert H. Ringwalt, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. L. H. Collins, assistant secretary, and Mrs. Louis Reilly, librarian.

The bishop thanked the ladies very earnestly for the work they have accomplished during the year.

A note of thanks was extended to the ladies of the Omaha parishes by the visitors, for the hospitality extended to them, and by the entire organization to the dean and rector of the cathedral, for the use of that office, and a raising vote to Dr. Osborne, for the two eloquent addresses he delivered before the society.

The auxiliary then adjourned, sine die.

In the evening the Brotherhood of St. Andrew held their annual meeting, which was attended by nearly all the Omaha members, and a good many from outside parishes. The following papers were read and discussed:

"The Work: What is it? For Young Men or for Young Men?" Rev. C. T. Brady, Trinity church, Omaha, presiding.

"The Success of a Chapter." Milton Darling, St. Barnabas chapter, Omaha.

"Spreading Christ's Kingdom. Are We Obeying Its Laws?" Mrs. C. H. Ringwalt, Plattsmouth.

"Of What Benefit is a Chapter to a Parish?" J. B. Croffuth, Holy Trinity church, Omaha.

"How to Reach and Influence Young Men." Am. M. B. Brotherhood's Keeper? R. R. Ringwalt, All Saints' chapter, Omaha.

All these papers were very able, and were listened to with manifest interest. The meeting closed with an address by the bishop, in which he complimented the young men of the brotherhood upon the work they are doing.

ORGANIZED LABOR.

Open Consideration of Important Problems to Workmen.

The open meeting of the Omaha branch of the Gate City hall last night was well attended.

G. W. Willard was made chairman, and after making a brief address introduced J. A. Giles, president of Carpenter's union, No. 112, of North Omaha, who said:

"This is the day and date for the concentration of labor. The greatest enterprises have been created by the organization of brain, muscle and capital. It is a well-known fact that if labor is remunerated properly it will be more freely exercised, and the work much better performed. Yesterday, tractor should base his contract upon the demand of labor, and not enter into a contract at the bidding of the capitalist, and the complain because the capitalist demand that they be paid fair wages. In this light, then, we when organized, can name a just and remunerative price for our labor, and this can be figured in, in connection with actual expenditures in the fulfillment of a contract."

William McGregor was next called and said: "We should organize, and if organization is essential, so is co-operation. You can not separately do anything, but together you can do a great deal. It is material. In this direction we have undertaken the establishment of a co-operative grocery store. We have already disposed of 25 shares, and the project is one that should, and is, meeting with favor among the working class. If we can arrange this so that we can purchase our goods at a reduced price, it is the same as an advance in wages. In the details for the store we have placed in the capital stock $2,500, and limited indebtedness at $500. The charter extends over a period of twenty-five years, and the business will be looked after by bonded and honest trustees or officials. There is no reason why we should not make a success of this undertaking. Co-operation is a great thing, and has proved successful."

W. B. Musser succeeded Mr. McGregor in the presidency of the meeting, and to the extent on the needs of the tradesmen to join labor organizations. He stated to the carpenters that all that had been accomplished in Omaha in the interests of that craft was done by union No. 98. He also stated that No. 112, just organized in North Omaha, contained 120 members.

At the conclusion of his speech numerous of the non-union carpenters handed in their names and became members, and several others announced that they would join in the near future. The meeting last night was important throughout, and in which the single largest number of members were present, and decided to hold an open session in Schroeder's hall, Twenty-first and Cumine streets, Saturday night, at which a new union, No. 71, will be founded and organized.

EVERY RIB BROKEN. Edward Rodden Crushed to Death in an Elevator.

About 1 o'clock yesterday an accident happened in the Consolidated Coffee company's house at Fourteenth and Harney street, that cost Edward Rodden, an employe of the firm, his life. He held a position of helper in the roasting department, and, desiring to go after something in a top story, undertook to get on the freight elevator while it was moving upward, but missed his footing and held on to the edge until he was caught and crushed between the floor above and the platform of the elevator. The latter continued to ascend until all of the unfortunate man's ribs were broken and the flesh in many places torn from his body. His cries attracted attention and half a dozen men in the building rushed to his assistance. He was released from the deadly vise and placed on the floor. Three doctors were summoned but they could do nothing to save the poor fellow. He died within twenty minutes.

Coroner Drexel took charge of his body. The deceased was twenty-two years old and unmarried. His parents and three sisters live at Crete. They have been notified by telegraph of the accident. He made his home with a brother-in-law, John Peterson, at 2108 Lake street. Previously to entering the employment of the Consolidated Coffee company, about one month ago, he had run the freight elevator in the Paxton block.

The jury returned a verdict that Rodden had come to his death through his own carelessness.
