THE NATION'S HEROIC DEAD.

Omaha Pays Them the Tribute Their Valor Won.

MEMORIAL DAY CELEBRATED.

Organizations Taking Part In the Procession and Services-Flower and Flag Bedecked Graves.

Memorial Day.

ft was Memorial day. All over a broad continent loyal hands scattered flowers over the resting places of buried heroes; millions of loyal hearts throbbed responsive to the patriotic sentiments of eloquent tongues; from thousands of churches, great and small, in crowded city and quiet country hillside and valley, incense of prayer and song commemorative of the deeds of our noble army of the dead rose heavenward. In many homes in every city, town and hamlet, grief for the dead was tempered by the chased by the blood of those whose memories the day perpetuates. In Omaha the air seemed laden with the spirit of the day, and in the forenoon a semispirit of the day, and in the forencen a semi-sabbath stillness had fallen on the streets. The clear, cool sir, the light breeze and warm sunshine all conduced to a fitting observance. Public business was for the most part sus-pended, and the pretty dresses of nordes of school children, fluttering flags and decorated store fronts transformed the every day aspect of the streets to that of a quiet holiday.

THE PARADE. An Imposing Array of Both Civic and Military Societies. DAt 8 o'clock the various committees appointed for the purpose, met at the hall of Custer post on Douglas street, and preceded to the various cemeteries in carriages accompanied by eight wagon loads of flowers furnished by the school children. The flowers had been twined into beautiful and symbolical designs and these comprised samples of all kinds of the earliest of the

The decorations about the city were not only lavish, but bunting was generally displayed by the principal stores and the nations colors floated from nearly every flag-staff. The horse, cable and motor cars were decorated with flags, as were also many private conveyances.

As early as 12:30 o'clock the streets became more than usually lively, and at the appointed rendezvous the societies intending to take part in the procession began to make their appearance.

The cemeteries visited were Prospect Hill. Forest Lawn, Holy Sepulchre, Hebrew, St. Mary's, in all of which a number of patriots

In Prospect Hill, the familiar resting place for many of the illustrious dead of Omaha, presented a particularly interesting and animated scene. It was alive with people. The avenues were thronged. At intervals devoted survivors bent over the gravemounds, placed upon the surface some flow ering plant and then smoothed the roam with the caressing tenderness of a mother adjusting the covering of an ailing child. Little American flags fluttered in the breeze, the brilliancy of the colors standing out in striking contrast with the sombre surroundings and nature of the place. These little placed there in the morning by Sexton M. R. Pruitt, who has in mind the location of every soldier's grave in this great cemetery. They directed the footsteps of the decorating com-mittee and pointed out to the casual visitor the spot which to-day, of all days, is indeed

In the south-ern part of the cemetery, where cathedral gloom does not prevail, the green-sward well mowed, the high grasses which the southern zephyrs kept in constant bil-lowy action, presented a most inspiring aspect. Here, however, there are fewer aspect. Here, however, there are fewer soldiers buried, though some of them were among the best known in life in the community.

The Bee man in his walks among the heroes noted the graves of a number of celebrated soldiers, each with monuments and graves appropriately bedecked with garlands and bouquets. Among them were the graves of Senator Hitchcock, Major Thornburg, T. B. Cuming, Colonel William Baumer, Dr. Robert McClellan, William McClellan, Watson B. Smith and General Strickland, the last mentioned being elaborately ornamented with wreaths and other floral emblems.

AT HOLY SEPULCHRE. About a dozen soldiers lie in this home for the dead, prominent among whom are the late General George M. O'Brien and General John O'Niell, the graves of both of whom were most beautifully decorated.

SPECIAL DECORATIONS. The E. M. A. sent out two committees this morning to decorate the graves of deceased members, many of whom were soldiers in the late war, whose names will hereafter be thought of the glorious inheritance pur-The beautiful High school grounds presented a very picturesque scene long before the arrival of the procession. The weather was charming to a surpassing degree and it looked as it all the children in the city had assembled for an afternoon of merrymaking. They played and romped on the velvety sward, lounged in the shade of the numerous sward, founged is the shade of the induserous trees, and made such a picture of joyous life, of color and lightheartedness as one reads of only in fable and farry story. And the children were not there alone, either, because there were also scores and scores of fond mammas and watchful nurses, whose holiday attire harmonized well with the mul-tifarious hues of the little ones' gay apparel, and contributed greatly to the beauty of the scene.

AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

How the Grounds and Spectators Appeared.

A platform eighty feet long and eighteen feet wide had been erected along the Dodge street sidewalk, while a great number of rude benches had been arranged within the grounds facing the stand which were packed at an early hour with the little ones. The platform, which was for the accommodation of the speakers and the choristers, was gaudily decorated with banners and bunting, lending an additional charm to the already entrancing spectacle. Although the already entrancing spectacle. Although the children little dreamed of the sa-cred import of the occasion, one could easily perceive that Memorial Day is one in the calender set aside by them for rollick-ing pleasure and happiness.

By the time the procession arrived the spacious grounds was packed with a dense mass of people, and with the biare of bands, the flying colors, maneuvers of the soldiers and the excited shouts of the children and plaudits of the older ones the spectacle was indeed one to be lown remembered.

indeed one to be long remembered.

At least six thousand people must have been present at the exercises of the day. When they began, the platform was occu-pied by the speaker and president of the day, the regular army officers from the fort, the ladies of the Women's relief corps and others nearly connected with the veteran soldiers. In front of the platform were a large number of children, and next to them the veterans who had served for their country. The Union Pacific band completed the number of persons within the enclosure. At 2:45 o'clock the exercises began. Major

Clarkson, the president of the day, after asking for order, said:
"It is a beautiful custom, the setting apart "It is a beautiful custom, the setting apart of one day in the year for the kindly remembrance of the dead of the family and of the nation. This morning, as early as 3 o'clock, I took may way to Prospect Hill cenfetery, and it astonished me to see the procession of men, women and children, flower laden, going to that home of the dead to remember their friends. After such a sight with graves marked with little flags and being decorated with flowers, who can hav, as has decorated with flowers, who can say, as has recently been said, that this custom ought to be dropped. When these are our own dead why is not the nation's equally as dear! Four hundred thousand of the strength and vigor of this great country, who lost their lives in the struggle to retain the union, are lying beneath the sod, and why should not the nation drop a tear and some flowers on those graves? When the hand of time has wiped away the asperity between the north and south, no 'storied urn or annimated bust' or grand spire pointing to heaven will be required to perpetuate the memory of those who died for their country's sake. These graves are the mon-ments of their work. "But my comrades of the Grand Army, this day to us, is especially dear. One by by one we are laying away the old compan-ions of the field and bivounc. Soon our time will come. While we stay, let us stand up for the widows and orphans of those who fell in battle or have since been called away. Let us see the heritage we have left away. Let us see the heritage we have left our children in a free and united country, may remain as secure for them, so that future generations will acknowledge the faitnful performance of their ancesters. Then, when the final taps sound for us, we can lie down to rest with a consciousness that what we have done has been done for the right. It there be a better land than this, and there certainly is, those who have gone, have gone to join the rank and file of the brave. They have left a few controller withing for the summons to the ranks in heaven."

The Rev. T. M. House delivered a very brief prayer, asking the Almighty to bless the comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic, and to bless the nation."
"After the bymn, "Our Braves," had been sung by a chorus of fifty voices under the sung by a chorus of fifty voices under the direction of Prof. F. S. Smith, Major Clarkson introduced the Rev. Henry E. Mott, of Dubuque, Iowa. This gestleman delivered the address of the day. While the speaker could only be heard by a small number of those present, he talked in a loud, clear tone. His address opened with reference to the battle field of Gettysburg, and as the streams in that vicinity reverse their course so that historic battle as the streams in that vicinity reverse their course, so that historic battle ground was the turning point in the war of the rebellion. When Lee was defeated at the rebellion. When Lee was defeated at that point, he was convinced that the cause was lost. The speaker then spoke of two things the inheritance which the comrades of the G. A. R. had left to them and the destiny they should work out for the country. What the nation strove to maintain, speaking of the first point, those now living had a right to uphold. They worked out an inheritance for those now living. People should remember the war for the union was right, eternally right; that of the rebellion wrong, eternally wrong. It was easy to wrong, eternally wrong. It was easy to consider how jealousies become hostilities. God had determined that this land should be one, and one it remained.

The speaker then referred to the Roman empire, and spoke of its size as compared The speaker then referred to the Roman empire, and spoke of its size as compared with the United States, and its resources, as well as those of nations of the present day, speaking especially of that part lying west of the Mississippi. Mr. Mott sand it was given to every nation a certain moral purpose to work out. The power of a nation is the common people. It is the common people that think for the nation. The country, if it is going to live, must take up the moral question. Some claimed it was the industrial question, but the speaker took the other view. Ambition was the secret of it all. Any man without ambition would never be led to anything higher. There was an inequality in human life, the speaker maintained, a fact evidenced not only in their accomplishments Society had descended by arbitrary distinction. Men should do what God intended them to do. Ambition should be strong in the common people, who should remember that a man who could accomplish something that no other man can accomplish was greater than princes or kings. The campaign for union princes or kings. The campaign for union had been fought, but the campaign for liberty had yet to be fought.

The conclusion of the speaker's address was a wish for the success of the union.
At the conclusion of the address the Union Pacific band played the address the Union At the conclusion of the address the Union Pacific band played the national air.

The usual ritual exercises were conducted by Mr. Burmeister, who made a short and appropriate address. A free stone monument in front of the platform was, after prayer by Rev. Mr. House, decorated with a wrenth and anchor of flowers, and the service concluded with the singing of a requiem, the words of which were composed by the Rev. Dr. Harsha, and have already been published in Ture Ber.

Ward Republican Caucus. The republican caucus in the Seventh ward, last night, was a rather lively affair. The caucus met with H. C. Akın as chairman, and nominated C. A. Potter for member of the board of education. Then Paul Vandervoort opened a speech demanding reform in the school board by the statement that charges had been made against the moral character of some of the members of the board. He claimed to know facts and names that would be very damaging to some of the members of the board, if he disclosed them. He demanded first an election of honest, and above all, virtuous men to fill the vacancies on the board, and then

"I have positive knowledge," he said, "that one bookseller in Omaha has sold forty-nine copies of Bocaccio's Decameron to teachers in the Omaha public schools."

Vandervoort's speech created a sensation, and orought J. W. Elier, the lawyer, to his feet with a plain statement, alleging that reports were current against the superintendent of the city schools, and demanding an investigation.

M. R. Risden came up then with a statement that twelve years ago a teacher whom he knew had stolen a set of furs from the lady with whom she boarded, and had spent a part of her vacation with an Omaha man in Yankton. Mr. Risden also joined in a demand for an investigation of the charges against certain members of the board. Mr. Potter named as his delegates to the convention J. W. Eller, Paul Vandervoort, H. C. Akin, John Grant, C. L. Chaffee, N. I. Benson and Charles Inksep. Alternates, Dave Mercer, P. J. Quealey, A. L. Kulp, Louis Peterson, C. S. Thomas, George A. Joplin and H. W. Bowden.

It was discovered while boring for water on the farm of N. T. Smith, near Bayard. When the vein was struck, the well began sending up an immense flow of water mingled with gas. All efforts to control it have proved unsuccessful, and the ground for many feet around keeps caving in, threaten-ing the safety of Mr. White's farm. Some of the gas has been secured, and it burns very freely, but the flow of water continues unabated, to the surprise of all. The well is being visited by crowds of people, and is exciting great interest in that vicinity.

JAIL BETTER THAN A CASTLE Witness Quotes President Harrison

Before the Parnell Commission. LONDON, May 30 .- At the meeting of the Parnell commission to-day the first witness was Arthur O'Connor, member of parliament. He testified that while he was in Indianapolis last year General Harrison, now president of the United States, said that every honest man and lover of liberty would rather a tre the company of William O'Brien in Tullamore jail than that of the viceroy in Dublin castle. O'Connor said that when he took office in the league, he found been destroyed. Judge Hannan ordered that inquiries be made about these books.

O'Connor repelled as a calumny the suggestion that the tenants had understood his advice to them to boycott landgrabbers as a hint to murder or use violence upon them. He admitted saying that it was not unnatural that a man who saw his family flung out on the roadside should shoot the evictor.

Justin McCarthy, M. P., was the next witness. He testified to the horror and dismay which the Phonix Park murders had caused among the Parnellites.

A Terrible Accident. DANVILLE, Va., May 30 .- A terrible accident occurred here to-day. J. G. Penn was building a large brick tobacco factory nearly 200 feet long and six stories high. The walls had been completed and the carpenters were at work. The wind was blowing hard, and this afternoon the building came down with a crash. Robert Printt, William Young, G. B. Jones, Buck Hooper and D. N. Collie were killed. Henry Oakes will die and six others are badly injured. Several men were buried in the ruins and considerable time

Supposed to Be Incendiary. NORFOLK, Va., May 30.-From persons from the neighborhood of the recent fire in Princess Anne county, by which Rev. F. C. Clarke and three of his children and his niece were burned to death, it is learned that a feeling exists that the fire was of incendiary origin. It is said that a colored man who lived on the farm occupied by Clarke had not paid his rent and was in the habit of burning fences around the place. Clarke re-monstrated with him, and finally ordered him to move. People living in that part of the country are considerably excited over A Tramp Brutally Murdered.
