Judge Wakeley had a legal proposition presented to him Thursday which appears to nave required some consideration. It came up in the arguments of a case entitled William A. McGuire vs. Heury Kelsey et al., in which pastition for property adjusted which partition to property allotted by will is involved. The de-fendant's attorney very assuringly informed his honor that in litigation of this kind a mother can not be considered in the light of a blood relative to herown offspring. The statement grated so harshly upon Judge Wakeley's nerves that he rather impatiently demanded of the attorney an extraordinary amount of authority for making it. The case presents this state of facts. The only relations left are the wife and one child. Should the child, which inherits certain property, die, would not its mother stand as the next of kin by blood!

The Alva Cook embezzlement case is dragging along and promises to attract Judge ging along and promises to attract Judge Hopewell's attention several days longer. For two years Cook was cashier at the Missouri Pacific freight depo'. He is charged with appropriating to his own use about $1,300 of the company's money. To get at the facts, the county attorney has found it necessary to have a wagon load of balance sheets, itemized accounts, journals, ledgers, cash books and other documents covering the period of the defendant's employment, brought into court. Each item is handed to a witness for identification and explanation. Cook, who is rather effeminate looking and a Cook, who is rather effeminate looking and a very pronounced blonde, seems to be taking

Judges Savage and Lake Fling Epithets at Each Other. From half a dozen eye-witnesses it has been learned that an exciting, as well as in teresting scene, occurred in Judge Groff's room Thursday evening. 1 For several days past the case of Anna D. Ambrose against David Anderson, involving the title to a lot in South Omaba, has been on trial. At times, the lawyers engaged in the case, it is said, have indulged in warm exchange of courtesies.

Judge Savage and his partner represent the plaintiff, while Judge Lake and Mr.

Hamilton appeared for Anderson. During the afternoon the first mentioned asserted in his argument that the defendant had on a certain occasion approached his client and offered to make settlement, thus admitting the weakness of his ciaim. The statement was vigorously denied.

After the court had adjourned, Savage and Hamilton stood by the table conversing, and Judge Lake, who was opposite them, overheard Mr. Savage repeat the assertion made in his speech regarding the withdrawal. The last mentioned leaned over, shook his fist in the honorable sage's face, and hotly informed him that he was a liar. "I am talking to a gentleman, not you," replied Judge Savage.

"You are a d-d liar," was the utterance hurled back by Judge Lake. "And you are a blackguard," retaliated Savage.

In the meantime Davis and Anderson edged closer, and for a migute it looked as though the entire party would indulge in an exhibition of the manly art.
Some one called Sheriff Coburn into the room, however, and peace was restored. As the sheriff entered he heard Anderson re-peat Lake's assertion to Savage that he was

Lake then left the room, and turning to Hamilton, Judge Savage said: "That black-guard has gone; now we can go without be-ing disturbed."

A Passenger Train Runs Into

Couple of Freight Cars. Considerable damage resulted from the storm of Thursday night on the Union Pacific, and several accidents that would have been serious were fortunately averted. At Paxton, three miles out from the city, a washout on the main line occurred in which about forty rods of road bed were destroyed and a part of the track was washed away. This occurred shortly after the east-bound passenger damage. Near the same point the telegraph poles were blown down for a distance of onefourth of a mile and all the wires were broken. A crew of linemen was set at work and the break was repaired by daylight.

had gone over the track. A work train was dispatched from North Platte to repair the

The wires at other points along the Ne-braska division were more or less shattered by the storm. At Clarks, 120 miles from Omaha, No. 1 passenger, leaving here at 8:15 p. m., was wrecked. The wind blew a gale, and two box cars in the spur track, were blown along to the main line. The switch being set for through the cars were derailed, but at the same time forced on the main track. No. 1 passenger due there about mid-night struck the obstruction and the engine on the passenger train and the two freight cars were demolished. Engineer Hambright discovered the obstruction and succeeded somewhat in slackening his train, but could not stop in time to avoid the collision. He was slightly injured and the passengers were badly shaken up. No other injury resulted. The engine was left at Clark's and another one procured. After a delay of about two hours the train moved on and the wreck was cleared up. The reports received at headquarters indicate that the storm was general and severe throughout Nebraska and northern Kansas. The loss of the Union Pacific will foot up several thousand dollars. The reports also go to show that at points along the line the rain was accompanied by hail which is reported to have done slight damage to corn and small grain.

ENGINEERS' ROAD RIGHTS.

How Cushing Expects to Do Away With Them. There is trouble between the Union Pacific and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engin eers, the cause of which the enginers claim to have traced to George C. Cushing, superntendent of motive power of that road. About one week ago a resolution was engineered through a meeting of the local branch of the brotherhood declaring the forfeiture of road rights by engineers em-ployed in the yards. These rights entitle an engineer to assume, in turn, a regular run on the main line. The resolution was introduced by a young engineer.

The resolution met with considerable opposition, but was passed. The opposing faction took the stand that, in passing a resolution of that kind, old engineers in the yards would be pushed aside and preference given extra men who were comparatively new with It has subsequently transpired, it is claimed, that the resolution was fathered by George C. Cushing, and that it was gotten up for the purpose of engaging the engineers in a war within their own ranks.

Inquiry was made by members of the brotherhood, and it was learned that a resolution of the same nature had been introduced and passed in branches of the brotherhood at Cheyenne, Laramie, Rowlins, North Platte, and every division point where a branch exists. The discovery of the alleged author of the resolution has worked up co siderable feeling in the brotherhood, and some of the engineers are open and pronounced against Cushing's work. This mat-ter will be brought up at the meeting to be held at Union Pacific headquarters Monday. About fifty engineers and firemen arrived from points along the line yesterday, and have come to look into the matter. It is stated that, should they meet with further trouble from Cushing, they will insist upon his removal.

This may invalidate the contract. Murphy's bond for $10,000, with Frank Johnson and George Barker as sureties, was accepted.

Investigation Into the Queer Business Methods of an Omaha Man Leading to Interesting Developments.

A number of the Omaha money lenders have just had a little experience with a man named Neil which will make them be more particular hereafter in tending money on horses and taking chattel mortgages for security. Several of them have been bitten recently by that uncouth-looking but oily ndividual. Among the lenders were John Edwards, John Linderholm, John Schmenke, the Fairbanks Investment company and one or two others, the amounts ranging from

In each case he would change the spelling of his name. It was "R. H. Neil," "R. M. Neil." R. T. "Neal," or "Neal," and so on. One of the recorder's books in the register of deed's office shows Neil's name in various forms more than a dozen times while it is alleged that the property is identically the same.

Four weeks ago some of the mortgages became due, but when a search was made for Neil, neither himself nor the horses could be found. The case was placed with the Metropolitan Detective agency and it was seen discovered that Neil's home was on Seven-teenth street, in the hollow south of Vinton street, and that the man himself had skipped. He left a wire who has since given birth to a child, but left ner scantily provided with clothing.

An effort was made to learn Neil's whereabouts from the woman. She refused to say anything about it, claiming she did not know where he had gone. The detectives, how ever, got on his trail and located him at a farm near Valley, where he had gone to work under the name of David Brown. In the meantime, Mrs. Neal visited the men whom her husband had swindled and begged whom her husband had swindled and begged them not to prosecute him. The superintendent of the detective agency concluded, however, to try and arrest Brown, and went out for that purpose, but Brown got on to the visit, and made himself so scarce that he could not be found. This was the last effort made to arrest him, as the men interested in Neil's capture have not evinced any great desire since ture have not evinced any great desire since

Speaking about Neil Thursday Superintendent Emery said: "Of course I deannot say positively but I believe that this is one of the young men who has been bothering the farmers of this county for months. Lust week an association of farm-ers was formed to try and prevent the horse thieving that has been going on. I be-lieve that the same gang has been stealing horses in Omaha, for you know a lot of horses have disappeared, including that valuable mare of Dick Wilde's. There is no doubt but that there is an organized gang of horse-thieves around here somewhere. They are receiving protection from some persons. Now here is a letter I re-ceived not long ago from Sheriff Huston, of Joliet, Ill.," and he handed the reporter the following:

They are dyed and doctored so that the owner wouldn't know his own horse in twenty-four hours. The pass word of the gang is "dew drop" or was when he was there two years ago. Thursday the amount subscribed to the Johnstown sufferers' fund reached $1,300, making the total thus far realized by the general committee $3,500. Up to noon yesterday $350 had been added to this sum. However, the expectation is that by Saturday evening the sum will have reached a more satisfactory figure.

The express offices are handling a considerable amount of goods, private donations of clothing, bedding and provisions, and the Western Union Telegraph company has had an unusually large number of telegrams of inquiry. WANTED FOR MURDER.

A Former Omaha Man Arrested In Kansas City. Chief of Police Seavey yesterday received word of the capture, at Kansas City, of Henry Tyson, formerly of Omaha, who is wanted at Denver to answer to the charge of killing George King, on May 16, last. The police have been on the watch for Tyson here, as he was supposed to be hiding in Omaba. Tyson, a man forty years of age, came to Omaha in May, 1888, and worked as a salesman and solicitor for the Adams House Fur nishing company, at 519 South Sixteenth street, until last October. He had a woman with him whom he represented as his wife. The couple boarded at the corner of Four-teenth and Jackson. In October last, Tyson and the woman went to Denver. The Adams company here knew nothing more of him until May 5, when he returned and went to work. He stayed until May 14, when he left without any word to his employers. On May 17 Mr. Mack, the local manager of the Adams country, received a telegram from Denver asking if Tyson was in Omaha. This was followed by a telegram to the chief of police, asking him to arrest Tyson on the charge of murder. Search for the missing charge of murder. Search for the missing man was without avail, until word came yesterday of his arrest at Kansas City.

The particulars of the crime of which Tyson is accused are but briefly known here. It appears, however, that after he came to Omaha on, May 5, he learned that the woman with whom he had been living had deserted him, and was living in Denver with King.

He returned to Denver and in a row with He returned to Denver, and, in a row with King, shot him and escaped to Kansas City, where he was captured. The woman in the case is the ströngest witness against Tyson, and is very bitter in her denunciations of him. She asserts that they were never mar-ried, and that the killing of King was en-tirely unprovoked.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. Sothern presented his great success, 'Lorn Chumly," at Boyd's opera house last night, and it was witnessed by a very fine audience. No better compliment has ever been paid an actor than he received—three curtain calls at the end of both the first and second acts. No more interesting perform ance has ever been witnessed in Omaha. Whether this play was written for Mr. Sothern or not, it fits him to a dot, and he plays the character for all there is in it. There seems to be some superfluous dialogue and business that might easily be left out, but the story is good, and through it runs a well-laid plot. The drollery, mannerism and general conduct portrayed by Mr. Sothern are those of the English dude. He proved himself, however, to be a man of nerve and honor. All the way through his acting held the audience in wrant attention, with a nower and swaving influence possessed by very few men on the stage. Those who saw him in "The Highest Bidder," Thursday night, could hardly realize that the same artist appeared as the excentric and comical Lord Chumley. A telegram was received at the Union Pacific headquarters, yesterday, from the division superintendent's office in Cheyenne, that a youth named Frank Griffin, of Omaha, was killed a few hours earlier on the Echo & Park City branch of the Union Pacific. It was also stated in the dispatch to headquarters that the deceased had an nunt Mrs. Williams, living at 1520 Kearney street. Inquiry made at that place by a messenger from the railway headquarters failed to locate the lady, and nothing could be found in the city directory to show where the lady is living. The remains will be held until something is heard from his aunt in this city.

A Colony of Tramps. The festive tramp is causing trouble again, this time on South Thirteenth street, near Westerfield avenue. Citizens in this locality allege that the knights of rest sleep in the groves in the vicinity of Forest school, and then rob the school children of their lunch baskets. A number of school children have been so badly terrorized that their parents have been compelled to take them from school until the vicinity is cleared of tramps. The attention of Chief Seavey has been directed to the matter.
