The Bendley Tragedy.

HENDLEY, Neb., June 24 .- [Special Telegram to THE BEE. | - The inquest now being held over the dead body of Joseph Plummer is likely to remain in session two or three days. County Attorney Wright is closeted with the jury and has sent out several more subpoenas for witnesses in the case. The affair is wrapped in mystery, but John Jones and George Plummer are still held on suspicion. The reason why they are suspected is that George Plummer and his murdered brother had had some difficulty over their partnership business matters, and since the difficulty John Jones and George Plummer have been "batching" and living together. The dead man was not known to have an enemy anywhere, and was highly respected by ail. Intense excitement prevails. A post by all. Intense excitement provails. A post-mortem examination of the body will be made

Rev. Duryea at Crete. CRETE, Neb., June 24 .- [Special to THE BEE.]-The commencement of Donne college opened yesterday with the delivery of the baccalaureate sermon at the Congregational church by Rev. Joseph F. Duryea, D. D., of Omaha. The large church edifice was crowded with people to hear the eloquent sermon of Crete's favorite divine from abroad. Rev. Duryea took his text from Mark 1:35-37, "And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out and departed into a solitary place." "They said unto him, 'All men seek for thee." The address was listened to attentively. The students of the college were especially sed with the good advice given them by Stanton's High School Closing.

Hastings' Substantial Growth. HASTINGS, Neb., June 24 .- | Special to THE BEE. |-It has been two years since the "real estate boom" of Hastings astonished the state and excited the envy of rival cities. The boom died a natural death, and since that time the "Queen City" has assumed the sober dignity that becomes her as the third city in Nebraska. Newspaper critics in rival cities affect to see in the apparently quiet condition of Hastings ac evidence that the great boom of 1887 left the city dead in the shell. It has been repeatedly asserted that Hastings has been "boomed to death." A few facts will serve to show Nebraska how utterly groundless are all such asser-

The big boom commenced in December 1886, and raged without let or hindrance until June, 1887. During that time prices of real estate advanced rapidly and the excitement was intense. Investors banked entirely on the future, for at that time the only im provements under way were the city water works. Since the first week in June, 1887, the Hustings real estate market has been in a normal condition. If any great disaster was to follow it would certainly have commenced soon after the collapse of the boom But, instead of the dire disasters which were so freely predicted, substantial improve-ments by the score have followed. A brief recapitulation of the growth of Hastings since the collapse of the boom is given below:

Since June 1, 1887, two great railway systems, the Frement, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley and the Missouri Pacific, have been extended to Hastings, giving this city competing lines to the great market centers of the east and south.

A complete system of street callways with

A complete system of street railways, with over eighteen miles of track in daily opera-tion by two companies, has been constructed and equipped.

The water works, which were barely commenced when the boom took wings, have been completed. Over eighteen miles of mains are already in use and two additional miles are being put under ground this summer, giving Hastings the largest and most complete system of water works in Nebraska, outside of Omaha and Lincoln. Three large two and three-story brick school buildings have been erected, at a cost of over $60,000.

largest and most complete electric light plant in the state, generating both the are and incandescent rights, has been put in. The plant occupies a large three-story building of its own, and cost $05,000

A paid fire department has been organized and equipped, and is in operation at an expense of nearly $5,000 a year. This is a fea-ture of metropolitan life not enjoyed by the residents of any other city in Nebraska outside of Lincoln and Omaha. Twelve wholesale houses have been started.

and all are doing a successful business, their aggregate sales amounting to over $3,000,000 per annum. Over one thousand new dwelling houses have been built and occupied during the time that has elapsed since June 1, 1887. The aggregate cost of these dwelling houses has been over $1,000,000, and some of them would be an ornament to the finest residence portion of Omaha.

The above list of improvements, costing in the aggregate over $2,000,000, is certainly an indication that Hastings has not lost any ground since her memorial real estate boom of 1887. The city has been growing steadily, and in some directions rapidly. New enterprises are constantly being inaugurated. There have been but two failures of any im-portance in these two years. One of those, that of the Gazette-Journal company, was brought about by mis-management, while the other, that of John Stich, does not properly belong to Hastings, as the institution was in its death throes when removed to this city. The cost of the building improvements now under way in Hastings at this writing will aggregate a quarter of a million dollars. This certainly speaks for the future growth

THE DINSMOOR-POWELL CASE Successful Termination of a Long Fought Legal Battle.

An interesting case has just terminated at St. Paul, Minn., which is of special interest to many persons in Omaha. Some time ago Asbury S. F. Powell, an adventurer an swindler, represented to Dr. Dinsmoor of this city, to whose wife he is related, tha ne owned a large lot of cattle and needed $4,500. The money was furnished him, and Powell disappeared. He was subsequently captured, and on his person was found a receipt for $5,500, signed by James J. Hartigan, a Minnesota politician. Hartigan was arrested, but a requisition from Governor Thayer failed to bring him here, owing t some little technicality.

It appeared that Hartigan and the man named Powell had carefully planned the swindle of Dr. Dinsmoor and other prominent citizens of Omaha. Hartigan was released from arrest, but he will have to pay the full amount of the $4,500, judgment having been rendered against him for that amount. St. Paul, Minn., which is of special interest

Mason City, Ia., June 24 .- [Special Telegram to THE BEE. |-Two confidence men are now operating in this section, and to-day very nearly succeeded in securing $1,500 from James K. Moore, one of the wealthy farmers of this section. One of the men met Mr. Moore on the street and introduced himself as a banker at Algeria. The supposed banker then introduced Mr. Moore to his whilom lawyer friend, and the three sat down to play a game of cards. Finally the lawyer offered to bet the banker $3,000 that he could not name a certain card, and the banker was eager to take the bet. Moore was urged to go half and finally accepted. He went to the bank to get the money, but the cashier, understanding the nature of the scheme, refused to honor his

MYERS IS HERE. He Pays a Brief Visit to the New

County Hospital. E. E. Myers, architect of the county hospital arrived from Detroit yesterday morning and is at the Paxton. He said to a reporter, who solicited him for information regarding the existing troubles: "I can't tell you anything now. The commissioners telegraphed me to come on and settle some disputed questions and I am here, but don't know as yet exactly what is wanted of me. Wait until I make an examination."

Architect Meyers, Superintendent Coots, Contractors Ryan and Walsh, and the commissioners made a visit to the new county hospital yesterday afternoon. They only remained there a short time, however, and made very little examination of the features in controversy. Meyers and the contractors had a secret conference in his room at the Paxton hotel last night, which lasted nearly two hours, and the situation was thoroughly discussed. They declined making public the result of their meeting until some matters result of their meeting until some matters now under consideration are fixed up. Mr. Myers said to a reporter that he found the building is much better shape than on his former visit here. "I think," he continued, "that Coots and Walsh will get along all right. There is no reason why they should not. I could get along with Walsh. The only thing necessary is for Coots to insist on his orders bealong with Walsh. The only thing necessary is for Coots to insist on his orders being obeyed and his instructions carried out.
But I don't want to say anything until a thorough investigation of the whole matter has been made. We will get all differences adjusted without much difficulty, so that the work can go on uninterrupted."

To-day the interested parties will go out to the hospital and examine it carefully.

At the Collseum. The sweepstakes race between Helen Baldwin, Jessie Cakes, Lottie Stanley and Lilly Williams began at the Coliseum last evening in the presence of a very fair audience. There is no question about it whatever, but the race is going to be the most exciting bicycle race that ever took place in the city. There is much bitterness existing between the backers of the respective contestants, which has been imparted in no small degree to the riders themselves, and they are all riding as if their very lives were held in the balance. Unless Referee Jummy Kilkenny cautions

Miss Stanley about her reckiess riding, a serious accident is inevitable. She rides en-tirely too close upon the leader, let it be whom it may, and it is only a question of time until she runs into some one of them, and the consequences can not fail to be seri-

At the crack of the pistol last night Miss Baldwin, who looked particularly jaunty and pretty in her white blouse, blue sash and dark colored tights, dashed to the front and set the pace for almost the whole of the first our, covering in that time fifteen miles and lve laps. In the second hour fifteen miles and one lap was made, with Stanley in the lead. The final spurt was one of the most beautiful and exhilerating ever seen in the Coliseum. Stanley succeeded in getting a long lead just before the commencement of the spurt, and her determined face showed that she meant to keep it to the close. But she reckoned without her host. The speedy gait maintained throughout the entire even and she was unequal to the contract on hand.

Miss Baldwin pulled up on her with the speed of the wind, and when the tape was reached was a clear twenty yards in the lead with Stanley and Oakes a tie for second place, and Williams a bad third.

The score for the evening was as follows: Miles, Laps. Total 45

THE MISSING WITNESS FOUND.

Additional Testimony in the Planteen

Murder Case. The man who was with George Meyers on the night after Decoration Day, and was a witness to the row at the corner of Twentieth and Burt streets, in which Planteen received a fatal wound at Meyers' hands, has been found, and at the trial of the case before Judge Berka yesterday afternoon gave evidence that will materially help Meyers' prospects. The witness in question is Halph Z. Frizzelle, a clerk formerly in the employ of L. O. Jones & Co. The substance of his testimony was as follows:

'I reached the saloon at the southwest corner of Twentieth and Cuming about 10 o'clock at night. Planteen, Meyers and Gustafsen were playing pool, and I joined them. We played until the saloon closed at them. We played until the saloon closed at midnight. During the game Plantegn accused Meyers of having stolen some of the balls. Meyers took the charge in good nature and laughed it off. Planteen and Gustafsen went out of the saloon, and Meyers and I followed them. They were waiting outside and when we came out Planteen said to Meyers. If I was not so full I would have to Mevers, 'If I was not so full I would have smashed you when you stole those balls." Meyers simply laughed at him and did not say anything. Planteen and Gustafson then went down Twentieth street. Meyers and 1 talked a while and then started for nome down Twentieth street. On the way Meyers asked me to go with him and see that he not get the worst of it. I told him that I did not want to get into any trouble, but that I would stay by nim, and I did so. When would stay by nim, and I did so. When we reached Twentieth and Burt we reached Twentieth and Burt streets Planteen and Gustafson were there standing on the stops at the southwest corner. They came down on the street and Planteen again began abusing Meyers. We had some words and Planteen and Gustafsen both put their hands in their pockets as if they were reaching for revolvers. After some talk Gustafsen went to the center of the street. Planteen rushed the center of the street, Planteen rushed rushed by me with his hand in his pocket and ran up to-ward Mayers. Then Mayers struck him. The blow knocked Planteen's hat off, but did not knock him down. Then they went away and we went home. Frizzelle's evidence, which was not altered by a severe cross-examination, conflicts a number of material points with testimony of Emil Gustafsen, the principal witness for the prosecution, who swore that Planteen offered no provocation for the assault made by Meyers. Gustafsen's state-ment was substantially the same as that offered by him at the coroner's inquest last Monday, as was also the testi-mony of Dr. Svenson, who attended Planteen. No other evidence was introduced. The case was submitted without argu-Judge Berka held Myers in bonds of $15,000 to answer to the charge of murder in the second degree at the district cour Myers was taken to jail in default of bail.

Alleged Optum Smugglers, WINNIPEG, June 24 .- Saturday night a detective, acting under orders from the customs authorities, seized a team of horses bélonging to a man named McCowan, who is charged with bringing the team across the line contrary to the statutes. At the bottom of the whole affair, however, it is alleged McCowan took across the line, some weeks ago, $8,000 worth of opium which it is said he buried near the boundary somewhere,

The Farm.

No system of farming is said to be complete that does not include grass as one of the crops in the rotation. Green grass makes more beef, more milk, more wool and greater growth of young stock than any other food that is allowed, in proportion to cost, as it is most plentiful at a season of the year when the demand of the animals for supplying warmth and repair of waste is at its lowest degree, and also because the animais harvest it themselves by grazing. It is the harvesting of the grass by the animals that reduces its cost, compared with grain and hay, that adds to its value, and for this reason the farmer can afford to grow grass for his stock alone. But grass performs another function. It adds to the fertility of the soil. A crop of clover sends its roots deep down into the subsoil and appropriates food that is far beyond the reach of surface-feeding plants, says the Philadelphia Record. This stored fertility, which is just as much beyond the reach of the farmer as though on a neighboring farm, is transmitted to every portion of the plants, and their substances in time find their way back to the field in the shape of manure. The farmer, therefore, enriches his field through the agency of clover by bringing from below the fertility of the subsoil and transferring it to the soil. But there are other sources of fertility to which clover plants apply, which is the nitrogen of the soil brought down by the rains as ammonia or nitric acid, and a large proportion of this nitrogen in store in the roots, which, when the land is plowed, leaves a large amount of available plant food for the grain crop that may follow. Clover, however, draws very little nitrogen from the soil itself, as it prefers potash, but it leaves for the next crop a certain food not necessary for itself, but highly important for grain. If a piece of land is kept continually in clover the land becomes "clover sick," thus indicating that, though plant-food exists that is more suitable for grain, there is no longer an abundance of that preferred by clover. Hence we find large yields of grain on land formerly occupied by clover, the land, in the course of a few years, by judicious rotation of crops, adapting itself to clover again.

By properly rotating crops, making clover, wheat, corn, oats and potatoes, follow each other, or by any other preferred system of rotation, the land is given better cultivation, fewer weeds spring up, and the soil is not exhausted of certain elements at the expense of diminishing its fertility, though plentifully provided with other elements. By rotation of crops the loss of the ingredients of plant food are more evenly balanced, and each crop will yield more than when the land is devoted exclusively to one crop for several successive seasons.

FIRE FOLLOWS THE FLOOD.

Many Buildings Totally Destroyed in Johnstown.

CAUGHT FROM BURNING DEBRIS.

Stored Household Goods Rescued From the Flood Consumed-Clearing Up the Wreckage Very Rapidly.

A Fated City. Johnstown, Pa., June 24.-A sweeping fire broke out in the First ward at 3:30 today. The flames spread rapidly and all the engines here were called out. The wind is high and the fire is spreading rapidly toward Kernville. It has gotten beyond the control of the fire department and now covers five acres. Intense excitement prevails. Nearly all the houses burning are those more or less damaged by the flood.

Later-The fire in the First ward consumed all but three of the buildings in the district bounded by Market and Walnut streets, and Main street and the river. Twenty-five houses were totally destroyed. Many of the buildings destroyed had been washed from their foundations, though several of them contained household goods which had been saved from the flood. But a small amount of these goods were saved. The fire is supposed to have originated from sparks flying from the burning debris in the neighborhood.

Notwithstanding that the force of men em-ployed in the ruins here was reduced nearly one-half to-day, a remarkable showing was made in clearing up the wreckage. One heavy blast followed another in the debris above the rallroad bridge, and the place will be probably cleared up by Trursday. Much of the drift which had been dislodged from the stone bridge has lodged in various places, extending as far below as Coopersdale. The force of men this morning began to move lorse of men this morning the control of these obstructions, which have rendered useless a great part of the work at the bridge.
