"GENIUS OF INTELLIGENCE"

Recognized by Thousands in the Design of The Bee Building. THE LAST GRAND RECEPTION. The Great Structure Thronged From Morning Till Night With Wondering and Delighted Visitors—Intelligent Views.

A Great Reception. At an early hour yesterday morning the first elevator load of visitors to the new building ascended to the editorial floor. The people there left the car, walked to the roof and made a survey of the city and surrounding country, which stretched like a panorama before them.

At the entrance to the building a gentleman was stationed with a patent indicator, by means of which a record was made of every visitor as he passed through the door. When the reception was brought to a close the little instrument showed that 5,003 people had visited the building. But at no time were there more than a few hundred in the building.

The freedom of the building was allowed everybody. It was graciously accepted and heartily appreciated. The strong rollers along the halls as if on a promenade. They chatted, laughed, commented upon everything, the marble wainscot, the tiled floors, the mirror, the balcony, the iron and brass frames, the plate-glass windows, the electric bells, the model news-room, the novel stereotyping department, the imposing presses, the mammoth sky-light, and above all, the art, which was the marvel of every beholder.

"There is nothing like it in the country, save in the Palace hotel, San Francisco, and I greatly prefer THE BEE," said one gentleman, speaking of the imposing structure. "It leaves not a dark room in the house—every room is an outside one," said another. "I suppose Mr. Rosen's hostess room by so large a court, he has gained that which makes room valuable—light and ventilation," remarked a third.

"I cannot look in this court without recalling those scenes in 'Athens,' which Washington Irving so faithfully painted. There must not be the richness of material, but there are the ample proportions and the beautiful design which so characterized the halls in which the general author spent so many pleasant hours," said a lady principal of one of our local schools.

"As the highest salaried man in THE BEE office in 1884," said Mr. Thomas Wolfe, now of David City, "I can say, professionally, of the 'art preservative' that this is surely a triumph of Mr. Rosen's genius of application and now that they did not do justice to the subject. I think Mr. Rosen-water has one of the grandest buildings on earth and in the world of it."

The Kansas City Times has had a special correspondent in Atchison to ascertain the workings of prohibition there and the sentiment of its citizens on the question of a resubmission. As a result of his investigations the correspondent says: "During the last five years scores of good citizens have left the city leaving hundreds of dwellings and business houses standing empty, and representative men of Atchison have no hesitancy in attributing this state of affairs to prohibition. The people are not satisfied with the prohibitory law because an extensive liquor business is being carried on in open violation of the law and no revenue is derived therefrom by the city. In the year 1884, the open saloons were closed under the prohibitory law and the county paid several thousand dollars in costs in having the law enforced. The year before the revenue derived by the city from the open saloons was $12,000 which went into the city treasury to be expended in a manner that would be beneficial to the best interests of the city."

Thousands of Dollars are spent every year by the people of this state for worthless medicines for the cure of throat and lung diseases, when we know that if they would only invest $1 in SANTA ABIE, the new California discovery for consumption, they could have the cure in this pleasant remedy find relief. It is recommended by ministers, physicians and public speakers of the Golden State. Sold and distributed by Goodman Drug Co. at $1 a bottle. Three for $2.50. The most stubborn cases of catarrh will yield $10.00. CALIFORNIA CALIFORNIA. Six months treatment for $1. By mail $1.10.

Fourth of July Blaza. A blaze in a barn in the rear of the saloon at 711 North Sixth street called the department to that place about 9 o'clock last night. Before the department arrived the neighbors had rescued four mules from the burning building. One of the mules was pretty badly burned. It belongs to Hansen, the grocer. The building is the property of George Helms. The loss was about $150. It could not be insured under any fire insurance.

A Terrible Risk. A street car narrowly escapes collision with a locomotive. A crowded street car on Thirtieth street narrowly escaped a collision with a locomotive of the Union Pacific Road Wednesday morning. The car was going rapidly on a down grade, and before the driver had time to check his horses the locomotive was dangerously near and a horrible death to a large number of men and women seemed imminent, but by quickly reversing his engine the engineer narrowly prevented a catastrophe. Some of the passengers on seeing the danger jumped from the car, while the women were helpless with fright. The street car company has been severely censured for running such risks when there is no occasion for it, and many persons charge the company with being careless about such affairs. HOW ATCHISON WAS RUINED

Prohibition Drove Scores of Business Men From the Place.

WHAT CITIZENS HAVE TO SAY

Stores and Residences Emptied and Joints and Low Doggeries Take the Place of the Open Saloon.

The Fate of Atchison. The Kansas City Times has had a special correspondent in Atchison to ascertain the workings of prohibition there and the sentiment of its citizens on the question of a resubmission. As a result of his investigations the correspondent says: "During the last five years scores of good citizens have left the city leaving hundreds of dwellings and business houses standing empty, and representative men of Atchison have no hesitancy in attributing this state of affairs to prohibition. The people are not satisfied with the prohibitory law because an extensive liquor business is being carried on in open violation of the law and no revenue is derived therefrom by the city. In the year 1884, the open saloons were closed under the prohibitory law and the county paid several thousand dollars in costs in having the law enforced. The year before the revenue derived by the city from the open saloons was $12,000 which went into the city treasury to be expended in a manner that would be beneficial to the best interests of the city."

After the enforcement of the prohibitory law, so far as the open saloons are concerned, the joint came into immediate existence and liquor has been sold daily in large quantities ever since, the city deriving no benefit with the exception of regular fines paid into the police court by the citizens. The police court is filled with citizens of different political beliefs that originated at the commencement of the prohibition fight in this city has never died out. The enemies of five years ago are enemies today, and this one thing is true, much discontent and dissatisfaction that people have lost confidence in each other. A number of Atchison gentlemen recently organized the Midland trust company of Kansas City.

Why did you not keep the institution in Atchison? was asked yesterday of one of the officers of the company. The gentleman replied: "It would not pay to do it. The people have no confidence in each other and where that state of affairs exists business will not prosper."

THE EFFECT OF PROHIBITION. As to the effect that prohibition has had upon the business interests of Atchison, the statements of the following leading business men of the city will show: William Heatherington, president of the Exchange national bank, said: "Prohibition has been the great financial curse of Kansas."

W. W. Heatherington, cashier of the same bank, said: "Prohibition has vacated hundreds of houses in this city, reduced rents and been very detrimental to the business interests of Atchison. The question ought to be resubmitted to the people." John M. Crowell said: "The town has been going down hill ever since the prohibitory law went into effect."

RENDERED THE TOWN BANKRUPT. Dr. W. W. Cochran said: "Prohibition has driven scores of good citizens from the place and it has eaten at the vitals of this town until it is now bankrupt. The question ought to be resubmitted to the people."

Major B. F. Waggener said: "I was in favor of the prohibitory amendment and the law, but I have made up my mind that it can never be enforced in Kansas until it becomes a national law. The question ought to be resubmitted to the people."

S. V. Barth, retail clothing dealer, said: "Prohibition has greatly depressed business and ought to be resubmitted to the people."

M. Marcus, wholesale cigar and tobacco dealer, said: "Prohibition has greatly injured the city depressed business. The law ought to be repealed."

H. W. Barkow, boot and shoe dealer, said: "Prohibition has had a demoralizing effect on business. I am in favor of a well regulated high license law. I hope the question will be resubmitted to the people."

E. J. August, wholesale boot and shoe dealer, said: "Prohibition has had a demoralizing effect on the city, and I hope the law will be repealed."
