

THE DAILY BEE. COUNCIL BLUFFS. OFFICE, NO 12 PEARL STREET.

Delivered by carrier in Any Part of the City at Twenty Cents Per Week. MANAGER, U. W. TILTON. TELEPHONE: BUSINESS OFFICE NO. 42. FIRST EDITION, 10,000.

MINOR MENTION.

N. Y. P. Co. Glassing coal. C. B. Mue Co., 535 B'way. Retter, tailor, 310 Broadway. Evans' laundry, 724 Broadway. D. W. Otis, city and farm loans. Five-foot bamboo easels 50c. Chapman's. Three excursion parties passed through the transfer yesterday morning.

Next Wednesday the board of trade will entertain the Commercial club of Kansas City. J. Connors is booked for a hearing on the 17th, for running a pool table without a license.

The new house question will probably be settled at the council meeting next Monday night. Jake Souf was hauled in yesterday morning, for creating one of his periodical disturbances at the Northwestern house.

Colonel D. H. Dickey yesterday removed his law office from the county court house to a handsome suit of rooms in the Meridian block.

Deputy County Clerk Craig, of Avoca, has tendered his resignation, and on the 22d will step down and out. His successor has not been named.

Friday evening a little child named Carl Rosenberger, residing at East Pierce street, while at play fell and broke an arm. Dr. Wellinger reduced the fracture.

At Lake Manawa to-day the Schutzen Verein will hold a picnic, and a big time will be in order. Music, dancing and singing will be the order of the day.

There will be a meeting of the trustees and stockholders of the Council Bluffs and Omaha Chautauque assembly at the board of trade rooms Monday, July 15, at 4 p. m.

Deputy Sheriff Currie went to Mount Pleasant last night to investigate the case of Belle Phillips, whom he took to the insane asylum. Miss Phillips lived at the corner of Avenue B and Fifth street.

The funeral of Mrs. A. J. Andersen, the Dane who died from a sunstroke sustained while working on the Milwaukee gravel train, took place at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the residence, corner of Sixteenth street and Ninth avenue.

The electric motor company is grading East Pierce street preparatory to laying the tracks for its Upper Broadway extension, and it is stated that the electric cars will be running around the Council Bluffs loop before the 1st of September.

A teacher by the name of Boulder, who is attending the institute, mourns the loss of about $20 that was stolen from his room at the residence of Mr. Applegate, on Fourth street. The police are working to locate him, but no clue has yet been secured as to the identity of the thief.

J. R. Snyder, commission dealer, Nos. 22, 24 and 26 Pearl street, has just been appointed the local agent for the celebrated Santa Rosa cigar, manufactured by Fred Haak, Dayton, Ohio. The cigars have been on the market for some time, and the brand has become deservedly popular. It takes the lead among the 10-cent cigars of the city, and is a very good looking one.

The Odells, of this city, and the Gato City, of Omaha, play a game of ball at Fairview park this afternoon. It is the intention to have games at this park during the balance of the season, provided they are properly patronized. The Odell club is one of the best ever organized in this city, and they should have the hearty support of all lovers of the great national game.

A letter received from W. H. Thomas, county recorder, states that he and the fishing and hunting party who accompanied him have had a high time up to the point of writing. W. H. Gandy, Dr. West and Billy Hardin remain in Colorado for the vacation, while Mr. Thomas goes to Ogden, Utah, for a visit of two weeks, after which he will return home on the Union Pacific via Cheyenne.

A rumor prevailed on the streets yesterday morning that Contractor George S. Miller had secured a large number of his brick making firm from parties residing outside the city, and as a consequence some ill-feeling was manifested. The members of the council are of the opinion that the brick should be manufactured at home, and thus give home laborers the benefit of this money. The idea is to keep all of the money in the city, and the question will probably receive some attention at the meeting of the council to be held next Monday evening.

The Jungles on the Bottoms.

"All the crooks in Pottawattamie county might hide in those willows on the bottoms, between the Union Pacific and Broadway bridges, and all the officers in the two cities might look for them a week without finding them," remarked an Omaha policeman yesterday afternoon while on a visit to the Bluffs. "Two weeks ago," he continued, "a half-dozen of us came across the river to search for Neobe, the fellow who shot his woman down by the tracks. We had a tough old time of it. I don't believe there is anybody who hasn't been in there who has any idea what a hiding place it is. The jungles of Africa are not a circumstance to the willows here so thick that it is almost impossible to get through them, and the grapes have become so tightly interlaced that a man cannot see over five feet from him in any direction. In looking through the dense tangle I came upon several places where stout posts were set in the ground, and these were the traps for the crooks, but they had been laid there for some time, and there is no doubt in my mind that the place is used as a hiding place for stolen goods by a gang of horse thieves."

"It would be impossible to find a man there unless you accidentally happened to stumble over him, for there are acres and acres of this impenetrable growth. I was surprised to find such a secure hiding place so near the center of the city, and the police department has frequently managed to keep dark when they are being vigorously searched for by the police. It is my firm conviction that thousands of willows would tell some very interesting stories if they could only talk, and that more people visit them than the majority of people suppose."

An Epizootic Among the Bovines. The following communication, from a leading veterinarian of the city, has just been received at THE BEE office, and explains itself: "An epizootic of contagious inflammation of the eyes in cattle prevails to an alarming extent among the hundreds of cows owned by our citizen and pasture, and the disease is rapidly conveyed from one to another who associate together in bunches, and it will not be long before all the cows in the city will be blind in one or both eyes, greatly to the loss to owners in quantity and quality of milk produced. The disease is caused either as a board of aldermen or a board of health, to stop the spread of this disease by quarantine regulations, it being as readily controlled as scarlet fever by the quarantine method. It is highly important that the milk supply of the city be kept in the most wholesome condition possible, as a cow with inflamed eyes cannot give wholesome milk, and a bad quality of milk causes sick children."

A Miniature Cloud Burst. A remarkable phenomenon was witnessed on Harrison street Friday afternoon. About a clock a little thunder shower or what appeared to be only a little shower, passed north of the city. The cloud was not much larger than the figurative "man's hand," but it created considerable atmospheric disturbance and was accompanied by terrific roaring. As far as the street as Foster's greenhouse there was no rainfall at all. The first intimation the residents of the lower portion of the street had of any moisture in the vicinity was the appearance of a solid wall of the liquid coming down the street. It was first observed by a gang of carpenters at work on a new house a block from the end of the paving. They hastened down to get their tools and lumber from the street, but before they succeeded a river of water the full width of the street was rushing by. Two feet back from the first advancing ripple the first waves inches deep in the center of the street, and at the sides it was overflowing the curbing and spreading over the sidewalks. Such a vast body of water overflowing the dry and dusty paving presented a remarkable phenomenon. It continued to run for nearly three hours, and during the time a much larger quantity of water descended the street than during the heavy rain on Monday afternoon.

It was evidently a miniature cloudburst or waterspout in the vicinity of Myntor Springs, and as the street drains the larger portion of the territory in that vicinity it was completely dry over five feet from the curb. The sewers carried off the water effectually, and no damage was done.

S. B. Wadsworth & Co. loan money. The Saloon War Warming Up. The war on the saloons instituted by the Temperance league still continues. Friday warrants were issued on Justice's bench against Chris Radio, 612 Broadway, and several vessels containing liquor confiscated. The Red Front, at 101 Main street, was also treated in the same manner. "John Doe" was the name used in this case, and the name of the saloon was not given. The saloon kept by Frank Dominisse was next visited and his wares destroyed. A warrant against the Manhattan did not bear any fruit. The owners of the Manhattan, and though the proprietors formerly were dealers in wet goods at another part of the city, nothing could be done against their place this time in liquid form, except a tank of acceptable ice water.

Yesterday morning the saloon in Lower Broadway, near opposite the water works pumping station, was raided, and a quantity of beer secured. It is stated that the work will be pushed vigorously on this line, and that the localities of search will shortly be extended, so as to take in districts especially notorious for their saloons. Campaigning will be opened up all along the line.

DAME NATURE'S DEATH TRAP

A Gulch in Which Wild Animals Fall by Thousands.

SMALL AND GREAT ARE THERE.

Forest Denizens of All Sizes and Descriptions Once Within the Grasp of the Deadly Gas Never Escape Alive.

Another Yellowstone Park Wonder. The story of Death gulch and its remarkable discovery is told for the first time outside of the department at Washington by Henry W. McIntyre, who arrived here a short time ago from Montana, says the San Francisco Examiner. Mr. McIntyre has just completed a geological examination of this nature's wonderland for Arnold Hague, the eminent geologist, in charge of the survey of the Yellowstone park.

"I have been in Yellowstone park for two years now," said Geologist McIntyre, "and I have seen many strange things there in that time, but perhaps the strangest of all is an actual death gulch, where large wild beasts, birds and insects have perished in attempting to cross it. Myself and others of the survey discovered it on the 17th of last month, while completing our work."

"Death gulch is a ghastly region, where poisonous gases escape in such quantities that they kill whatever they come in contact with. It is situated about fourteen miles south of the mail route from Lamar river to the little mining camp of Butte City, and is only three miles from Soda Butte creek.

"As you approach Death gulch the odor of sulphur becomes very noticeable, and as you get near to it you experience a decided irritation of the lungs. This gas, which is a 'saw' gas, about two hundred and fifty feet above Cachee creek, a phenomenal stream that winds its way over a bed of natural glass.

"In the lower end of the depression which is a V-shaped trench, about seventy-five feet deep, we found the fresh body of a large silver-tip grizzly. Beside him was a smaller bear of the same species in an advanced stage of decomposition. Only a few any bullet holes scattered at intervals, were the skeletons of five more bears and the bones of an elk.

"This was not all that was discovered, however. In the bottom of the pocket were found the bones of several rock hares, a number of squirrels, and other small animals. There were myriads of dead butterflies around, too, and a number of other mountain insects.

"We looked the grizzlies over carefully, just as if we had any bullet holes or other marks of injury. There were no marks of violence. The only thing was a few drops of blood on the nose of the more recently dead bear.

"There was a skinned bear about thirty feet away from him, on the other side of the gulch. The body was pretty far gone. The carcasses of the others were almost devoid of flesh.

"It was very plain from the smell of the gas about that they had been asphyxiated, just as if a man is in a room where the gas is turned on. It smelt just like the gas from a defective pipe in the street, only stronger. We noticed the effect, and began to have a feeling of suffocation, which we overcame at intervals by going up the sides of the depression for better air.

"It is a well-known fact that this gas lies close to the ground. A man walking across the gulch would not feel the effect, but if he stood in it for a few minutes, he would be overcome. But if he stood down or walked on all fours, then he would instantly notice the gas, and die in a mighty short time.

"None of us ventured to go clear across on our hands and feet. We were afraid to touch the gas, and we did not get up the sides of the gulch, but we were asphyxiated unless rescued by our companions.

"We were too much surprised and too much in awe of the horrible death gulch to then make all the tests we could have done. We could, for instance, have lighted a match and tested the qualities of the gas, but we were afraid. We thought it might burn up the region, or that it might cause an explosion. The matter so weighed upon us, however, that on the 20th ult., we walked more than fifteen miles back from our camp to take another look at the gruesome place.

"A STRUGGLE FOR LIFE. "There was a deer in the gulch this time, and he could not have been dead more than a day. From the deep imprints of his feet in the bottom of the gulch it was evident he had floundered around in a vain attempt to get out. The body of the one-footed grizzly had advanced in decomposition, and was slightly offensive. Some more dead rock hares were also found.

"The gas, however, was not escaping so strongly as we first discovered, and the place. The exhalations did not affect us so much. Then we tested the hollows for carbolic acid gas with lighted tapers, but there was not enough to light. The wind blowing from the gulch had something to do with it. Our tapers were blown out and the gas, as we believe, was blown away.

"There was still a strong smell of sulphur and a choking sensation of the lungs, however, especially when we stooped down.

"From what we saw we were persuaded that the gas came forth in irregular volumes. Sometimes there would be a lot of gas, and sometimes there would not be nearly so much.

"A visit to the grounds below the gulch, too, was productive of an important discovery. We found there several scattered remains of wild animals, which had evidently been washed down the gulch by freshets. These freshets occur every spring, and sometimes of a low water stage. The animals, however, when they come they carry everything before them.

"HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS KILLED. "I was, therefore, highly pleased, in fact, proved almost to a certainty, that this death gas had been tried and emptied, and when they come they carry everything before them.

"I am glad to know that she has won your esteem."

"Do you think that I have succeeded in making a favorable impression on her?"

"I don't know of any reason to believe the contrary. Why do you ask?"

"I was only wondering."

"Wondering what?"

"Whether she could ever think enough of me to accept me for a son-in-law."

"And Mabel did her best to give him confidence."
