

NO SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT.

POOR PROSPECTS OF ADJUSTING THE LONDON DOCK TROUBLES.

A COMPANY MANIFESTO ISSUED.

THE DOCUMENT TORN DOWN BY AN INDIGNANT STRIKER—Mrs. Maybrick Transferred to a Prison in Surrey.

The London Dock Strike.

Copyright 1890 by James Gordon Bennett. LONDON, August 29.—[New York Herald Cable-Special to The Bee.]—The developments of the strike to-day tended little if any toward settlement. On the contrary, they had a perceptible effect in the direction of exciting ill-feeling between the opposing parties and causing some of the more hot-headed of the strikers to utter threats of resorting to violence. Many were heard to say that unless the strike is ended very soon serious trouble and lawlessness are certain to come.

The London and India docks joint committee, after being in consultation a great part of the afternoon, declined to concede the one remaining point at issue with the strikers, to pay for the use of the dock for the following week, which was immediately posted up on each side of the dock house entrance and dispatched to the strikers' headquarters and also to the general managers of railroads, shipping companies and other specially interested.

The joint committee have decided to adopt the following conditions for extra labor at the docks under their control: The 5 pence rate per hour with 6 pence per hour overtime, to apply to all labor at piece work, but not to be paid for any work done on the dock house, which, if granted, will have the effect of extending the time during which payment may be earned.

The large crowd of strikers, shippers and others who were congregated in front of the dock house, made a grand rush to read this manifesto. The copies were posted, and for a while great confusion occurred. It was evident that the general expectation was that the notice was an announcement that the directors had capitulated, and great disappointment was expressed as soon as it was discovered that such was not the case. One striker was so angry that he reached out with his fist to strike the notice but had just raised his hand when a policeman, free fight seemed imminent. The police, however, hustled him out to the street and ordered him to leave the vicinity, which he did rather leisurely and with much back talk. The dock house officials insisted at first that the man be arrested, but upon learning that he was actually intoxicated, requested that he be allowed to depart.

As the crowd learned the contents of the manifesto many expressions of disgust and indignation were uttered. One striker expressed the general sentiment when he said: "This is not as good as we had before. It means 4 pence less a day."

John Burns, head of the strikers, said: "These are not concessions. They are nominal, and if the men accepted they would soon find themselves in the old hole."

The dock companies and the wharfingers do not pull together. Representatives of the wharfingers who attended the conference did not endorse the issuing of the manifesto. On the contrary they opposed its terms. Mr. Lafont, another wharfinger withdrew from the conference because of the action taken. The wharfingers, as has been stated, have practically endorsed the strikers in their demand, and to-day they brought pressure to bear on the dock directors to induce them to settle the strike as quickly as possible. They represented that their business and that of the entire shipping interests of London were being paralyzed and permanently injured and immense losses were being suffered. They further made it known that unless the strike was ended at once they would attempt to operate their wharves independently of the company. A large number of wharfingers, at a largely attended meeting, decided upon a compromise, which was submitted to the dock committee, but it was rejected. The difference between the dock companies and the wharfingers is as follows: The latter load and unload vessels in mid-stream or at wharves. The former unload ships at docks and place return cargoes on docks, do not load ships.

The strikers have intimated a willingness to agree to the terms proposed by the wharfingers, but are apparently determined not to knuckle under to the dock companies.

Dover Dock Laborers Strike. LONDON, August 29.—The dock laborers at Dover have gone on a strike.

SHANGHAI, August 29.—[New York Herald Cable-Special to The Bee.]—The archbishop of Canterbury is shocked at the idea of a bridegroom taking part in a wedding ceremony in evening dress. He thinks such a costume degrades the sanctuary, and to prevent such degradation he has issued an edict against the issue of special licenses for a later hour than 5 in the evening. He cautions like to limit the celebration of marriage to 3 o'clock, and only under exceptional circumstances or in case of a very distinguished person does he desire a later hour than 3.

MRS. MAYBRICK TRANSFERRED.

Quietly Taken from Walton Jail to a Prison in Surrey.

Copyright 1890 by James Gordon Bennett. LONDON, August 29.—[New York Herald Cable-Special to The Bee.]—Mrs. Maybrick has been removed from Walton jail and conveyed to Knapp Hill, the female convict prison at Working, Surrey. Her solicitor had a final interview in the jail on Wednesday evening with respect to the provisions of the will and the guardianship of the children. Mrs. Maybrick's removal had been effected with all the secrecy which had been anticipated. The fact that an order for her removal had been received was known only to the governor of the jail until Wednesday night, when, of course, the warden was to be taken charge of her and the chief railway officials who were to make suitable provision for the conveyance of the prisoner and her custodians were informed. A few minutes before 9 o'clock this morning a cab drove through the prison gates at Walton, and when the vehicle left the jail shortly afterwards with drawn blinds its occupants were the chief warden, female warden and Mrs. Maybrick. The cab was driven off at a smart rate in the direction of Liverpool, and the Lime Street station was reached at twenty minutes to 10, five minutes before the time at which the London express, by which she was to travel, was due to depart. A third class compartment had been specially reserved. She walked straight across the platform, accompanied by the warden, into the reserved compartment, the blinds of which were at once drawn. She was seen and identified by but a few of the passengers who happened to be on the platform at the time. Mrs. Maybrick walked with a firm step, recognizing a gentleman who was standing among the passengers who saw her in crossing the platform. She greeted him with a smile, which, however, was not returned, and again, as the carriage door was being closed, she endeavored to obtain a sign of recognition from him, but again failed. She had a very sorrowful appearance. Her general appearance would not have led one to the belief that she was likely to die under prison treatment. Mrs. Maybrick was dressed in the usual uniform of brown stuff marked with a broad arrow, with a gray crepe bonnet and the ordinary prison shoes. She has become very thin. On Wednesday station being reached Mrs. Maybrick was placed in a carriage and crossed the line to the waiting room, where they stayed until the branch train to Working arrived. This they entered, and without attracting any great attention the famous prisoner was safely landed in the female prison at that place. At no place along the route was there the slightest suspicion that the criminal was on the train, so careful were the arrangements.

All the defendants took exception to the ruling of the court, refusing them separate trials, and the judge granted twenty days in which to file bills of exception. The attorneys for the various defendants then expressed their dissent to the ruling, and for a few seconds after its delivery a peculiar quiet pervaded the court room, which was eventually broken by Woodruff making an objection to the decision, which was promptly granted. The court then adjourned until to-morrow.

CHICAGO, August 29.—[Special Telegram to The Bee.]—The Wabash to-day followed the example set by the Alton, and gave notice that it would protect the through rate on all business originating west of the Missouri by shrinking its eastern rate sufficiently to meet the eastern proportion of the through rate. The Burlington is also contemplating the same action, and will probably give notice to-morrow. Inquiry at the office here showed that the rumor that the action had already been taken was premature. It will be remembered that the original action of the Alton in taking the above stand was met by a stormy protest from the other Kansas City roads, and a formal protest against the action was filed with the inter-state commerce commission. It was in fact the subject of the Missouri and Kansas City squabble. Only the Santa Fe and Rock Island would oppose the plan originally made. The Niagara Falls Short Line is another road which has disturbed the peace of the east-bound passenger situation. It will be remembered that the passenger committee of the Central Traffic association adopted a resolution to redeem all unused portions of the Grand Army excursion tickets. This was done to prevent their sale to scalpers by the holders. It will be especially to the absolute sale of the balance of the issues to scalpers by the roads themselves, as was notified by the Central Traffic association, and after the late New York centennial celebration. It was supposed this could not occur again, but the same old and short-line has given notice that it would withdraw its assent to the resolution. The question is consequently an open one so far as the Central Traffic passenger committee has been unable to decide it. There will be another meeting to-morrow but an agreement is not expected.

General Freight Agent Paul Morton, of the Burlington, has just returned from a trip over the Burlington system and is enthusiastic over the prospect. He declares that every kind of grain is in better condition than it has been in years. Taken with the fact that the Central Traffic passenger committee has been unable to decide it. There will be another meeting to-morrow but an agreement is not expected.
