The council will devote considerable time this evening to discussing the location for a new city hall. It is expected that several propositions will be submitted by the owners of different sites, who would like to secure the location of the new building. It is understood that there are a number of parties who would be greatly tickled to see it come their way, as the erection of the proposed structure would greatly enhance the value of adjacent property.

Rev. Dr. Cooley's Ideas of Future Punishment.

PLEASURE AT FAIRMOUNT PARK.

Banquet at the New Ogden-Two Brassy Fellows-Nothing New of the Murder-Personal and Minor Mention.

The Nature of Future Punishment. The Rev. Dr. Cooley delivered the second of the series of discourses on future things at the First Baptist church last evening. The discourses have awakened a great deal of interest and the church was well filled. The subject was "The Nature of Future Punishment." and was based upon Matthew 25:41-46: "Then shall He say also to them upon the left hand, Depart from Me ye accursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels, * * And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." Every one who has seriously thought of the other world is conscious of desiring to know not only the fact of future punishment but also its character. This desire implanted in our nature God has made provision in His word to satisfy, and it is to this source alone that we can look for certainty in this matter.

The first characteristic of this punish ment is that it will be one of condemnation.

The very idea of punishment implies this. We must be sentenced before we are punished. The condemnation of the sunner begins with his sinning. "He that believeth not is condemned al-ready, because he has not believed in the Son of God." This condemnation rests upon the unbeliever all through his life in this world, it follows him through the intermediate state, and comes with him to the judgment seat of Christ at the last day, where there is to be a public adjudication for an assembled universe. There he will receive a public and formal sentence, but it will be substantially the same in kind as the one resting upon him thus far through his course of sin. Then it will be no longer a his course of sin. Then it will be no longer a private matter between him and God, but it will be proclaimed in the ears of all, and every eye shall see its justice. Then also their sentence will be fully carried into execution and the sinner experience all the consequences of his guilt. This condemnation will greatly increase his sufferings. To realize forever that we are condemned, and that our condemnation is just and is known to all will be most difficult to endure. If we could hide our shame in some secret place, and no one knew it, it would be a great alle-viation of our misery, but this cannot be. In that world to which we are nastening there is no obliteration of the past, and we also have reason to believe that though a wide gulf separates the wicked from the righteous yet they will recognize each other, that the saved will see the mis-ery of tge lost, and these will see the happiness of the blest. The second characteristic of future punishment is that it will be a conscious punish ment. We can conceive of punishment where all consciousness is lost. In military executions where a man is shot by a number of balls through the heart, but little pain is felt and there is instant cessation of all consciousness. Such a punishment is far less dreaded than when death is experienced by ingering torture. It is on account of this fact that some of late years have tried to prove that the punishment of the wicked will be an unconscious one, that the sen-tence of the condemned soul will be an eternal sleep. Let us in examination of this question look first at the expression of our text, "everlasting panishment." The Greek equivalent for this word is "torment" be-cause fear has torment. Fear causes and possesses conscious misery. Plato uses the same word to describe one subjected to corrective punishment. Again we find these words, "Cast ye the unprofitable servant

into unquenchable fire or outer darkness, effect is always the same, nowhere destruc-tion of consciousness, but everywhere in-tense misery. This state of misery is always represented as fixed Between us and you there is a great gulf fixed, so that they who would pass hence to you can not, neither can they pass to us that come from thence.

The oblical meaning of the word death brings us to the same conclusion. Adam was told, "In the day thou eatest therof thou shalt surely die." If the death of the body alone was meant the threatened penalty was not executed, for our first parents lived nearly a thousand years after their dis-obedience. Either God did not keep his word with them or their death was something different from the death of the body, and this was the death of the soul. The very moment they transgressed God's law they were estranged from Him. Their joy in God was destroyed and union between them and God broken up. This is being dead in trespasses and in sins. The body separated from the soul dies. Death is separation, but never is death annihilation. The dead in sins are conscious and have their various sinful pleasures. So, in eternal death there will be the most intense con-sciousness. The figure of the fire that is never quenched suggests the most intense consciousness. No one could be sleepy or in a semi-conscious state while wrapped in flames or the worm gnawing upon him.

The third characteristic of future punishment is that it will be one of intense misery. This is seen first in the more vivid consciousness we there shall enjoy. A little child who has lost his father, while he is not conscious of his loss, will grieve but little, while the mother will be well night inconsolable. So in spiritual things. When in this world of despair the lost realize what they have done and cast away all hopes of heaven and neglecting every offer of salvation, their anguish will be insupportable. Every despair of the consumer to the constraint of the consumer to and neglecting every offer of salvation, their anguish will be insupportable. Every description of the lost in the bible gives the idea of intense suffering. The wailing and the gnashing of teeth which is declared again and again to be the employment of lost spirits, forces the conviction that the punishment of the lost will be most terrible. The smoke of their torment ascending up forever and ever is a figure of the most forever and ever is a figure of the most intense wretchedness. To be cast into outer darkness where the sight of the joy and happiness within is ever present to the banished soul is enough to cause the keenest pangs of remorse. When that ec-centric but honest man, John Randolph, lay on his deathbed he suddenly arroused him-self and shouted, "Remorse!" "Remorse." He then insisted that the word should be written so he could see it, and looking steadfastly upon it the dying man exclaimed, "Remorse." You have no idea what it is. It has contributed to bring me to my present situation, but I have looked to the Lord Jesus and hope I have received pardon. This remorse may be the worm that never dies.

I believe it is.

The fourth characteristic of the punishment is one of banishment. "Depart from me, ye accursed." How the old Greeks and Romans feared this kind of punishment, we have but to read their various authors. Cicero could never be happy out of Rome. Those condemned to Siberia regard themselves as great sufferers. Banishment is next to death, so will the condemned soul feel at the last day, only a thousand fold more intensely. To be banished from heaven, to be deprived of all happiness, will make the soul most wretched, were there no lake of fire, no undying worm. This alone will be sufficient to cause overwhelming agony, and this sentence every one who rejects Christ must bear.

The fifth characteristic is that it will be eternal. The bible makes no discrimination as to the fact of eternal existence between the righteous and the wicked. The word rendered everlasting is the same Greek word as rendered eternal when speaking of the blesseduess of the righteous. Yes, the soul condemned for rejection of Christ is condemned forever, and must suffer the conse-

Once consigned to perdition there is no Once consigned to perdition there is no respite, once lost the soul is lost forever. This is why Paul says: "Knowing the terror of the Lord we persuade men." He knew it was a terrible thing to fall into the hands of the living God, hence his zeal in preaching the gospel to the perishing. Because we fully believe in the eternal punishment of the unrodly we seek by every means to induce ungodly we seek by every means to induce you to accept Christ and his salvation.

Certain reports, derogatory to the notel, have been circulated among traveling men, and it was desired to have prominent business men investigate the matter. A Windy Sunday, Notwithstanding the dust and dirt that filled the air yesterday, the streets presented quite an animated appearance, and a large number of visitors were to be seen in Fair mount park. They spent the day, however, in the lower part of the park, as the wind blew uncomfortably hard over the tops of the bluffs. In the city the dirt made life out of doors anything but comfortable, as the streets had not been sprinkled for a couple of days, and the dust was at the disposal of the healthy zephyrs, which whirled it about with the most utter disregard of human wishes and results.

There were very few visitors at the lake, and the appearances indicate that the season there is drawing rapidly to a close. It has been a successful one, and one with which the parties most interested feel quite well satisfied. Plans are already being made with reference to next season, and new attractions will be secured to make it a more ropular resort than ever. The scheme to get up a regatte fell through from lack of encouragement out it will be revived for next year, and b proper attention given eary! in the spring, it is hoped to secure a meeting here of several of the noted carsmen of the country.

A Narrow Escape. There came very nearly being a fatal elevator accident in the new Eiseman building last evening. Louis Ottenheimer, one of Mr. Eiseman's relatives, was leaning over the elevator shaft from the third floor talking to some one below. The elevator had been run up to the fourth floor and had remained there some time, and the supposition was that nobody was near it. Suddenly it started down rapidly and noiselessly, and the first intimation Mr. Ottenheimer had of its presence was a thump on the head. He was knocked against the railing and crushed down upon it, but the boy who was bringing it down had caught sight of him and stopped the ponderous ma chine. If it had gone a foot further he would have been beheaded of else thrown headlons into the shaft. Fortunately he was only slightly hurt. The elevator is not yet com-pleted or the accident could not have hap-pened. For fear there should be an acci-dent the Messers. THE PITTSBURG OF THE WEST

Mining and Manufacturing Resources of the City of Pueblo.

NO LONGER A TOWN OF ADOBES,

But a Progressive City of Twenty-Five Thousand With Beautiful Buildings and Money in Her Inside Pocket.

Points About Pueblo.

PUEBLO, Colo., Sept. 20 .- [Special to THE BEE. |- The trip from Colorado Springs on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad to Pueblo lies along a beautiful little mountain stream, the Fountaine qui Buville. The same magnificent scenery greets the eye that charms the traveler between Denver and the Springs. There are the same lofty mountains and deep gorges, having the same grand outlines, yet never the same. They form a panorama of beauty that never grows old to the intelligent mind. Ever and anon a well-kept ranch nestling in the foothills lends an air of home life to the scene. It was just 8:30 when the train pulled into Pueblo, the young Pittsburg of the west. The scintillating rays of the electric light chase back the gathering shadows. The bolls on a score of engines clauged and the short, sharp whistles of the answering locomotives proclaimed the fact that this is a great railroad center. The hungry passen-gers hurried into the great eating-house for supper.

Few people who have visited this part of the west have not heard of the big eating house at Pueblo. Over twelve hundred passengers are fed each day, and the cash receipts are $600 daily. The passenger trains from the fifteen railroads centering here make this great restaurant, at least once each day the year around. The eating houses and hotels in the towns along this great scenic route enjoy a liberal patronage from the trading public. Occasionally a small village is almost deluged with hungry tourists. One of these occasions I witnessed at the village of Castle Rock. The train was delayed by a washout for a couple of hours. The conductor obligingly told the passengers that those of them who were hungry would have ample time to get supper while the train was waiting.

In a jiffy the train load of passengers were rushing down the street toward the hotel. Soon two small hostelries were brim full and running over, and as one relay of hungry mortals sat down after another, the chance for a square meal for the balance became slimmer and beautifully less. At last the bill of fare was reduced to liver and smear case. Fortunately, at this juncture, the bell rang the signal to start in time to save the castle guarded city from having to breakfast on cactus and Colorado

After a good night's rest I was out early on a tour of inspection over this booming young western city. Boarding one of the many street car lines a ride of a mile or more carried me past the elegant business houses whose closed doors stood mutely waiting in the early light for the day's work to begin. Even the watermellon had not taken its place on the front shelf of the grocery. But the horse-motor has crossed the viaduet over the still network of rails and is now bowling along the "Masa" above the city. From this elevation the view is a grand one. Pueblo seems like a flowing Arkansas as with a broad ribbon of silver and guarded by the snow crowned mountains at her margin. The buildings present a substantial appearance. Scarcely a frame building is seen, nearly all being built of brick or the picturesque red sandstone of Colo rado. Many of the public buildings tower far above their surroundings like sentinels watching over the workers below. The tall church spires and the towers of the elegant school buildings which greet the eyes on every hand are an index of the character of her citizens. The state hospital for the insane, just completed on the north side, is one of the largest and handsomest buildings in Colorado. Pueblo has some beautiful homes, those of some of the mining kings being almost palatial in their proportions, and the cottages, which are nearly all built of brick, are neat and home like. The reader should not confound the Pueblo of twenty years ago with the Pueblo of to-day. Then business was stagnant and the "adobe" mansion reigned supreme. To-day everything appears new. The city has wealth, a vast trade, a teeming population and the biggest building boom in the west. The maid" has dropped her calico gown, she has put on the silken robe and with plenty of money in her inside pocket is a catch for any suitor. The real estate man is here with his glib tongue and two minute horse. His Dundee Place sounds wonderfully familiar to Omaha ears. The stakes of the new additions reach far out from the city's gates. But the mountains of ore, her whirring factories and the busy home builders are close at his heels and soon the farthest stakes will mark the center of population for the Pueblo of the future. Pueblo is purely a commercial and manufacturing city and is rightly named the Pittsburg of the West. Within easy distance are the most extensive coal fields in the world; near her are vast mountains o iron ore, while exhaustless mines o gold, silver, copper and lead lie all around her. To these grand natural resources recent discoveries have added vast fields of petroleum. One well now in operation flows 1,000 barrels of oil per Add to this the fact that it is a down-hill haul to Pueblo from every mine in this region, and you have an array of natural resources seldom

The largest steel works in the world are located here, and the smelting interests of this city are very extensive. The three largest smelters are the Philadelphia smelter, the Colorado smelter and the Pueblo Smelting and Refining company. Among the larger manufactories are the large steel works, the Colorado coal and iron works, the Lannon foundry and Sterns, Rodgers & Co.'s mining machinery company. The mines supply most excellent cooking coal, as well as lime and other materials necessary for the reduction ores. The material resources this place deeply impresse Jay Gould and calle forthd from him the remark that Pueblo was destined to become the greatest mining and manufacturing city in the United Pueblo can scarcely be classed among the pleasure resorts of Colorado, and yet she has very respectable claims in that direction. They have several mineral springs and an artisan well whose waters possess marked medicinal qualities. Just about one mile out from the city is a beautiful lake of fair dimensions, with steam, yacht and sail boats, dancing pavilion, etc., with broad boulevard leading out to it. This is also the point from where the tourists start to visit the Royal gorge, on the Arkansas river, one of the most magnificent natural spectacles in the known world. Coupled with these places of interest, Pueblo possesses an unrivaled climate, which with its other advantages, make it a perfect home for its 25,000 citizens, and a veritable sanitarium for the ailing of other climes. Clark, Dedham, Mass., and where once stood the house of Deacon Avery, after whose name the tree was called It is much older than the town, which is 253 years old. It measures sixteen feet in circumference near the bottom of the trunk. Its top has been much twisted and torn by the storms of centuries, but the tree is still cherished as a proud specimen of the stately growth of its old companions of the forest. Seventy dollars was offered for it to be used for timber in building the frigate Constitution, but refused by the owner. The tree is imprinted upon the town It has been presented to the Ded-

Nora said, further, that two of her brothers were twins and three of her sisters triplets. She hopes to see the whole family in the United States early next spring. A Brace of Brassy Individuals Offier Cusick yesterday morning arrested one Callaban for the larcerny of a lot of brass from the transfer yards of the Union Pacific railway company. The property was sold to a Jewish second-hand dealer near the Northwestern depot, and the latter was also arrested just as he was starting for Omaha with the brass in his wagon. The stolen property, which weighed 190 pounds, was concealed in a couple of sacks. The Jew gave $500 bonds for his appearance for trial, and Squire Schurz held Callahan in the sum of $1,000, which he could not give and was accordingly sent to the county jail, to await a hearing. The Jew asserted that he did not know that the property was stolen, but the squire decided that he would investigate

America's Grandest Stoves.

The Radiant, Home and P. P. Stewart heaters, with the Fuller & Warren line of fine steel oven stoves and ranges, give us the representative stoves of the country. We sell no ones entire line, but select the best goods of several of the largest concerns in the country. We also handle a good cheap line that we can guarantee, our $12 cook being a leading example. Of this class, with our Radiant Home, we are heating as many as four and five rooms on from two to two and one-half tons of coal. It has made the most economical record of any stove every produced. Our prices are lower than any other western city, and we would cordially invite the public to call at our store, 41 Main st., opposite Citizens bank and inspect goods and prices.
