Colonist Sleepers. The Union Pacific R'y, also known as the Overland Route, has lately added to its service a number of new cars (which by the way are built by the world famous Pullman company), entitled colonist sleepers, and which for convenience and comfort are but little behind the handsome Pullman Palace

Car. The cars are designed for the use and comfort of the colonist, who with his family intend moving west to grow up with the country. The only difference between these cars and the regular first-class Pullman is that the Colonist sleeper is not upholstered. There are fourteen sections in each car, and separate toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen. At night, by means of sliding head boards and heavy damask curtains, as much privacy is se-cured as if in the regular first-class sleeper. Plenty of fresh, clean towels and a good supply of water are also to be found. A uniformed porter accompanies each car to look after the comfort and attend to the wants of the pas-sengers, and no smoking is allowed. It certainly seems that for cheap and commodious sleeping accommodations, while traveling, these cars cannot be excelled

Omaha Folk-Lore Notes. I was told the following in 1878, when at the Omaha agency, wites J. Owen Dersey in the Journal of American Folk-

General Agent.

Lore: Some time ago the brother of Wacuce (Brave or Generous) was driving a two-horse wagon, a boy being with him. Suddenly the man and one horse were killed by lightning, and the wagon was knocked over on one side. It is the custom to bury such a person in the very place where he has been killed; but as in this case, it was in the public road they rolled the body aside, and made the grave beside the road. On the reparticulars of his brother's death. reproved his wife for ignoring the old customs. The dead man should have had the soles of his feet slit, and he ought to have been buried face downward. Then he would have gone at once to the happy hunting grounds, without giving further trouble to the living. As it is, he walks (!) and he will not rest in peace till another person is slain by lightn'ng and laid beside him. The wagon, too, was accused, and not an Omaha would dare use it from that day. Should a person be struck by light ning while in a house, the building must be deserted immediately.

Myths must not be told during the day, nor in summer, as the violation of this rule will cause snakes to come. When a sick person dreams of a dead person whom he formerly knew, it is a sign of approaching death.

The name of a deceased father must not be mentioned. Rocky mountain beans, which are scarlet (ma-ka ji-de, or red medicine). confer good luck on their owners. the beans like their owners, they will never be lost; even if dropped accidentally they can be found again. A MILLINERY OPENING. Some Fine Parisian Millinery Shown

Recently. Miss Alice Isaacs' millinery opening in the store of Heyman & Deiches, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, has attracted a great deal of at-tention from the ladies of the city. A finer collection of millinery goods has never been seen in the city, and there were styles in infinite variety, suitable for any face. Most of them were noticeable for their simplicity. Among the prottiest of the pretty were seen the following gems of the milliner's A black bonnet, trimmed with butter cup yellow velvat, gold stars on black velvet and finished with black curied aigrets. A turban bonnet from Caroline Rebux, the prevailing color being a beautiful shade of olive; the trimmings were livery cloth, embroidered in gold with olive crepe ribbon to match. A dainty French gray velvet bonnet with silver ribbon laid over with Another dainty little bonnet was of buttercup yellow; over the soft folds of velvet, in front black lace was drawn in and out, and on the sides were very handsome designs in cut jet.

Another was of white velvet with gilt Eiffel tower lace with a resette of white velvet rib-bons- A gorgeous creation of Heitz Boyer was a scoop-shaped hat of olive velvet, faced with black velvet. It was trimmed with Eiffel tower lace and a cluster of American beauties, with velvet rose leaves shaded.

The next hat had a soft and smaller crown and shaded old rose and green were the prevailing colors. The velvet crepe with which the crown was covered was pierced here and there with old rose velvet. A little English turban was constructed of French grey velvet and was a perfect jewel of a hat, A Duke of Fife toque had amethyst as the prevailing color and was finished with a cluster of morning glories.

DARING CAMILLE DOULS. A Frenchman's Adventures and Fate

in the Sabara, One of the most daring of explorers has fallen a victim to his own temerity. The news is confirmed that Mr. Camille Douls, the French traveler, has been murdered by his guides while crossing the Sahara on his way to Timbuctoo. His fate will surprise no one, though all who have read of his remarkable travels in the great African desert will deeply regret the fact that this brilliant young man, after many hair breadth escapes, has at last met a violent death ..

Four years before he was killed, Mr. Douls was wandering up and down through the western Sahara with a band of Arab shepherds, who, after nearly killing him and keeping him long in chains, were at length convinced that he was a true believer, and adopted him into their tribe, says the New York Sun. He was only 25 years old, but he had a thorough knowledge of Arabic, was well versed in the Koran, and knew much of the character and customs of the desert nomads. It was his ambition to explore a part of the western desert and of southern Morocco, which was almost unknown, and, relying upon his Mohammedan disguise, he had caused himself to be set ashore from a fishing boat on the west coast. When he saw a herd of camels and their Arab owners moving south over the desert he advanced to meet the natives, assuming the role of a shipwrecked Algerian merchant. They had never seen a Mohammedan of his appearance, and refused to believe his story. While he was still explaining his coming among them he was suddenly knocked senseless by a blow from the back of a sabre which broke several of his teeth and when he recovered con-sciousness he found himself in chains and nearly stripped of clothing. He heard the young men say they would kill him then and there, but he was saved for the time by the more deliberate chief, who threatened to shoot any one who touched the prisoner before he had fully satisfied himself that the man was an imposter. For days Douls, fettered hand and foot, was carried along with the nomads. and subjected now and then to searching inquiries by one sheik and another that they met, none of whom was fully convinced that he was telling the truth At last they came to the camp of Hady Ibrahaim, who had been to Mecca and was a person of great authority among the nomads. After examining Douls in the koran, he declared that he had seen Turkish Mohammedans who resembled the prisoner, and had no doubt the man's story was true. Douls was then admitted into the fullest fellowship. The natives gave him a goatskin as a covering, and for five months he traversed with them the dreary steppes of the western Sanara still unknown to Europeans. He crossed the sandy waste of Ouran and the great depression of El Juf, and visited the famous slave market of Tenduf. At last he became betrothed to a twelve-year-old daughter of a sheik, and it was on the pretext of returning home to get a suitable marriage portion that he was permitted to leave the tribe and push north into Morocco. This was the chief goal of his ambition, for he was now in the province of Sus, rich in silver and copper. The sultan, fearing the cupidity of Europeans, had forbidden explorers to visit this part of Morocco. While Douls was getting all the information he could collect among these mysterious mountains, he was seized and carried in chains to the city of Morroco, where he would without doubt have been put to death had it not been for the timely intervention of Sir William Green, the British minister. It was not the good fortune of Douls to return again unscathed from this, his chosen field of labor. Upon his next venture into the heart of the great desert he has fallen a victim to the suspicions or cupidity of his guides. In the last letter received from him he spoke dolefully of his prospects of reaching the famous town near the Niger, but expressed his firm intention of pushing on toward the goal which has been the destruction of several explorers and missionaries who have persisted in their efforts to reach it.

Dr. John Hall. Dr. John Hall, who preaches every Sunday to Sidney Dillon, Henry G. Marquand, Robert Bonner and other millionaires in the handsome Presby terian church at Fifty-fifth street and Fifth avenue, says the New York Sun, came to New York from Sun, came to Beliast something like twenty years ago, and from every point of view his ministry has been brilliant!y

successful. His simple, earnest, straightforward preaching in the old church at Nineteenth street and Fifth avenue at tracted immediate and enthusiastic attention, and the congregation speedily outgrew the accommodations of that old-time church. The property was accordingly sold and the present edifice erected at a cost of $500,000 or thereabouts. In its present location Dr. Hall's church has flourished and increased for a matter of a dozen years. The pastor's salary when he first came over nere was $10,000, and the pastorate was a modest enough building in West Eighteenth street, near Sixth avenne. At present his salary is $15,000, and the church has built him a handsome residence immediately adjoining the church itself. There are probably few churches in New York where closer or more affectionate relations exist between the pastor and the members of the congregation than in this church of upper Fifth avenue. This has been made clear more than once by men and women who have sat under Dr. Hall's preaching re membering him in their wills to the extent of thousands of dollars. It is believed that Robert L. Stuart, the millionaire sugar refiner, left him a share of his fortune. If he did so, the congregation of the church are convinced that the charities of the city are the ultimate beneficiaries. Dr. Hall has several children. His youngest son, a tali, fresh-faced, black-haired young man, is a clergyman, and located in what is known as the Forty-first Street Congregational church of Chicago. Another son is in business in Wall street.
