Good are honored there will remain green in the hearts of men the talismanic mace of Sheridan.

Every great war has given birth to one great general no other war than our own has produced three such eminent commanders. The positions of future generations will gaze upon the features of three soldiers who were heroes, comrades, friends. As iron to steel, as the heat of the forge, was their friendship welded in the hot battles. With hearts untouched by jealousy, with souls too great for rivalry, they saved from the spectacle presented by a Marcus and a Sulla, a Caesar and a Pompey, a Charles the First and a Cromwell. They placed above all personal ends and selfish interests the position of the men in the Roman phalanx of old, stout shoulder to shoulder and linked their shields against a common foe.

The imperishable scroll on which the record of their deeds is written has been securely lodged in the highest niche of Fame's temple, to one can pluck a single laurel from their brow; no man can lessen the measure of their renown.

Their names are honored in the annals of our country, and their names are honored in the hearts of men. Their names are honored in the hearts of men. Their names are honored in the hearts of men.

Two Wrecks on the Union Pacific.

North Platte, Neb., Oct. 3.—(Special Telegram to The Bee.)—A large freight train wrecked last night on the Union Pacific express No. 3, going west, Dillard engineer, collided with an extra freight going east on the main track three miles west of Roscoe. The freight, which should have been on the Roscoe side-track three minutes before the accident occurred, had broken in two and had lost about ten minutes in coupling up. It had just started when No. 3 came around the curve and dashed into her. A tramp riding between the two first cars of the freight was instantly killed. Dillard, the engineer, was slightly scratched by jumping off when he saw that a collision was inevitable. The passengers were somewhat shaken up, but no one was injured.
