NORTH AND SOUTH.

An Alabama Editor Points Out Peculiarities in Yankee Pronunciation. We of the south don't give the same sound to some English words that our Yankee cousins do and we are therefore not able to appreciate their puns which these words play upon, says the Birmingham Age-Herald.

Here, for example; the Boston Herald

recently gave utterance to the luminous remark that "no noose was good news to Mrs. Maybrick." The pun the Herald intended was plain enough to its northern readers, but it takes a diagram to make it intelligible to people in this section. In the north they give ne and ew the same sound as oo. For instance, they say "the train is doo," and "softly falls the doo." Some northern men who remained in the south during the war, when ques-tioned as to their sectional sympathics.

were accustomed to express themselves as "nootral." This pronunciation coupled with the double trill with which the northerners jerk out their r's often served as a shibboleth by which the confederates detected northern In the south the words noose and news have no sort of resemblance in sound. The southerners split ew in the latter word and give the s somewhat the Unjust Taxation.

It is unjust to tax the stomach with burthens that it cannot bear. Many silly people thus tyrannize that faithful servitor until it rebels and punishes them as they deserve. Dyspepsia is usually the child of gastro-nomic folly, but whether this or the natural associate of inherent feebleness from child associate of inherent feedeness from child-hood, it is surely and pleasantly remediable with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest and most highly sauctioned gastre tonic, in existence. PISCICULTURE IN INDIA.

Result of an Attempt to Introduce a New Species of Flah.

On arriving in India, says a writer in Blackwood's Magizine, I at once turned my attention to the fish of the country and their culture and propagation. My delight on first coming to these hills was unbounded, as I saw in the numerous streams a practically unlimited op-portunity for following my favorite study, and I resolved to populate every river on the Neilgherries with mahseer. At some expense I obtained from Bombay a box of young mahseer, a considerable number of which survived the journey to Metapollium, where I met the box myself. I was delighted to see a number of strong, healthy fry swim-ming about, and I looked forward to having in a few hours successfully introduced the Indian salmon into the Neilgherry waters. Elated with the fortunate result of my enterprise I mounted my tat and rode gayly ghaut, dreaming of thanks from his ex-cellency the governor in council and possibly the distinction of C. S. I. m. recognition of my public service. I was agreeably surprised when the gang of coolies, bearing the box, came chanting into Coopoor fully an hour before the time I hadreckoped they could possibly bring such a load up the ghaut. Of course they wagged their heads and patted their stomachs after the manner of all coolies, chattering all the while with ape-like vivacity he words sarium and cenam, a present. recurring with marvelous frequency. Picased with the quick journey the had made up the gnaut I parted with five rupees as a present, and as they disappeared into the bazaar I hastened to inspect my box. Horror! every fish was dead, floating belly uppermost on the water. For some time the matter remained a mystery to me. All I knew was that my money was thrown away, and the remainder of my stay on the hills was too short to admit of the experiment being repeated, even if I had the heart to make it. Of course the coolies protested their ignorance of any reason for the disaster, and I had perforce to accept their statement. truth I learned afterward from a friend in the postoffice A tappal runner bringing up the mails overtook my coolies and saw them deliberately pour every drop of water out of the through the zinc ventilators, the lid being locked, of course. On reaching the head of the ghaut the wretches had refilled the box from the stream just below the Cooncor bridge and then jogged janutily in with their burden, and for carrying an empty case up the hills they received full pay and a hand-some present instead of the kicking they richly deserved.

"A DEAD CINCH ON ROULETTE."

A Gotham Millionaire Declares He Has Discovered a Precious Secret. A millionaire owner of stocks, who is well known in this city and Newport, and is fond of taking a little flyer now and then at gaming just for recreation, says the New York Sun, has a big sensation in store for Gotham gamblers. It is nothing less than a "dead cinch" on roulette and all other games in which the chances of winning or losing are even. The news of the discovery is said to have made a big sensation among some lively club men in the Nineteenth precinct, among whom the millionaire s held in high esteem. The "cinch" consists of an arithmetical progression play of bets on five single numerats. It is alleged by the millionaire that it will stand to win $25 on at roulette or any game on the odd and even principle. He makes his bets by adding two of the five figures together staking the aggregate amount in money on the turn of the wheel. Every win-ning bet knocks out two of the figures from the series, and every loss adds one to it. Play is kept up until enough suc-cesses have been made to wipe out the entire series of figures. When this is accomplished, he is sure, it is said, to find himself a winner. It is declared, furthermore, for this new discovery that it knocks all other systems of play, or so-called "cinches," endwise in the important particular that a crooked roulette board cannot beat it, even if the player were unfortunate enough to stack up against that much-dreaded swindling apparatus. The only annoyance that the player of it encounters is that once in a great while the player may get near his limit in reaching the winning of $25. The millionaire played the "cinch" alluringly on Wednesday night for the amusement of a lot of personal friends, making his bet on "head" and "tail" on the toss of a half-dollar silver piece. He played dozens of series and the five mystic numerals, and with unvarying regularity the tally kept demonstrated him a winner to the tune of $25. He varied his bet from "head" to "tail," as fancy prompted, and still the result was monotonously victorious for the "chin" plan. The millionaire said that he hadn't tried the scheme on fare yet, but that he fancied that it might work at that game, too, provided "sulits" were counted as losses in playing the method and the next bet made accordingly. The eyes of the witnesses of the workings of the "circh" sparkled with pleas ure as they studied the new idea, and they made arrangements to stock their pocket-books and start in for an attack on the roulette wheel as soon as the present rigid embargo on the gambling houses is lifted.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy,

This medicine can always be depended upon, not only in the milder forms of summer complaint, but also for malig-nant dysentery and cholera infantum. The lives of many persons and especially children are saved by it each year. Through Celestial Spectacles. The following paragraphs are trans-lated from a Chinese journal published at Pekin, and are part of an article givirg the impressions of a Chinese noble-man who recently traveled through Europe and America: When women go to court they regard a bare skin as a mark of respect, and on ordinary occasions when they meet their parents they must apply their mouths to the right and left lips of the elder with a smacking sond, which is exceedingly strange. exceedingly strange.

Women consider a large bust and a small waist as desirable, but while the waist can be compressed so as to be made small, the bust cannot be naturally enlarged. A great number, then. bave a contrivance of wickerware made which is concealed under the bodie on either side of the chest; and this they consider an adornment. Women who are shortsighted will mount spectacies in public; even young girls in their teens will do the same,
