ONE MAN PLAYS MANY PARTS

He is the Abused Autocrat Dubbed the Station Agent.

DIVIDENDS AND CAR COUPLERS.

Chief Arthur's Standing With the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers--The Missouri Pacific's New Suburban Train.

General Utility Man.

The life of the railway station agent, at intermediate points, is not a continual round of pleasures. In the performance of his duties he is compelled to "act" in many a drama.

Well, but few people have any idea of what they are.

In the morning he is compelled to don the garb of a janitor, and pre-empting a feather duster, cleans up the office so that when the agent arrives it is in proper condition for his lordship.

Now you find him at the ticket stand. He does not look as though he would condescend to carry and deliver a telegram.

A diamond stud glittering in his shirt bosom. A silk tie is laid one side, but sufficiently close to the window so that everybody within range of the latter can not but see the shining besieger.

Yet some people imagine that the average station agent is a pensioner on the company by which he is employed.

It is dangerous, to say the least, where trains running in opposite directions are scheduled to meet at a given point at the same moment.

The great bomb is thrown by Chief Arthur into the meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, as indicated by dispatches from Denver has, thus far, failed to materialize.

The chief would make a clean breast of the Burlington matter; that he would state just why the Brotherhood failed to carry the day. But little credence is given the reports.

Members of the Brotherhood here state that Chief Arthur has nothing to unboast in connection with the Burlington strike, and the loss he has to say concerning it is less reflection will be cast upon himself.

It is well known that, at the time the great struggle was brought to a close, complaints of weakness on the part of the chief came from every cardinal point of his domain.

There are engineers in Omaha to-day who attribute the failure of the brotherhood to the Burlington strike to the weak-kneed policy of Mr. Arthur. As to the result of the meeting at Denver in the election of officers, Chief Arthur may be his own successor, but the indications are that if such be the case it will result only to a hard battle.

The supporters of Vroman here are yet sanguine.

There is not much prospect of the government appropriating its broad mail contract with the Union Pacific, and it is quite probable that if such action should be taken the officials of that company would offer but little assistance.

The amount involved is placed to the credit of the Union Pacific, on a debt, from the obligations of which the ringsters have for many years successfully skirted.

With an additional train on the Missouri Pacific the service at this point will be up to the standard. Local trains are material in the building up of the commercial resources of any great city.

"Powderly is anything but our friend," said a member of the typographical union.

"He has grown rich at our expense and it now takes more red tape to get into his office than it does to get into the private rooms of President Harrison."

A big, stout plasterer who was asked for his opinion openly declared that Powderly had the "big head."

"What is the cause?" asked the reporter. "The Knights of Labor lodges in Omaha are dwindling away about as fast as any society ever went to pieces," said a man who has been a member of an assembly for years.

T. V. POWDERLY DISCUSSED.

Boycotting the Anglo-American Brewing Trust--Joining the Central Labor Union--Typographers Solid.

Powderly Discussed.

The Knights of Labor, a paper published in Chicago, is very bitter in an article on Mr. Powderly. It accuses him of being dishonest and of selling out the interest of those who really labor.

In Omaha, Powderly has many warm friends and admirers, but has enemies as well.

A member of the horse shoer's union said: "Our boys like Powderly and believe that his course has always been in the interest of laboring men."

"Powderly is anything but our friend," said a member of the typographical union.

"He has grown rich at our expense and it now takes more red tape to get into his office than it does to get into the private rooms of President Harrison."

A big, stout plasterer who was asked for his opinion openly declared that Powderly had the "big head."

"What is the cause?" asked the reporter. "The Knights of Labor lodges in Omaha are dwindling away about as fast as any society ever went to pieces," said a man who has been a member of an assembly for years.
