THE MYSTERIES OF HALLOWEEN.

Shall Cutaway Coats Be Allowed at the Cotillion Parties?—What Do the Lady Patronesses Say About It?

Halloween. The world grows older and grayer year by year, and, unhappily, much of the poetry is relegated to the past; fairy tales along with superstition, and incantations against the powers of evil.

The Coat Makes the Man. Apropos of what one should wear, it has been whispered between the dying fire and early candle light that the young men of the Cotillion club are seriously considering the wearing of cutaway coats instead of the conventional evening dress.

Visiting Americans. The Pan-Americans may be traveling through the north with the prime idea of furthering commercial relations between the separate Americas, but it affects an on-looker, that while in Omaha, they rather sought to establish tender relations with our people.

Social Virtues. It does not "flow as the night the day," that because the ball is set rolling in Omaha and all goes merry as a marriage bell, that the young women in society are all given over to the dizzy whirl.

A Candy Feast. Halloween was celebrated variously in Omaha. Among other entertainments Thursday evening was a very unique affair in the way of a "candy german," given in the Clark row at the Misses Duryea's.

Indirect favors were appropriate to the eyes of all Saints. Apples were arranged in tempting lines and baskets, to be given to one and the man, of course, danced with the girl whose name he drew.

Another figure was so curious as to deserve relating. Two very small apples were suspended from the chandelier, and two men were to stab at them with carving knives, the one whose skill pierced the apple is a William Tell, the other the piece of dancing with such chosen young woman.

Halloween on Brownell Hall. This weird night of the witches was the occasion of great sport and merriment to the boys of young girls at Brownell hall, and a pleasant Halloween as they enjoyed class, having had the first meeting last Wednesday morning with some dozen members present.

Mrs. Bailey's class in physical culture claims any number of fashionable women as its members, balancing the increased mentality with corresponding physical exercise.
