THE FIRST HAMLET IN NEW YORK. Early Production of the Play on the American Stage.

"Hamlet," writes Lawrence Hutton in Harper's Magazine, was first presented in the city of New York on the evening of November 26, 1791, and at "The New Theater in Chappel Street"—now Beckman street—near Nassau, the younger Lewis Hallam, the original Hamlet in America (at Philadelphia in the autumn of 1769), playing the titular part. Hallam was a versatile actor, who was on the stage in this country for over fifty years, and always popular. Concerning his Hamlet very little is now known, except the curious statement in the memoirs of Alexander Graydon, published in 1811, and Hallam once ventured to appear as Hamlet in London—and was endured!" He was the acknowledged leading tragedian of the New York stage until his retirement in 1808, and he is known to have played Hamlet as late as 1797, when he must have been close upon sixty years of age. Mr. Ireland is of the impression that John Hodgkinson, a contemporary of Hallam's, who appeared as Hamlet in Charleston, S. C., early in the present century, copied Hallam's right to the character in the metropolis, and never attempted it here.

The first Hamlet in New York in point of quality, and perhaps the second in point of time, was that of Thomas Alburne Cooper, who played the part at the John street theater on the 23d of November, 1797, although Mr. Ireland believes that he was preceded by Mr. Moreton at the theater on Greenwich street in the summer of the same year, as he had played the Great Hamlet in Baltimore a short time before. William Dunlap speaks in the highest terms of Cooper's Hamlet, and John Bernard ranks it with the Hamlet of John Philip Kemble himself.

THE HIGH SCHOOL LABORATORY.

How Facts Contained in Text Books Are Impressed on Pupils' Minds. In the northeast corner of the third floor of the high school building is the newly arranged chemical laboratory, where the pupils of the high school are taught elementary chemistry and conduct for themselves the interesting experiments which improve upon their minds the brief statements of facts contained in their text books.

A visitor entering this room during the hour devoted to experimental chemistry would be rather surprised at the rather motley crowd which would most his gaze. Girls and boys at their respective places, the girls arrayed in voluminous aprons which completely cover the dresses, while the boys are equipped with overalls or aprons, as best suit their fancy, but all busily engaged in conducting one or more of the experiments laid down in their laboratory manual.

The desk at which the pupils sit is a long, L-shaped one, and has a rack containing three shelves extending its entire length. On these shelves are thirty-six bottles for each pupil, containing the chemicals necessary to properly perform the experiments. The top of the bench is covered with white tile, which is not affected by chemicals. Each pupil has a working space of two feet in width. Along the center of the bench extends a gas pipe to which rubber tubes are attached at intervals for supplying necessary heat. Under each subdivision of the work table are six small lockers, arranged in two rows, and under these is a long drawer. There are 123 lockers, twenty-five drawers. Each pupil is assigned two lockers—one for storing aprons, etc., and the other for the glassware necessary in performing the various experiments.

The same amount and assortment of glassware is furnished each pupil and is kept in the laboratory. The pupils are instructed by their teachers in the use of the apparatus made good by the pupil to whom the article belongs. The articles furnished are test tubes, funnels, evaporating dishes, tubing, retorts, bottles, flasks, beaker, watch glass, and glass plates.

The twenty-five long drawers contain the apparatus which is used by the pupils in their experiments. It consists of a mortar and pestle, ring stand, iron plate, Bunsen burner, wire gauze, copper wire, test tubes, alcohol lamp, lead test, asbestos, and a water pan. This latter is used for collecting gas over water, and is a substitute for a sink.

The laboratory is situated in the center of the south side of the room, and is 23 feet in dimension. It is also covered with white tile. A small sink with two basins, square in shape, is placed in the center. In the back is a place for storing long glass tubing and in front are lockers for reagent bottles, as well as drawers for glass and iron ware.

In the northeast corner of the room is a hood for carrying off poisonous gases. It is about three feet square and has been arranged, by utilizing an old warm air register, so as to carry gases up the flue to the outer air.

The laboratory is presided over by Mr. M. W. Richardson, who is a graduate of Harvard, and thoroughly conversant with the subject in hand, besides having the happy faculty of imparting his knowledge to others.

The text book in use is Williams' Instruction to Chemistry, which is supplemented by Willingham's Laboratory Manual. The pupils devote two hours to laboratory work during two days of the week, the remaining three days being devoted to recitations, which are held in this room, benches being used for this purpose. At present they are engaged in examining acids and alkalis. They are also conducting experiments in making common salt and potassium sulphate.

The spirit of chemistry seems to have pervaded the arrangement of the laboratory. The material formerly used in the old so-called laboratory being made use of in the new room. The dressing room has been turned into a supply house, in which are stored all the chemicals, glassware and many other things necessary in the course.

Equanimity Courtship and Marriage. When an Esquimaux wants a bride he calls at a girl's house with some friends and takes her by force; propriety enjoins the heathen women reluctantly to marry, says Dr. Nansson's Journal. Occasionally the suitor is so treacherously resisted that he is compelled to pull his "heart's elect out of her parental home by her hair. Arrived at the bridegroom's dwelling she wears her hair unbound as a sign of sorrow, and tries repeatedly to run away, but is always overtaken, until after a fortnight she resigns herself to her fate and remains with her husband. Should she not care for her suitor she continues running away, until the man becomes thired of hunting her up and lets her go. But if he is deeply in love he does not give her up, but resorts to the cruel remedy of cutting the soles of her feet with a sharp instrument. By the time those wounds have healed she has usually relented. Not wanting the man in question under any circumstances, the girls cut off her hair and rags. As she in this way renounces marriage forever, the extremity is seldom resorted to. The men, as a rule, have only one wife, but occasionally they take more. The first wife, though, is generally the most important, and she tries to retain her position, provided she bears her husband children, and particularly boys.

"KICKED THE BUCKET." The Verdict of a Nagasaki Coroner's Jury in a Suicide Case.

This morning about 6 o'clock the dead body of a stranger was found hanging from the beam of the Corcoran Stage company, says a dispatch from Nagasaki, Nov. The man was about forty years old, had black hair and a full dark beard, and apparently of German descent. He wore a catholic insignia. There were no papers or marks found to identify him. In order to accomplish the suicide the man took a small baling rope and fastened it to a cross-beam overhead. Then he stood up on a tin bucket and pushed a slip of wood against his neck and kicked the bucket from under him, causing strangulation.

The decision of the coroner's jury was "Suicide, committed by kicking the bucket." The remains were buried by the citizens in the historical burial grounds known as "Maiden Grave," two miles east of the depot.

Regulated by Inoculated Rates.

There was a doctor in these parts not a century ago who would rather have imperiled his life than departed from established custom in the routine of his establishment, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. Breakfast had to be served at such an hour, dinner at another, and supper at another, and was to be the cook or the child who was made to attend to the meal or at it at the appointed time. It is related that a favorite child of the doctor was seized with a violent fit of convulsions just before the hour set for the reading of family prayers. It looked as if the little one might die, but the doctor insisted on reading prayers at the usual hour. When he had finished the devotion he repaired to the child's bedside.

It is also said that when he came to die he announced on an evening before that he intended to depart thence at 6:30 in the morning, and when the hands of the clock came around to that hour, although he appeared stronger to the family, he deliberately committed himself and, as several of his family think, died by mere force of will several hours before the angel of death was ready for him.

A Preventive for Croup.

There no longer exists any doubt but croup can be prevented. True croup never appears without warning, and if Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as directed as soon as the first indication of croup appears, it will usually dispel all symptoms of the disease. This can always be done if it is kept at hand. 50 cents and one dollar bottle, for sale by all druggists.

Thirty Deer at a Time.

I was in the Rockies in the winter of 1877; went there in quest of health, says a writer in the New York Evening World. I had a good rough and ready man with me for a guide, and he was a Cheyenne man, and had spent all his life on the plains and in the diggings.

We started out from Placer one morning loaded for big game. We went up the "Vita pass" hill we got where there was a lot of snow, and he led us into the wilderness on the mountains. We tramped an hour or two and it began to snow great guns.

Suddenly we came to a gully, and in it were a herd of deer, about forty in number, and a little clump of trees. Bill Marks walked around to the other side of that gully and gave a signal and we began to fire our repeaters.

Of course the deer fled, but after all we got a fine lot of venison. We had had a full dinner. This isn't much of a story, but it's true.

Where the Apostles are Buried.

All that now remains of the Apostles of Christ are in the following places: Simon, who is in Rome—namely: Peter, Phillip, James the Lesser, Judo, Bartholomew, Matthias, and Simon. Three are in the Kingdom of Naples—Matthew, Salomon, Andrew, at Armini, and Thomas at Orton. One is in Spain, James the Greater, whose remains are at St. Jago de Compostella. Of the body of St. John, the evangelist, the remaining one of the twelve, there is no knowledge. The evangelist Mark and Luke are also buried in Italy, the former at Venice and the latter at Padua.

St. Paul's remains are also believed to be in Italy, the church at Rome which bears his name, as are also Simon and Judo.

James the Lesser's remains are in the church of the Holy Apostles. Bartholomew's in the church on the island of the Tiber which bears his name.

Matthias' remains are said to be under the great altar of the renowned Basilica. Little faith, however, is placed in the legend.

Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of uric acid in the blood, is most effectively cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony.—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. L. A. Irving Dodge, 110 West 123d St., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve. We once, getting in strength, and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this wonderful medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.
