QUEER PLAYTHINGS. Babies With Floral Designs Taken from Graves. What do you suppose are the "play-things" of the babies in arms and the toddlers living in the tenements close to Greenwood constery? asks the New York Sun. Unsit the neighborhood any morning, and you will have a scene burdened with peoulinry interesting as timeat. Just outside the tall iron rail faces separating the cometery from the street are any number of baby carriages with cooing and crowing oc-cupants, and wheeled by the little brother or the little sister of the family. They are out for the morning it. In the carriage, either at the foot-bother or the little sister of the family. They are out for the morning it. In the carriage, either at the foot-bard or under infantile dissection, are withered floral crowns, crosses, crea-cents, and now and then heavier pieces like "The Gates Ajar." They have been taken from the graves and thrown it to the street by attaches of the can-etery. Menday morning scens to be the clearing-up time of all these with-end tokens of lowe for the dead. The baby carriages fairly flock outside the stocks of flow the departure of life. A very bright yours lady, who saw this been take unariced he departure of life. A very bright yours lady, who saw the states the other morning, wondered playtings would have upon their minds when grows.
