A Proposed Boslevard.
Some of the properly owners on Sixth avenue are agitating the improvement of that street to the river, thus making it a fine beulevard or drive. They claim that as Fifth avenue is occupied by inotor tracks, and as Broadway is only five blocks distant and has a motor line, and a line is contemplated up Ninth avenue, that Sixth avenue will not be used for street car traffic. Many of the best residences of the city are located on this street, and quite a number of new and costly residences are contemplated. The street is graded to the Northwestern tracks and a fine bridge spans the creek. The street is paved to Ninta, and grading could be done toward the river during the winter months, so that by the time spring strives the filling would be actiled and the street could be paved. Property owners will be asked to set out shade trees, and a polition will soon be circulated asking that the improvements be made.

The Queer Stamp Put Upon the Gift of a Wealthy Hoos er.

"One of the funniest things that I have heard for a long time happened a few weeks ago," said a westerner to a New York Evening Sun reporter. "Out in Indiann one of the 'pillars of society' is a wealthy and generous old soul with an immense fortune—the result of the invention of an ingenious triangular bit of from designed for the noses of hogs and called a hog ringer. Now, it happened that the pratty daughter of his pastor was about to be married and surely a bride may indulge in a little ladylike wonder as to such things speculation was rife in the pastor's family as to what the good 'nillar' would send as a gift. Ou the morning of the wedding day there came to the house a great box bearing the card of the wealthy inventor.

"With pleased anticipation it was opened. It contained a dinner service of solid silver, exquisite in design and finish. With little cries of rapture, the bride took out niece after piece and placed them side by side. Then a queer little mark, where the monogram usually is, caught her attention; she bent over it, and what do you think? Exactly in the most conspicuous place on each piece the dear old donor, with happy inspiration, had had his hog ringer on graved.

The Seat of Pain and Pleasure.
The nervous system, often suffers a diministration of vigor, and causes mental annoyance, and even positive disturbance, without discusse in the sensorium itself. It acts as a mere reflector, in many cases, of inaction in the stomach, and consequently of incomplete assimilation of the food by the bood. This or curse weakens it, in common with the reat of the tissues, and renders it less able to bear without authering as ordinary strain that would make no dimpression upon strong nerves. To supply a deficit of strength, and remdry a superpensativeness in the nerves incident to a lack of vigor, Hostetter's stomach bitters is far better adapted than sure nervine or simple tonic, since the off-suring of its use, complete digestion, is the vigorus and early parent of nerve force and opicitied. Malarial attacks, chorumatian, bowel, liver and kidney complaints succumb to the bitters.

Fverything Conflicting.

San Francisso Chronicle: A cortain superior judge of one the southern counties is a good man, but not overlearned in the law. He tried a case some time since and the defeated party appealed to the supreme court. In an opinion of more than ordinary causticity Judge Works set aside his judgment on the ground that the findings, that is the statement signed by the judge setting forth the facts found by him to be true, were inconsistent and conflicting. When the southern judge was told of the result he naively romarked:

"Well, I'd like to know how I could help that. Why, the testimony was conflicting."

GIVE THE ACTORS A CHANCE.

The Resistless Double - Barreled Tengue-Karaches at the Theater.

The woman who sits in front of you at the theater, having on her head a double-decked, three-masted hat, terror enough she may be, isn't a circumstance to the woman who sits bohind you, having in her head a double-barreled, hair-spring, loog-range tongue, which she uses with an energy and continuance that make it a matter of trying difficulty, if not an absolute impossibility, for you to enjoy the scene before you, says the Boston Globe.

Perchance my lady hus seen the play before and is now bringing some friend to enjoy it, in which case she keeps up a continual fire of criticism and explanations of scenes present, and such an elaborate prophecy and disclosure of scenes and events to come that you are entirely deprived of any imacent pleasure you might take in thinking out for yourself the possibilities of the plot or idly watching its growth and development according to its own laws of dramatic sequence.

Her ear-penetrating remarks run something after this fashion: "That's Rodney; he's really the duke's son, though no one knows it. He was lost when a boy and brought up by the old shoemaker. You see Harold and Rodney both leve feva, but her father thinks Rodney is poor and wants her to marry Harold. She does marry Rodney, though. Now this seeme is fine. Her father comes in and finds them together and torns Rodney out. Eva follows him, etc., etc., 'until you wish, with anything but a plous ardor, that since she knows so much about the piay and is firmly determined to give her information to the public, she would hire a theater all to herself for that purpose instead of trying to start an opposition one under the same roof.

A joke comes usexpectedly, and, taking her unawares, she fails to catch it. And the leagh that follows her voice is heard saying excitedly: "What did he say? I didn't get it," and her long-suffering secort pleasantly retells it, with which eslivening repetition you are perforce entertained at the expense of whatever is being said on the stage. If a quotation from some familiar poem occurs, then she is happy, and displays her knowledge of poetry and her ignorance of good taste by quoting it just ahead of the actor, destroying all the pootic effect and reversing the law of sound by placing the echo before the voice in a way that is simply maddening to everybody seems to be talking at once, and you are straining your powers of hearing to the utmost when she exclaims: "O, dear! I can't understand what they say. I wish they wouldn't talk so awfully fast!"

LIGHT OF THE RAIL.

The Method of Supplying Gas to Passager Coaches.

The method of refurnishing railroad cars with gas is one of the most intercating operations to be seen in the great railroad shed in the old denot at Thirty-second and Market streets, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. When a draft of empty cars is run on one of the sidings a number of gas men board the cars and examine the small pressure meter is the lavatories of each car. If less than eighty cubic feet is registored the tanks need replenishing, and long rubber hoses are attached to a three-way cock at one end of the tank. Gas under great pressure is forced through this direct from a main to the tanks. It requires but few minutes for enough gas to be forced into the supply tanks to fornish illumination for about thirty-six hours.

strains illumination for about thirty-six hours.

By a clever piece of mechanism is the meter the light would be immediately extinguished if there should be any accident to the train. It only requires a fraction of time and force of men necessary to refurnish the old-fashioned lamps, which have so often proved to be the fatal causes of holocausts, the deadly companion of many railroad wrecks.
