HOSPILITY TO FEDERAL COURTS. The statement of the attorney general of the United States that in portions of the country there has been shown such hostility to the federal courts and officers as to seriously interfere with the administration of justice, presents a matter of the very gravest importance.

But it must not be supposed that hostility to the United States courts and United States officers is confined to election matters. On the contrary, the records of the department of justice show that in some districts the civil proceedings of those courts and criminal prosecutions wholly disconnected with the elective franchise cannot proceed, because the issue of necessary witnesses is in such danger that it would be simply impossible to enforce their attendance and the giving of their testimony.

Certainly this is a matter which should deeply interest every citizen who desires the conservation of law and the constitutional exercise of the national authority. Great as is the wrong involved in depriving citizens of their political rights, it is not a more serious matter than that of interfering with and defeating the administration of justice in the federal courts, and the toleration of such interference anywhere, under whatever circumstances, is to invite the growth of a more formidable danger to the perpetuity of our institutions than could arise from any other cause.

It cannot be necessary to indicate in what portion of the country the outrages noted by the attorney general have occurred, but no matter where the spirit of hostility to federal courts and officers of justice exists, and makes itself felt in a way to contravene the enforcement of the laws and defeat justice, it is the obvious duty of the government, and absolutely necessary to the maintenance of a general public respect for the laws, to crush out such hostility by the use of the command of every power at the command of the government. Whatever diversity of opinion there may be as to the wisdom and expediency of a federal election law to protect all cities in the free choice of their representatives there will be none regarding the overshadowing necessity of guarding the national courts and those acting under their authority and subject to their commands that the administration of justice shall everywhere and at all times be free from all check or obstruction.

THE HOUSE COMMITTEES. There is no more difficult or important task devolved on the speaker of the house of representatives than that of making up the standing committees. The claims of individuals, the welfare of party and of politics, the interests of legislation, the precedents, all have to be taken into consideration. Most speakers have found this task both laborious and embarrassing, and it has sometimes happened that a month or more has been consumed in completing it, as was the case with Mr. Carlisle in appointing the committees of the fiftieth congress. Speaker Reed has accomplished the most important part of this work with exceptional promptness, the leading committees being already announced. The selections for the heads of those committees are the gentlemen whose appointments had been expected.

Mr. McKinley of Ohio is chairman of the ways and means committee, with Mr. Burrows of Michigan in second place, and chosen gentlemen will have among their democratic associates Mr. Carlisle of Kentucky and Mr. Mills of Texas. The republican membership of the ways and means committee is not re-arranging for a tariff bill that will revise the existing schedule in the direction of lower duties and an enlarged free list to the extent desired by a large portion of the republican party, and justified by present conditions. The attitude of Mr. McKinley, who will be the controlling spirit among the republican members of the committee, is well known to be that of pronounced opposition to any considerable reductions in tariff duties. It was understood that he did not approve of many of the changes reducing duties in the senate bill of the last congress, and his tariff speeches in Ohio during the late campaign showed that he was not in sympathy with the reform sentiment in his own party. He is distinctively the champion, and perhaps the ablest in the country, of the high protective policy. It is possible, however, that the position of the administration regarding the tariff, as well as of a large body of republicans in New England and the west, may lead Mr. McKinley to somewhat modify his views, and to agree to such a revision of the tariff as will prune it of such duties as are no longer necessary to the protection of domestic industries, but serve only to enable manufacturers to exact an unwarrantable and unjust tribute from the people.

Mr. Cannon of Illinois is chairman of the committee on appropriations, a position of honor and responsibility which that gentleman will undoubtedly fill with great ability. While Mr. Randall was at the head of this committee he exercised a greater power over the course of legislation, at particular junctures, than any other one man in the house, and so objectionable did his tactics become to his own party that an effort was made at the opening of the fiftieth congress, by changing the rules, to greatly reduce his power to interfere with the course of legislation. There will probably be no occasion for the republicans to find a like fault with Mr. Cannon, but the country may safely expect of him a vigilant and judicious guardianship of the public treasury. Mr. Henderson of Iowa is a member of this committee, and will take proper care of western interests which it may be called upon to consider. Mr. Kelley of Pennsylvania, the "father of the house," is given a merited recognition as chairman of the committee on manufactures, a position doubtless entirely responsible to him as not being especially arduous, and yet of dignity and importance.

Mr. Reed has followed precedent in providing for his competitors in the speakership contest, and the result will be very generally approved by republicans. THE STATE FAIR. The state board of agriculture, at its annual meeting January 21, will decide where the state fair shall be held for the ensuing five years. There promises to be six competitors, Omaha, Lincoln, Hastings, Kearney, Grand Island and Columbus. Lincoln has good grounds and buildings, and her competitors for the fair must be prepared to guarantee equally favorable facilities and accommodations. This would involve an expenditure of not less than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Omaha should be able to readily raise this sum, and more if necessary, in order to secure the great advantage that would be derived from having the fair here. It ought to be obvious to our business men that such an annual attraction to the whole people of Nebraska and to many of those of contiguous states would most certainly assure a handsome return on an expenditure of one hundred and fifty or two hundred thousand dollars. Nothing draws so largely as a state fair, and the great majority of those who attend it unite business with pleasure. If Omaha seriously desires to secure this great attraction on prompt action is necessary. There is but little more than a month for the work of securing subscriptions, and while that ought to be time enough, if our business men take a proper and practical interest in the matter, none of it should be wasted. Committees of the Douglas county agricultural society, the Omaha fair association, and the board of trade presented the matter to a meeting of the board last night. It was decided to make a bid of two hundred thousand dollars to secure the fair. It is not doubted that there is a strong sentiment throughout the state favorable to Omaha, and if this city manifests a liberal spirit its chances of securing the fair should be first rate. But the competition to overcome is formidable, and Omaha can succeed only by supporting her superior claims, as the metropolis of the state, with a generous financial backing promptly provided.

STAY AT HOME. The Seattle correspondent of THE BEE condenses a volume of truth in the words, "Nebraskans, stay at home." The new state of Washington possesses a variety of advantages for the home seeker, as well as opportunities for the speculator, but every branch of business, every avenue of trade and labor is crowded by the multitudes gathered there by land and town lot boomers during the last two years. Wages are lower than in Nebraska, rents high and the cost of living greater. A map with a home and a position in Nebraska exchanges a permanency for an uncertainty and sacrifices five years of toil by going to the northwest. The talk of the great value of the timber land in Washington is all bush. A farm in Nebraska is worth a dozen timber claims in that country. All land adjacent to railroads is taken up, so that the land hunter must plunge into the wilderness and pay a stiff price, in most cases exceeding the cost of improved farm land in Nebraska. Without a railroad and a sawmill the timber is worthless. Even with these facilities the profit is not great. In most cases the timber must be cut down and destroyed and the stumps uprooted, involving years of labor, and no little expense. The mineral and agricultural wealth is unquestionably great, but it is the worst of folly to exchange a farm or town lot in Nebraska for the floating prospect of a competency in Washington.

same on the payroll without the authority of the city council. Broatch thinks God in one breath that Lintinger is not elected mayor, and shows his favoritism in another by confessing that he voted the straight republican ticket and forced his consent to do likewise. Is that the act of an honest man? Does he not by his acts prove himself a liar and double-dealer? While he openly professes allegiance to the republican ticket, he had secretly scattered his hirelings over the city to work and vote against himself and his coachman!

Mr. Broatch refers to private matters that have no bearing on the question. THE BEE might if so disposed furnish a few chapters on his connection with certain disorderly houses; but let that pass. We propose to hold up Broatch to the scorn of honest men on his record as an official, and his duplicity as a politician. Fallover and falsehood and conceit cannot alter the stubborn fact that he and his gang outraged the ballot box in an attempt to continue himself in power, and after being squarely beaten in the convention, notwithstanding efforts to bribe delegates, he conspired with the leaders of the "Solid Twenty-eight" to defeat the men they had publicly pledged themselves to support. They accepted democratic money to betray the republican party. With treachery on their lips and malice in their hearts, they accepted Mr. Lintinger's hospitality, while hours before they had perfected their plans to slaughter him at the polls.

THE STATE FAIR. The state board of agriculture, at its annual meeting January 21, will decide where the state fair shall be held for the ensuing five years. There promises to be six competitors, Omaha, Lincoln, Hastings, Kearney, Grand Island and Columbus. JUDGE ANDERSON of Utah, who recently decided that a mormon alien had no rights which courts were bound to respect, is a democrat of the low vintage. This fact renders the decision all the more startling as it affects a large number of democratic votes and conflicts with the cardinal principle that guilt must be established before conviction.

THE OPPONENTS of Gladstone frequently assert that the "grand old man" is in his dotage and this seems to be the strongest argument they can bring against the statesman. But from the way he has been "hustling around" recently it is evident that he never has his dotage with him.
