-A snow ball whized through the air, and away over the fence sailed the pro-fessor's hat, battered and dishonored.

fessor's hat, battered and dishonored.

A ripple of girlish laughter floated up from someone behind him, and, looking sround angrily, the professor caught a glimpse of a pair of dark, regulsh eyes, peeping at him out of a pretty hood, which did not hide the saucy face of the maiden who had thrown the ball.

She watched the professor as he climbed over the fonce, regained his distingured tile, and tried rather ranfully to smooth its battered sides; then she scampered toward the school house.

Joel Shorwood had just emerged from the university at W— with considerable honor and the degree of good opinion most men of his age entertain for themselves. He really was entitled for themselves. He really was entitled to a great deal of credit for the courage and steadfastness of purpose with which the had tailed to make his way through he tedious university course. He had done it alone and at the same time managed to help in keeping his widowed mother in keeping what had proved to mother in keeping what had proved to be a very gaunt and persistent wolf from the door. But the world, as is its costom, had been somewhat slow in recognizing his genius; so that when the winter term of school at Weston was offered to him he was only too glad to accept it, hoping that in the menatime something better would come to him. He picked up his hat with some sense of disgrace and strode to the school house.

He had found Nan a disturbing element in his little dominion. Not that she meant to do anything wrong, but she had too much mischief in her nature not to be at the bottom of many a project which brought the new teacher into Alsrepute. She never pretended Night was dropping down over the valley. The storm king was abroad in all its fory. The night gave promise of being a terrible one.

Joel's heart reproved him for not letting the children go sooner when he opened the door and heard the sullen roar which came from the gorge.
He listened sharply.
Youder came a man on horseback, riding paoidly.
What was the matter?

Youder came a man on horseback, rid ing rapidly.

What was the matter?

The cost of waters amote his ears. The truth flashed over him.

The lee-gorge had given way.
The young man's face grew pale as he drew the children back into the house and shut the door. He could not let them go now. It was too late.

A few minutes more and a wild current of water swept around the building, cutting off all hope of escape on toot. It was now plain that they were hemmed in.

The horseman waved his hand toward them and then wheeled away to seek other means of reaching the school house. It was a trying place for the young teacher, and some courage was required to look calmy into the faces of the awe-stricken children and try to quiet them.

But in this he had a helper in Nac.

of the awe-stricken children and try to quiet them.

But in this he had a helper in Nan. The girl's face showed nothing of the terror Joel expected to see in her. The woman seemed to have suddenly come instead of the relifeting girl. She was here, there, everywhere, cheering the younger ones in a most motherly way.

How this crisis had transformed her. Joel noticed more than ever now what a strong face she had. He had always thought her pretty, now a look had come upon her features which indicated the spirt whick makes women heroic. She had become a calm, self-po-seesed woman. While Joel was thinking of this, through the dusk came a beat manned by two farmers. Its slowly pushed its way through the current, lighting hard against wind, ice and drifting wood; but it was long before the rescuers reached the imperilled house. Joel could no longer open the door without latting in an ocean. They rivuleis were spreading over the floor. The only way to get the children rate the boat was through as open window.

Not more than half the number were able to get into the boat. The rest must wait.

"Hada't you better get in now, Mr. Professor?" asked one of the men when the boat was ranky to push off for the land.

"Not so long as there is anyone else to Zeb," was load's firm reaches.

FROM MAX MEYER & BRO.

The auction sale which is now in progress at our store has caused so many inquiries that we take this method to answer the inquiries and inform the public at the same time. The object of the saleis not, as some have asserted, to get rid of our old stock for the best of reasons, we have none. Nor is it a holiday scheme to get the trade—but it is as advertised, to close the retail depart-ment of our jewelry business which we have been desirous of doing for many months, and having failed to find a customer to purchase the stock entire, and to put the stock into our wholesale department not being feasible, we have determined upon an auction sale of our entire stock of dia-monds, fancy goods, art goods, and all. Without limit or reserve of one single article. We invite all to attend these sales, which will be held daily for the next thirty days (if not disposed of before) and see if this statement is not a fact.
