The last Sunday of 1889 made itself felt in the Buffs. The high wind of Saturday night increased until, by sunrise Sunday morning, it was blowing a gale. The mer-cury continued to drop until it reached a point 14° above zero, where it rested for several hours, apparently convinced that it was the proper place for the time of year. Indeed, it was very respectable winter weather during the outire day, the mercury weather during the cutire day, the moreury at no time registering more than 20° above zero. The wind blow flercely until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when it infied coa-siderably, and the remainder of the day was comparatively confortable. Until after the wind went down there was very little travel, and the streets were de-serted. orosing.

It was really the first winter's day experienced this season, and for this reason the cold was felt more, together with the fact that the change on Saturday night was such a decided one. It caused the coal mon and clothing merchants to roam about with a self-satisfied air, while a yard-wide smile illuminated their countenances. Few others saw anything particularly funny about it, but as nearly a whole month of winter had been allowed to slip by without even a sunoison of a bigsard or "norther," there was little disposition to kick.

kindling the Political Fire.

Although the spring election is yet two months distant, the political workers are getting their wires in readiness to pull at the city convention, and it is an undisputed fact that the spring campaign of 1890 will be a lively one. The indications are that the principal battle will be fought in the convention, as there are several candidates and all have a strong following. The offices to be filled at the next election are mayor, marshal, city solicitor, city engineer, auditor, treasurer, police judge, superintendent, francisco, treasurer, police judge, superintendent of markets, two members of the school beard and five aldermen. The aldermen to be elected are from the First, Second, Fifth and Sixth wards, and one alderman-at-large. As there will be quite a fight for several of the offices, the campaign will be possessed of unusual interest.

For the office of mayor and the accompanying $1,50 a year there are numerous aspirants, among them being S. B. Wadsworth, Dr. D. Macrae, dudge W. C. James and P. Lacy. It is understood that Mayor Robrer will not seen re-decition, but as soon as his term of office expires will devote his time and energies to compel the city to evacuate that portion of Sixteenth avenue, between Man and Third streets, that is claimed by Mrs. Robrer as her personal property. The benefit is expressed by politicians of both city is sufficiently in the control of the correlation of the control of the cardidate. Is selected to make the rais. Mr. Lacy is the president of the council, and hold over for another vear, but it is understood that he could hardly muster up the couract to say no if the mayoratty was offered hun. The indications are that it will narrow down to a fight between Waitsworth and Macrae, with Lacy as a dark horse in the background archives an archive the same boat as far as office is concerned, the term of neither expiring until 1891.

It is a matter of speculation who will succeed J. P. Weaver as adderman-a-large. He declares that he has had enough of it; in fact, that he cannot afford to remain in the council as he is a contractor and his office prevents his hidding on any city work. Likewise, it is difficult to hazard a guess as to who will be sent in from either of the new wards, the Fifth and Sixth. They will not become separate wards until the let of February, and the available timber in each as as much a mystery as is their political complexion.

PHOF. ADLER ON DIVORCE.

The Ever Intercating Subject Presented in a New Light.

It was to make certain investigations into the statistics of divorce which have just been compiled by the department of their of the statistics of divorce which have just been compiled by the department of their of the statistics of divorce which have just been compiled by the department of the property of all kinds, and all other of the statistics of divorce which have just been compiled by the department of the country The case against School Teacher Sylvester, which was heard by Justice Hendricks some startling presentation of figures made in Colonel Carroll E. Wright's report has interested Professor Adler greatly, and he speaks in the warmest terms of the character and value of the work accomplished.

and he to a Post reporter, "and may not be absolutely accurate it my statement of the figures. But there is food for thought in the report. America has a most unevisible reputation at home and abroad on account of the number of divorces which are granted. Within the last twenty years 325,000 divorces have been granted in America. What does it mean? In all Europe, with many times the population, the divorces have been granted in America. What does it mean? In all Europe, with many times the population, the divorces have been granted in America. The laws are not aggregated one-tenth that number in the same period. Are we more insumeral than Europeans? Is the marr age the looser? Are the laws more lax? What are the reasons? These are the questions which are being asked.

"Here are a few of the deductions which I make. The laws are no more lax in this country than in Europea. In the new states of the west, particularly in Illinoia, the great divorce state, the laws are as strict if not more so, than in Austria, for instance, where divorces are quite rare. The same is true all over the country. Nor is there any laxity in the execution of the laws. Over 420,000 applications for divorce were entered in twenty years, yet 30 per cent, were rejected. Does this look like laxity? Not stall.

"What next? About 75 per cent of all divorces have been granted to women. That proves that American women are not offenders to a marked extent. There were no divorces in France before the revolution, but morality in France was at a low obb. On the contrary, the large number of divorces in American women are extremely sensitive of violations of the marringe vow. They will not endure personal violence, yet wife benting was permissible under the English common law, and among the lower classes of Great Britinn is a very common offense, taken in a matter of course way.

"By far the greater number of divorces from any one cause have been for desertion, mainly on the part of the husband. These and up the lower has been a city. We are becoming viduals. It is the individual who is the fragmentary particle of the state. His rights are subordinate to the rights of all. If he has innihenable duties. When this conception of the position of the individual obtains and is generally accepted social reforms now out of reach will be at band."

"THE BLOOMER COSTUME."

Et zabeih Cady Stanton First Word

Elexabeth Cady Stanton First Wore and Introduced it.

The following letter from Mrs. Amelia Bloomer, whose name became world-famous years ago in connection with what was known as the "Bloomer costume," is printed in the January Ladies' Home Journal, and has a keen degree of interest in that Mrs. Bloomer deales the credit of introducing the costume in America. This letter, recently written, is now produced in print for the first time:

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia.—My Dear Sir. I hardly know how to write about the costume associated with my name. But I was not its inventor or originator as is so generally believed.

In March, 1851, Elizabeth Smith Miller, daughter of Hon. Gerritt Smith of Peterboro, N. Y., visited her cousin, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, at Sancea Falls, N. Y., which was then my home and where I was publishing "The Lily,' and where Mrs. Stanton also resided. Mrs. Miller came to us in a short skirt and full Turkush trousers, a style of dress she had been warning some two months.

and lun dress she had been wearing months.

The matter of woman's dress having been just previously discussed in "The been just previously discussed in "The been just previously discussed in "The

had not the strongth of principle to withstand the criffichm, and so returned to their dragging skirts. For myself, I wore the short drass and no others, at home and everywhere, for six or seven years, long stire Mrs. Stanton, Lucy Stone, and others had abandoned it. Lucy Stone were the dress several years, traveled and Jectured in it, and was married in it? think. None of us ever icctured on the dress question, or in any way introduced it into our lectures. We only wore it because we found it comfortable, convenient, safe and tidy—with no, thought of introducing a fashion, but with the wish that every woman would throw off the burden of clothes that was dragging her life out.

This dress question has been of secondary importance with me, and it is not for it that I wish to be remembered. As you will see from what I have written above, a wrong impression prevails in regard to my part in that matter. I was not its originator. I adopted the style and made it known to the public. The press did the rest.

I am not lecturing at all these last few years. A throat difficulty and my seventy years have compelled me to retire from active participation in works for the nivancement of woman. Respectfully yours.

Gladstone's Love for Rending.

When Mr. Gladstone tires of politics he turns to literature, and no man in the three lingdoms has a wider range of books to select from, for, just at present, or rather since the day that he reviewed Mrs. Humphrey Ward's "Robert Elsmere," and gave that much discussed book an impotus that it would not have obtained otherwise, authors, young and old, and publishers, good and bad, have flooded the "Grand Old Man" with literature of all kinds, writes Edward W. Bok in the Ladies' Home Journal. It is hardly necessary to point out the value of the review that Mr. Gladstone gave Mrs. Ward's book, from a commercial point of view. A great many people in England still insist that it is a vastly over-rated book, and that if it had not been for the attention which Mr. Gladstone paid it, it would have run its slow length of a few thousand copies, and died as many better or worse books do every twelvemonth. Be that as it may, it is sufficient for Mr. Gladstone to lend his name to any literary publication to give it prominence that it could not otherwise obtain, and h is library table is crowded with books on religion, on state-craft, philosophy and romance, sont by authors and publishers.

Mr. Gladstone is, in every respect, a great reader. He spends more time now in reading than he flid twenty-five years ago. Anything and everything that comes to him is great to his mill. He doesn't mind wading through chapter after chapter life he only flushs a kennel of truth or a nugget of pare gold at the cod. He is particularly fond of books of travel and polities, and there is no country that interests hims on much as America, its neople and its politicans. A great deal of his reading is done as a matter, of duty, or work, if you please, and after he has finished that and is so thoroughy tired out that most men who take to the woods or to a sick room, the great statesman turns to his Latin or Greak for repose. If there is one subject dear to his heart, after polities and statecraft, it is religion. He has no favorife authors; he linds page or marks it to be clipped by his daughter, Miss Helen Giadstone, or his wife, or one of his secretaries, and, strange to say, he can turn to it years afterwards at a moment's notice. He has a wonderful memory, too, and knows a great deal more of Americas men of letters than most people would suppose. He is an intense admirer of James Russell Lowell and Brot Harte. He has a magnificent library of exceeding value, and is constantly adding to it. He is one of the few great men of this world who is not ashamed to be seen alone to the street, and he often spends an hour or so in some old bookseller's shop on the Strand or in Corabill. He is the owner of many rare and valuable works, and whenever there is an important book sale, either his sen Horbert, or one of the secretaries, is present to bid in any valuable or rare volume that may be offered. He has spent a fortune on his library, and when annoyed by the cares of political life, always finds reat and contentment there.

The Allahabad papers describe a curious search for treasure believed to be buried in the Alford park, says the Janan Mail. It seems that some years before the mutiny the then king of Delhi resigned his appointment and brought his family and werldly possessions to Aliahabad, where he built a large house and underground chamber to keep his jewels and treasure. This latter is said to have included a lask of gold mohurs, of the kind now valued at 25 tupes each. Shortly before the mutiny he died, and, during the When order was restored by order of barracks was constructed by order of hard the still of barracks was constructed by order of hard the was prought of the underground chamber was forgotten by all except some relatives who, on trying to reach it on one occasion, were so stung by hornets which they had distorbed that it was taken as a sign that it was God's will that the barracks were also demolished und the present park laid out.

Heccally the existence of the treasure was brought to the attention of Cantain Hamilton, an old resident of Allahabad, who had helped to prepare the site for the barracks. He obtained as much information as could be got from the existing relatives and obtained from the collector permission to dig and a police escort. The ideal fuel is gas. It gives the greatest degree of heat, is always inde-control and is absolutely without dust and there can be no accidents from its use. Scientific investigations have shown that food cooked by it retains 20 per cent-more of its nutritive properties than if cooked in the old way. You never ste a good steak unless you have tried one cooked by gas. The Council Bluffs Gas and Electric Light company have made it desirable in point of economy to use gas for cooking and heating.
