The Four Hand Game with Partners
Now Having a Great Run.
Numerous inquiries have reached The Bus about the game of cards called "high five," which had its origin in Nobrasica, and at the Hampton house, Holdredge. The following rules, propared by one who has been there, are vouched for as cerrect:

1. Neinber of Cards—Use full pack of cards without the joke.

2. Value of Cards in Counting—There are fourteen points to be counted in each deal—

est—viz. Ace, king, queen, jack, ten-spot, nine-spot, eight-spot, seven-spot siz-spot, five-spot, four-spot, three-spot, two-spot. The lowest trump card outranis the lighest lay cards, and the flye-spot of trump suit outranis the other five-spot of the same outrants the other Reespot of the same color. Cards of No Value—The lay cards are of no value; therefore it is better to have small lay cards than large ones; they are only played in order to change the lead or to give the partner a chance to trump with a dive-spot, or when the player has no trump. (See i.e., 12).

5. Desline—Ladles cut for deal in first rame (low deals; ane lowest in cutting), after which deal in roution to left. After first game the first deal is accorded to the lady who last comes t the table. Deal nine cards to each player, three at a time.

6. Naming Trump—The trump is named by the highest buider, the player at the left of the dealer bidding in first (see Note 1) and the others bidding in their tora if they wish to raise the bid. The suit had upon must not be maned by anyone until it is distinctly understood who bids highest; then the highest odder names the trump. Each player has but one bud, which opportunity he forfeits if he passes.

7. Number of Trumps—There are fourteen.

bioder names the traint. Each player has but one but, which opportunity he forficia if he passes.

7. Number of Trumps—There are fourteen trumps in the pack, counting the second five-spot of the same color.

8. Discarding and Drawing—After the nine cards apiece have been dealt and the trump is named each player discards from his hard, faces upward, all except trump cards, and calls upon the dealer for a sufficient number from the dock to make up a hand of six cards, which are dealt in order. If the dock runs out before all are supplied, make up the definition of the sufficient from those discarded. He had been dealer for the dealth order, if a player discards a trumb, part but six. If a player discards a trumb, part by mixture, may player discards a trumb, and by mixture, may player discarding another in its place. But if trumps have been discarded because of an overflowing hand they cannot be thus captured, but must remain discarded. If a counting trump is discarded by mistake and not discovered until the cards are all played it counts to the side analysis of the counts to the side analysis the Dack—After the discarding and drawing explained in the preceding section, if any cards remain in the deck the desice has the privilege of examining them and oxchanging any cards in his hand for any trainps which he may find.

19. Leading—All being mow ready to play and cach mayer having aix cards, the highest budder and namer of the trump leads. (See Note 2)

bluder and namer of the trump leads. (See Note 2.)

11. Setting Back—The side naming the trump must make as many points as they have bid or be set back that number; even if they have no points so their score they are still set back the full number and put "in the hole."

12. Counting—The side naming the trump count as many points as they make, provided they make as many or more than their bid. The other side always count all they make as many or more than their bid.

13. Following Suit-When trump is les make.

13. Following Suit—When trump is led you must foliow suit if you have it. If you have not remain you have not remain you have not remain you have not remain you will throw up your hand, unless your average arries failed to notice it. When a lay card is led follows and it is better to held on the through a case it is better to held on the through the case it is better to held on the follows and if you have it noless you prefer to follow and if you have it noless you prefer to follow and if you have it noless you prefer to follow and if you have it noless you prefer to make the privilege of trumping. (See Note 3.)

13. Game—Twonty one points constitute a game at the head table. (See Note 4.)

16. Playing Out a Hand—At the head table they should always finish a hand which is commenced before either side is twenty-one. Then the side having most points, it wenty-one or more, wins the game and taps the bell.

17. All Games Stop—At the tap of the bell they most points, counting all points made up to that moment, wins the game and moves up to the not table. In case of a tie score ladies cut and low wins. Each game begins as well as ends at the signal of the bell.

18. Changing Partners—Change partners sach game and at every table, including the first. The winning couple a sach table move up to the next herber table, except in the case of the head table. Where the winning couple remain and the losing couple move gove to foot table.

nest. The winning couple at each table move up to the next history table, except in the case of the head table, where the winning couple at each table move up to the next history table, except in the case of the head table, where the winning couple remain and the losing couple of the head table, where the winning couple of the head table, where the couple and the losing couple of the head table where the couple and to gentlemen having most games and the game to decide it. In case four persons are tied they draw cuts for partners and play another game to decide.

Note 1—After arranging your cards you calculate how many points you can probably make with your best suit, with the aid of your partners, and the chance you both have of drawing more cards of that suit, and you bid accordingly, coaring in mind section it. Holding an are with one or two cards to back it would justify a bid of six and if the backing cards are high you make suite to be understood to be compared to the suite of more. Holding always to have a possible in your brump on. If you have a poor hand and suspect that your adversary is assistent when it is sometimes well to hid more than your hand justifies so as to lead your adversary to raise the bid and thus take greater risks.

Note 2—The first lead is usually the acc of trumps (but this, of course, depends upon the hands), and in the partners turn to play he should play a divesport if he has one, and thus save it to their side.

Note 3—If a lay card its led the proper play for the third hand is to trump inger hand from trumping with a five-spot. But if the flowagots have been played, or the third hand holds them or known the fourth hand from trumping and and hands and the propers the hand halds them or known the fourth hand from trumping with a five poor had one fourth hand from the partne

The Bishop's Wit Saved Him.

A story showing the shrewdness and ready wit of the Scotehman is told of a well known Scoteh bishop who was content to mass his life in single blessedness. White he held a certain see he was, of course, a subject of considerable interest to the aumarried indies of the neighborhood. One day he received a visit from one of them who had reached the age of desperation. Her manner was solemn, though somewhat embarrassed. The good hishop spoke with his usual kindness and encouraged her to be communicative. By and by he drew from her that she had had a very strange "dream, or rather, as she thought, a revelation from heaven.

On further questioning she confessed that it had been intimated to her that she was to be united in marriage to the bishop. One may imagine what a start his gave to the quiet scholar, who had

Chicago Tribune: A certain young Chicago lawyer—it is just as well not to give his name—was trying a case in a justice's court a few years ago. He was deeply interested in the case and most anxious to win it, so he pat in a good deal of time holoting up decisions bearing on the point, and when he made his speech cited case after case. He made the strongest speech he knew how to make, and the justice listened to it all intently.

When the young lawyer had finished, the patter leaned back in his chair and appeared to be considering the matter,—"We ought to win this," said the lawyer to his client, "but I'm a little afraid."
