BANKER MORGAN'S POWER.

BANKER MORGAN'S POWER. Tremendous influence of the Succession of the Yandrebits. The position of J. Perponet Morgan in Wall street is well set out in an in-terview recently held with one of the "atreet" magnites. "Whom do you regard as the intellectual head of Wall street this days?" "J. Pierpont Morgan. There is very little doubt of his domination; other men out with a penkulfe, he reaps with a scythe. His operations are all of an octensive character, in the nature of the biggest banking operations of Europe. He is the son of a main almost equally eminent in financial matters and the younger man was therefore hora, like the son of Columbus, sith an ad-miral's commission, in finance. Most men have to commence at the retail counter and slowly work their way in banking operations, but Piermont Morgan, like the jualer generations of the Rothschilds, was raised at the wholesale counter." "What is his main interest in this country?"

"Whele so the main interest in this country?" "Well, you might consider him the New York Central railroad of the present period. Ever since William H. Yanderbilt sold that great block of stock in the Central property, which was taken by Pierpout Morgan and marketed in London, he has rouresented the holders of that property and incidentality the property itself. The Vanderbilt interest is extensive, reaching over New England, New York, Monrad, the coal regions of Pennsylvania and the coalers in knows to Chicago, the public thicks of the vanderbilt interest is extensive, reaching over New England, New York, Monrad, the coal regions of Pennsylvania and the castern lakes to Chicago, the porthwest and of late to the south, for they are supposed to be behind the Ingula combination in Indiana, Ohio and Virgina. "The public thinks of the Vanderbilt family first," the speaker added. "but down in Wall Atreest is in London and on the down whall here is in London and on the down the the Drexels in America and the reatement Morgan can touch the ownership of that property at every point, it responds to him like a network of plegraph wires to the fingers of an operator."
